We Respectfully Dedicate
This Volume

The
1925 Kentuckian

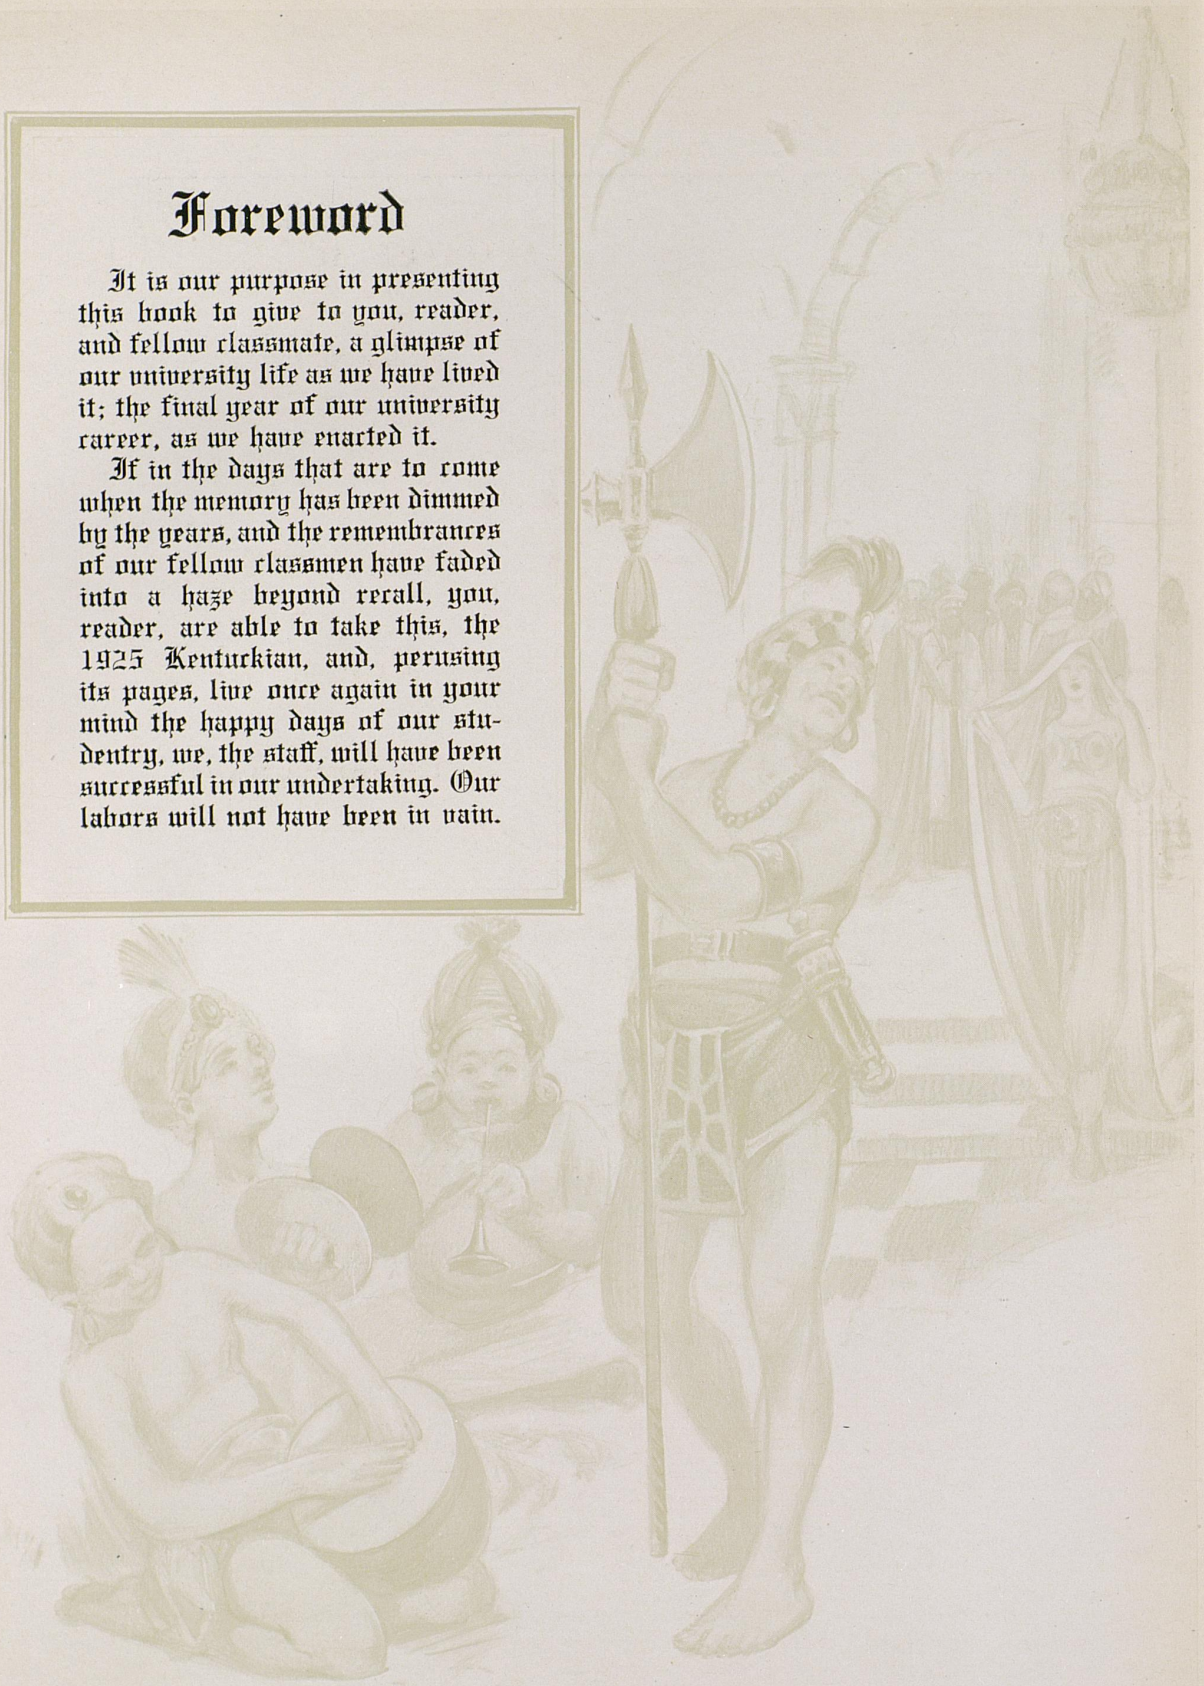

Foreword

It is our purpose in presenting this book to give to you, reader, and fellow classmate, a glimpse of our university life as we have lived it; the final year of our university career, as we have enacted it.

If in the days that are to come when the memory has been dimmed by the years, and the remembrances of our fellow classmen have faded into a haze beyond recall, you, reader, are able to take this, the 1925 Kentuckian, and, perusing its pages, live once again in your mind the happy days of our studentry, we, the staff, will have been successful in our undertaking. Our labors will not have been in vain.

The Stadium

SWIFTLY, almost silently, there arose during the singeing summer of 1924, on the traditional Stoll Field, a monument to the valor of the Wildcats and the spirit of Kentucky. A stadium, giant-like and speaking the spirit of the Wildcats, was the monument, and it was made possible through the efforts of a small band of alumni who first conceived the plan of the erecting of the prettiest and best structure of its kind in the South.

Late in April a small band of men met in the office of the president of the university and decided to let the bids for the erection of the stadium. The main contract was let to Louis des Cognets Company, of Lexington, and work was begun on May 10. Previous to the letting of the contract a stadium building committee composed of J. I. Lyle, chairman; Professor D. V. Terrill, Frank Daugherty, A. V. Lester and J. White Guyn, had labored faithfully, sparing no time and thought in working out every possible detail of this massive structure.

Professor D. V. Terrill designed the stadium and handled the construction as resident engineer in full charge. Miss Katherine Cleveland, a senior girl in the College of Engineering, helped to draft plans for the construction of the stadium and other seniors assisted in surveying and drafting the project.

Many almost unsurmountable obstacles arose which made it seem impossible at times to have the six sections completed by November 1, soon after work was begun on the stadium, but these difficulties were overcome by co-operation and loyalty among the alumni, and on November 1 the Wildcats and the Centre Colonels dedicated the football house to the memory of Price McLean, who died in action for the sake of his Alma Mater in a football game between the Wildcats and the University of Cincinnati the year before. Approximately 15,000 supporters of the Blue and White and the Gold and White filled the six completed sections and witnessed the most spectacular battle since 1916.

It was first thought that only five sections could be built, but the contractors made fine progress and offered an attractive proposition for the construction of the sixth section, which was accepted. Their offer was to erect section B for $16,500 and to contribute $1,000 of that amount. It would have cost much more to have had this done, once the contractors were away from Stoll Field.

It seemed for some time that the opportunity to build this section would be lost because funds were not available and it appeared too difficult to secure them. This obstacle was overcome by the Athletic Council, which borrowed $15,500 from a local bank. Some of the members of the council and alumni secured thirty-one men who gave their personal notes for $500 each to be used as collateral with the bank making the loan. The notes run for three playing seasons and are to be paid off from receipts from games to be played in the stadium.

The stadium, when finally completed, will take the form of a huge horseshoe, opening at the west end, with the bow at the east end. The seating capacity will be 25,000, every one of which will have a good view of the playing field. Sections P and A will be added to the west end of the south and north sides which are already completed and Sections L and E will be constructed to the east, giving five sections on each side. With these the seating capacity would be about 17,500. It will take six additional sections to close the arc and give the maximum seating capacity.

The dressing rooms are located on the west end of each side of the stadium, one of which is used by the visiting team and one by the Wildcats.

The press stand on the south side ranks with the most up-to-date stands in the South. It is equipped with telephone and telegraph connections and there is a long table on which writers may place their typewriters or pads. It is situated on the topmost portion of the center section and one may get an unobstructed view of all plays and players. The press stand is wired with electricity and electric lights are available.

At the onset of the work last spring thousands of yards of dirt were removed from what is now the playing field. After the south sections were constructed tiling was laid under the playing field. The tiling was overlaid with twelve inches of crushed stone and clean cinders. Workmen then transferred from the country two acres of bluegrass sod to place it over the space. Now this has settled and a thick crop of bluegrass waves with the wind. The field, by next fall, should exceed that of old Stoll Field in beauty and durability.

At equal distances from each end of the playing field pipes run horizontally across the plot. These pipes automatically revolve and send small streams of water to all parts of the field, covering a radius of one hundred feet when water is needed on the grass. Around the gridiron there will run a cinder track when work is completed on the oval. This track will be a quarter of a mile in circumference and will have a 22-yard straightaway, according to specifications. Kentucky's cinder path will be quite an improvement over the dirt ones of former years and the Wildcats will welcome it.

Another feature of the ground is the arrangement and shape of the goal posts. Steel posts, with the bar extending four feet over the playing field, were used during last season and will continue to be used in future years. This feature was constructed because of the ever-present danger of some player striking his head on the straight wooden goal post which was formerly used.

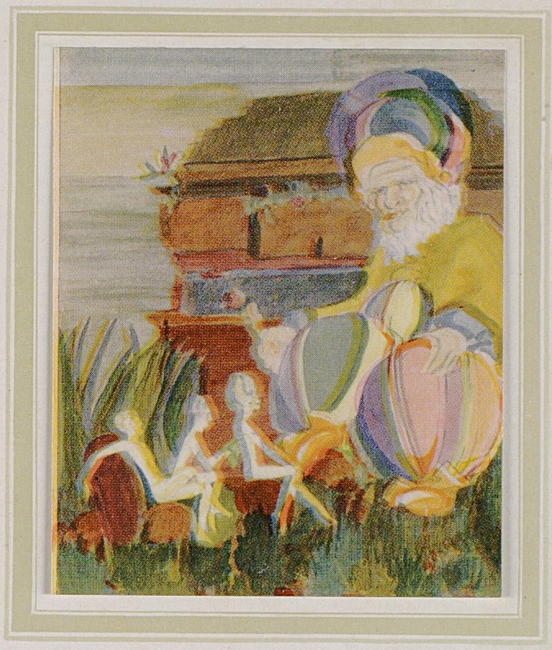

The construction of the stadium was under the superintendency of Douglas Thomson, and he was assisted by Maury Crutcher, former Wildcat football star, as assistant superintendent. Among the subcontractors were: J. J. Fitzgerald, plumbing; J. T. Jackson Lumber Company, form work; Allen Electric Company, wiring, and Combs Lumber Company, seats, all of Lexington. L. K. Frankel and J. J. Curtis, Lexington architects, both members of the firm and alumni of the University of Kentucky, acted as consulting architects and rendered valuable service. The Osborne Engineering Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, were employed as consulting engineers.

The stadium, as it stands today, is a masterpiece of art and in years to come alumni of the greatest university in the South may look back upon the results of their labor and smile with a satisfaction lingering in their hearts with the words "I helped" beating against their inward souls.

A local contractor who has seen several of the large stadiums in the North and East, including the Ohio State stadium and the Illinois stadium, says:

"The stadium on Stoll Field is the most perfectly designed and best constructed of any that I have seen.

"The designers never overlooked any details regardless of how small they may have been, for one can sit in any section and have a perfect field of vision. The playing field has been graded in such a manner as to permit perfect view from any seat in the stadium and the concrete work is the best that I have ever seen."

University of Kentucky

THE Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky, founded in 1865, which slowly developed into the University of Kentucky of today, owed its origin to an act of Congress of June 2, 1862, known as the "Morrill Land Grant Act," under which act public lands were donated to the several states and territories which might provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and mechanical arts. Kentucky's allotment of such lands was 300,000 acres. When the Commonwealth, however, established the Agricultural and Mechanical College in 1865 under this act, it did not make it an independent institution, but a department or college of what was then known as "Kentucky University" (now Transylvania).

The Commonwealth had, in 1863-64, taken over "Bacon College," located at Harrodsburg, and changed its name to "Kentucky University," and in 1864-65 this new institution was transferred to Lexington and consolidated with old Transylvania University, the oldest institution west of the Alleghany Mountains. When this union of the two universities was effected, old Transylvania gave up her name and the name "Kentucky University" was given to the university, resulting from the consolidation.

It was at the time of the consolidation of "Bacon College" with "Transylvania University," under the name of "Kentucky University," that the Agricultural and Mechanical College was established and also made a college of "Kentucky University." This connection with Kentucky University, however, was severed in 1878, and the Agricultural and Mechanical College, more often called State College, was located in what is now Woodland Park until 1881-82, when the location was finally changed to campus on South Limestone street.

The development of the University of Kentucky is shown to some degree by the changes in its official titles, which were as follows: Kentucky University, Agricultural and Mechanical Departments, 1866-78; Agricultural and Mechanical College (State College), 1878-1908; State University, Lexington, Ky., 1908-1916; University of Kentucky, 1916—.

The presidents who have served the university are: John Augustus Williams, 1866-67; Joseph Desha Pickett, 1867-68; James Kennedy Patterson, 1868-1909; James G. White, acting president, 1909-10; Henry S. Barker, 1910-16; Paul P. Boyd, 1916-17; Frank LeRond McVey, 1917—.

The first graduate of the university was William Benjamin Munson, B.S., in 1869. Mr. Munson resides in Denison, Texas, and is president of the Denison Cotton Mill Company. The first degree granted to a woman was B.S. to Miss Bell C. Gunn (Mrs. Charles Kay) in 1888. John Wesley Gunn was the first graduate in civil engineering, in 1890, and Professor J. Richard Johnson was the first graduate in mechanical engineering, in 1893.

The first buildings on the present campus were the Administration building, the Old Dormitory and President Patterson's home, built in 1881-82. Other buildings have been erected from time to time as need required and funds permitted until there are now thirty-one university buildings. The latest are the men's new dormitory, built in 1921-22; the Stadium and the men's new gymnasium, erected by the students and Alumni Association in 1923-24.

Some of the changes that may interest old students and alumni who visit the university from time to time are: In the administration building, the conversion of the old chapel into a library and study hall to relieve the congested condition of the Carnegie Library (the university convocations are now held in the men's new gymnasium); the giving over of the first floor to the administrative offices and basement to the university postoffice, book store and cafeteria. The old dormitory, now known as "White Hall," and the second dormitory, now "Neville Hall," have each been converted into offices, recitation rooms and libraries. The expansion in the engineering shops and the conversion of the old quarters into a recreation and lecture hall called "Dicker Hall." Since the completion of the men's new gymnasium the former gymnasium has been reconstructed and is now the alumni hall and girls' gymnasium. Other interesting changes, too numerous to mention in the limit set for this article, must be omitted.

The university has at present ten general administrative officers; 156 officers of instruction, and 89 on the staff of the Experiment Station and Agricultural Extension, with a total enrollment of 3,567 students in 1923-24.

SENIORS

WITH the passing of the year we shall, as Seniors, be graduated from our Alma Mater into the dashing, fighting world, where success or failure will come to us in the great issues of life as we cope nobly or ignobly with them.

Here at the University, for four years, we have prepared ourselves for the engagement with life, acquired friends and cemented those bonds by sacrifice and loyalty to Kentucky.

At the University we have succeeded well. Let us then carry on so that, as time progresses, we may look back on our achievements here as a beginning, and indulge in the hope that all of us of the Class of 1925 may, in future years, look upon his or her life and see in it a life that has been of service to the world and a benefit to fellow man.

Juniors

JUNIORS

WE, the Juniors, are about to enter upon the last lap of the race. Next year those who persist will reach the goal. It is with sorrow and with joy that we behold our glimpse of the future, for the years at our Alma Mater are surrounded with tender memories. We have made our mistakes, and we regret them. We have won our honors, and we are grateful. This much we pledge: As we have endeavored in the past to uphold the glorious traditions of the University, so in that larger race of life we will remember and bring not shame but distinction upon the school we love.

Sophomores

SOPHOMORES are usually accredited with that peculiar quality of egotism krown as "sophomore soul," but we modestly assert that we are free of that sometimes deserved stigma. It is true that in scholarship we surpass all the other classes of the University; we will admit that the leaders of the school are chosen from our numbers; and we know that U. of K. would be a dreary place without us. Yet our unobtrusive natures forbid us to touch upon our unusual abilities. Suffice it to say that—

"Classes may come, and classes may go,
But we are the best forever."

Freshmen

AS Freshmen we represent the largest class in the University. If it is true that "there is strength in numbers," we are a race of Samsons. We may claim this title honestly, for the gibes of the upperclassmen, the sarcastic quips of the faculty, repeated invitations to the Registrar and to the Dean's offices have not downed us. We will be better known some day, for we believe in that motto, "In life, as in a football game, hit the line hard; don't foul, and don't shirk, but hit the line hard."

Our Mascot

Every team, every university, has a nickname. Ours happens to be the "Wildcats." Did we say happens? Yes, we did, and we were wrong; for the University was given that name in a manner in which it is justly proud. Long years ago a team wearing the Blue and White were playing in St. Louis. The manner of their play was termed by the sport writers as resembling the wildcats of the Kentucky mountains.

Ever since that memorable day the wearers of the Blue and White have carried this monicker, and are inspired by its connnotations. "The fight and spirit of the Kentucky wildcat" has won many battles, and will win many more.

VARSITY SQUAD

When Coach Murphy, former Yale star and Northwestern mentor, made his first call for the varsity football candidates last fall Kentucky's hopes were high. When he disbanded the team in Charleston after its last game Kentucky's hopes were still high, for the university knows that in Murphy it has a dependable coach and a loyal supporter in its new mentor of the varsity squad, Coach Murphy.

Resume of the Season

THE Wildcats have had more successful seasons; they have had less successful seasons; but there has never been a Kentucky team any gamer, any more valiant than the 1924 varsity squad.

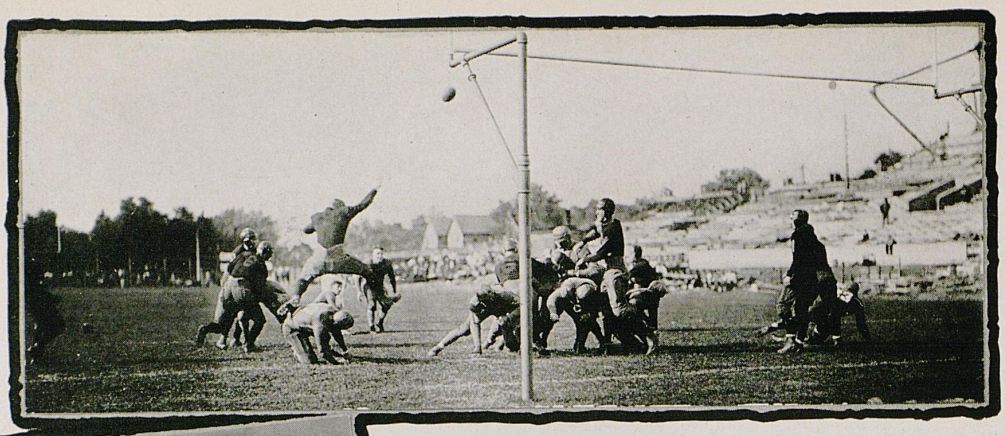

Records are cold facts; they can be chronicled and become history. But the aggressive spirit that characterized the Cats this season just past can never be written. It does not need to be, for that spirit that they displayed against Washington and Lee when they were hopelessly beaten and again against Centre when they were fighting a lost cause, not to mention the plunging, dashing fight that scored against 'Bama when they were swamped beneath three touchdowns, or beneath the ill-fated to win in the V. M. I. game when there was but a few seconds left until that game became history; for all of this was etched in the minds of the spectators and can only be recalled by the aid of the memory.

These, save one, are the games that the Blue and White dropped to their opponents this year. The other was to West Virginia Wesleyan, the conqueror of the navy, and Syracuse. This game is one that we can say, without any feeling of poor sportsmanship, that the best team did not win. Outplunged, outpassed, outkicked, out everything but scored, the "Bobcats" lucked into the breaks and walked out with a perfectly good football game that should, as far as they were concerned, have been won by the other team that was on the field.

The Cats won their first two starts by overwhelming scores, but then the winning stopped when W. and L. applied the brakes and walked home with the game. But considering all in all the Cats were not so bad, for did they not tear the Sewanee Tiger into shreds and did not that same mangled Tiger take the Com out of the Vandy Commodores, the conquerer of far-famed Minnesota? Did not this same Cat that received quite a bit of tramping all of the season go down to Knoxville on Turkey Day and make the Volunteers wish that they had waited until the draft law had caught them before they had engaged their ancient rivals, the Kentuckians?

Individually the Kentucky team could cope with any of them. Collectively it was not so good. The South has not seen for quite a while a man as versatile as Captain Sanders, the plunging back of the varsity. Nor has it seen a faster pair of backs than Hughes or Tracy since the days of Doc Rhodes and Rabbit Curry. The wings of the varsity was as strong as any team of the South could boast of, the line was fair, yet the Cats just couldn't get together.

Next year we entertain the hopes that the varsity will not only be a menace, but a disaster to teams that have scheduled the Cats on their 1925 card and that at the head of the Southern Conference next year will be the University of Kentucky team with the Picken's trophy safely removed from 'Bama and tucked well under its arm.

The First Goal, Louisville Game

Capt. Sanders

Kentucky, 29; U. of L., 0

The 1924 Wildcat football season opened with a victory. The University of Louisville fell the victims of the claws of the Wildcats on October 4 before approximately 5,000 frenzied football fans that packed one side of the newest and best stadium in the South.

Kentucky, 42; Georgetown, 0

The Georgetown Tigers failed in their twenty-second attempt to wrest victory from the University of Kentucky gridders on October 11, and they went home sadder and wiser, with the gloom of 42 to 0 hanging over them. Despite the top-heavy score, the Scott County boys played the best game of ball they have played against the Cats for years, and twice they held Coach Murphy's men on the Tiger's one-yard line.

WASHINGTON AND LEE

KENTUCKY, 7; W. & L., 10

Some 8,500 football fans saw the mighty Generals of Washington and Lee down the Wildcats 10 to 7 in a brave effort on October 18. The educated toe of Dawson, special substitute for Daves, in the second quarter, brought victory to the Virginians. The spectators heard a dull thud and a moment later the oval sped betwixt the bars on Kentucky's goal, and Washington and Lee had won the game.

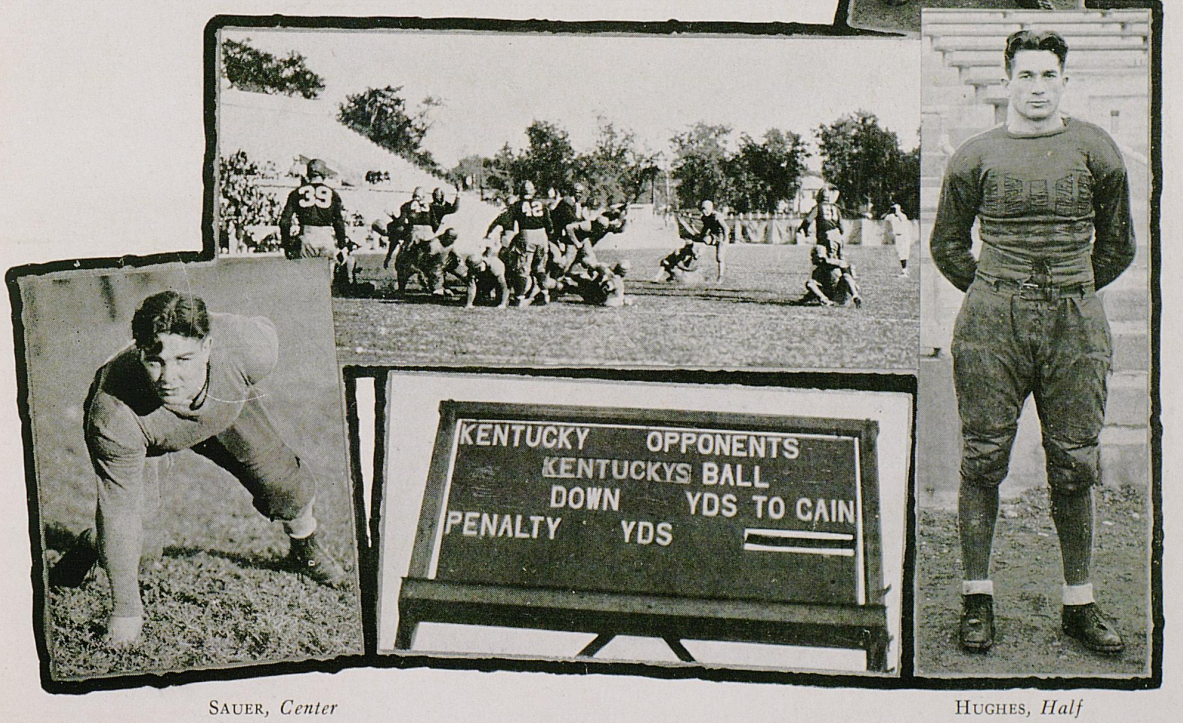

Captain Sanders was Kentucky's outstanding luminary. He made half of the tackles and carried the ball with the force of McMillan. Cameron, of the Generals, lived up to advance reports and carried the ball for necessary yardage when called upon.

Several hundred Washington and Lee rooters and alumni sat in the north stands, and a banquet was held at the Lafayette the following evening in honor of the victors.

Sewanee "Touchdown"

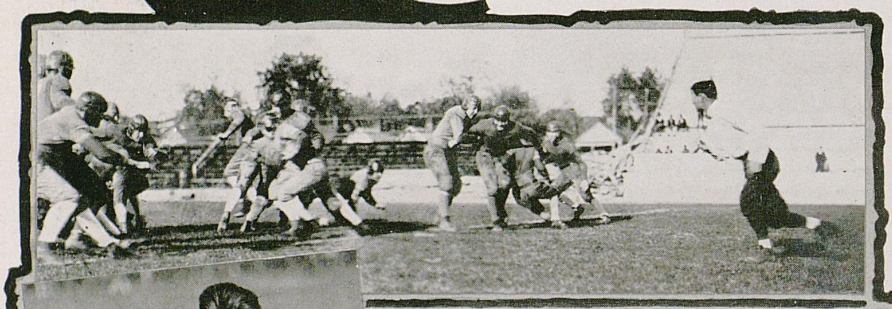

Portwood

Kentucky, 7; Sewanee, 0

The Sewanee Tigers were defeated 7 to 0 by the Wildcats on October 25 in one of the greatest games of the 1924 season. Sewanee outplayed the Murphymen at some stages of the game, but the Wildcat defense was at its best, and the Tiger backfield could make little headway against the Blue and White forward wall. Kentucky went into the game over-trained, and this showed up somewhat in the progress of play. They got some of the breaks and took due advantage of them. There were numerous penalties inflicted on both teams, Kentucky receiving 110 of the 140 yards of penalties.

This victory over Sewanee was an important one, as Sewanee defeated Vanderbilt, who sank the good ship Minnesota, who had mowed "Red" Grange and his Illinois huskies the week before.

KENTUCKY, 3; V. M. I., 10

Taking advantage of the breaks, and aided by a Kentucky penalty, the Virginia Military Institute eleven defeated the Wildcats, 10 to 3, on November 15 in a game replete with thrills and in which the playing of White, of V. M. I., and Sanders, of Kentucky, predominated.

A superior team was defeated when the 'Cats went down to defeat, but breaks decided the contest.

The game marked the passing of four battle-scarred veterans from the Kentucky gridiron. These men, Captain Curtis Sanders, Charles T. Hughes, W. A. Rice, and Turner Gregg, played their last game on Kentucky sod, but in their passing they inscribed on the Blue and White Hall of Fame their names because of their never-dying and courageous spirit of defending their Alma Mater from foreign foes.

CENTRE GAME

KENTUCKY, 0; CENTRE, 7

Fighting like the Centre of old, the Centre of 1921, when, in their height of glory, they humbled the mighty Harvard, the "Prayin' Colonels" of Danville defeated the Wildcats before 15,000 people by the score of 7 to 0 on November 1. It was Home-Coming Day for Kentucky, and the crowd that attended the game between the two ancient Kentucky rivals was the most colorful ever seen on a Kentucky gridiron.

Captain Herbert Covington, of Centre, was the outstanding luminary of the battle, running his team like a machine and cutting around the ends for long gains. Gordy, Centre fullback, made the touchdown which gave his team victory in the first quarter. It was Centre's eighth consecutive win over the University of Kentucky, but the Wildcats played a good game against a team that defeated Alabama 17 to 0 and Georgia 14 to 7 for the Southern championship.

TENNESSEE GAME

KENTUCKY, 27; TENNESSEE, 6

The Wildcats came to their own on Thanksgiving Day and slaughtered the Volunteers of the University of Tennessee, 27 to 6, in a thrilling and courageous battle. The game was a triumph for the Murphy system, as the Kentucky eleven worked as a unit, and it is said every man was a star. The 'Cats made a total of twenty-two first downs to Tennessee's eight, and gained most of their yardage by straight football. Turner Gregg ran the team like a machine, and ran around end for thirty-three yards a few minutes after the opening kick-off for a gain that aided Sanders in taking the ball over the Tennessee line for Kentucky's first score.

The Military Band, headed by the "struttingest" drum major in the land, Ed. Gans, invaded the hills of Tennessee with the Wildcats and covered Knoxville with music and themselves with glory and praise. They returned to Lexington the Friday morning following the game and the greatest victory since 1915, when Purdue fell before the Wildcats, was staged around the campus, led by Ed., "Abe," and "Ted."

The Tennessee game enabled Kentucky to get a break in games won and lost during the 1924 season. They defeated Louisville, Georgetown, Sewanee, and Tennessee, and lost to Washington and Lee, Centre, Alabama, and V. M. I.

Murphy's Men Gained More Yards From Scrimmage and Had Greater Number of First Downs Than Bobcoats—Captain Bullman Lost in Comparison With Blue and White Ends—Winners Follow Pigskin Closely

CHICAGO CONTEST WILL PROVE INSPIRATION

The Wildcats felt good when they met a small but loud-cheering bunch of students at the Union Depot yesterday morning when they arrived from Charleston. Just because Kentucky lost, 24 to 7, did not dishearten the brave few who awoke from their slumbers extra-early to give Murphy's men a welcome home.

Saturday's game was the last for four of the Wildcats. The quartet will graduate from the university in June. They are Captain Sanders, who ranks as probably the greatest fullback ever to wear the Blue, Caveman Rice, as good a tackle as there is in the state, Turner Gregg, plucky quarterback, and Turkey Hughes, speed merchant.

Charleston's First Inter-State Post Season Game Pleases Football Fans of City

CITY DECKED IN COLLEGE COLORS

Eleven bobcats were turned loose yesterday at Laidley field and eleven wildcats from the hills of Kentucky were on hand to give them battle, but the claws of the bobcats were too long and they fought their way through the fighting and snarling wildcats to a 24 to 7 victory.

There was nothing to mar the first inter-state post season for Charleston's new football stadium. A December day with threatening rain driven away by a lowering mercury made prime conditions for the scrappy battle between the two elevens.

WILDCATS OUTPLAY WEST VIRGINIA, CONQUERERS OF NAVY, BUT LOSE

Frecka, Bullman and Bobcats Defeat Felines 24 to 7 in Game Which Dedicates West Virginia Stadium

The Wildcats went to Charleston, they saw, they conquered—yet they did not win.

Outplaying two all-American prospects, one backfield man and an end, the University of Kentucky last Saturday lost to a team which conquered Syracuse 7 to 3, and the Navy 10 to 7. The final count was 24 to 7 but the score does not in the least reflect on the fight that the Wildcats put up against the sturdy mountaineers.

Playing with the grit and unconquerable courage that failed to characterize the regular season, the Wildcats held at every stage and were defeated by Fate, as they were defeated in two other games this year.

The slippery Frecka and his crossword puzzle style of making touchdowns brought the stands to attention with his 95-yard run across the goal line in the fourth quarter after Gregg had punted. In the third quarter he raced through the entire Kentucky team for a touchdown after he had caught Hughes' on his

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 6.—The University of Kentucky Wildcats, the "dedicatingest" team in the country, ran true to form here this afternoon when they lost to West Virginia Wesleyan, 24 to 7, in Charleston's new stadium, which the game officially christened.

The score does not tell the story. Kentucky should have won, despite the fact that Wesleyan scored three touchdowns and a field goal. The Wildcats, getting the worst of practically every break, fought an uphill fight from the very start, gained

ALTHOUGH the varsity season of 1924 was both a disappointment and a success in the eyes of its supporters, prospects for a championship eleven next fall is exceedingly bright.

Probably never before has Kentucky had as formidable a freshman team as it had last fall. The team was composed of the cream of the high schools from all over the state, and they blended together under the tutelage of Coach Eklund to make one of the fastest and best teams in Dixie.

The freshmen played five games, winning over Georgetown, Centre, and Vanderbilt, and losing one to Centre and one to Tennessee. All in all, it was a very successful season for the wearers of the Green, and we predict that next year they will carry the "On, On" U. of K. spirit a notch higher in the Southern Conference than it has ever been before.

Basketball, 1924-1925

Kentucky opened its basketball season with a colorful victory over Cincinnati at the New Gym. The score was 28 to 23. The entire Wildcat team showed good early season form, and predictions for a championship team were rife. Carey, at back guard, had developed into a wonderful player, and Kentucky enthusiasts were well pleased.

Applegran, Coach

Our next game was with Indiana, and Kentucky lost a hard-fought contest, 20 to 18. Indiana, runners-up in the Conference race last year, had a powerful quintet. Despite the absence of McFarland during the greater part of the contest, the Wildcats put up a superb brand of ball.

From the Indiana game until the end of the season, the Wildcat quintet played a rather mediocre brand of ball. At times the Blue and White would rise to great heights and display its real skill and strength. The contest with Tulane was one of the best ever played at Lexington. The green-clad warriors from the Louisiana school came to the Blue Grass with a powerful aggregation. They were hailed as probable Southern champions, having defeated everybody in the South and lost only one contest. Coach Applegran's men literally played Tulane off its feet and came through with a great 25-to-18 victory. Kentucky was right, and all fandom was eagerly awaiting the Southern tournament. Georgetown was our next opponent, and we defeated them by a large score. Tennessee came to Lexington and threw a scare into the Wildcat camp when they garnered an eight-point lead before our boys could score. With but three minutes to play in the first half, the Mountaineers were leading, 13 to 1. Kentucky staged a great comeback in the second half, and won, 26 to 23. This was not the kind of ball that wins tournaments, and Kentucky supporters were worried. The next contest with Centre was a walk-away for State. The Gold and White had neither an offense nor defense, and Kentucky won by the overwhelming score of 39 to 10.

Then came the long-awaited Southern tournament. Any prediction as to Kentucky's chances of winning would be a mere conjecture. If the Wildcats were right, victory seemed certain. The first contest was with Mississippi A. and M. It was a see-saw affair from start to finish, but the Wildcats were at the top of their mettle and, due to the wonderful guarding of Carey and shooting of McFarland and Millward, came out on top by the score of 31 to 26.

Kentucky's second tournament contest was with Georgia, who previously had defeated the Wildcats by the narrow margin of four points. Georgia went into an early lead, and at the end of the half the score was 17 to 14 in favor of Georgia. The Blue and White fought a splendid up-hill battle, and with but one minute to play, Kentucky went into the lead when McFarland threw a beautiful basket from the middle of the floor.

With twenty-eight seconds to play, Georgia again counted, and the battle ended 32 to 31 in the Bulldogs' favor. Kentucky lost, but she went down fighting. It was one of the greatest up-hill battles ever played in the tournament.

Thus Kentucky ended its basketball season with a total of thirteen victories and eight defeats. Every man from this year's team will be back next year, and having become accustomed to the big floor at the new gym, and Coach Applegran's system, the Wildcat quintet of 1925-1926 should be unbeatable.

URBANA, Ill., Jan. 8.—Apparently outclassed in the early stages, Coach Ruby's University of Illinois basketball team came from behind and defeated the University of Kentucky quintet here tonight, 26 to 24, in one of the fastest games seen for several years. Kentucky led at the half, 17 to 15.

Patience rewarded the Wildcats in the end in their basketball game last night at the gymnasium with Georgetown College and they defeated the Tigers, 25 to 17, after the visitors had led at the halfway mark by a score of 8 to 6.

"CHUCK" ALBERTS IS STAR

[Special to The Herald]

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 6.—The Kentucky Wildcats in a determined last period drive defeated the Tech Yellow Jackets here tonight by a score of 18 to 16, the lowest score that has been recorded this year in a local basketball game. Numerous fouls kept the game from being fast all the way through.

Alberts, the Kentucky guard, who is of the half-pint size and who was the star of the whole game as far as real basketball playing is concerned, was one of the men to be sent to the bench for excessive personal fouls.

Victory Gives Kentucky High Southern Rating

The Wildcats won one of the most important games on their schedule here last Thursday night when they defeated Tulane University of New Orleans 29 to 22 in a heated contest. The victory gave Kentucky an average of .714 in the Southern Conference race, as Coach Applegran's men have won five and lost two official games. Tulane came to Lexington with a reputation which threw fear into the hearts of the Wildcat supporters, as she had been beaten only once previously, and that by the Mississppi A. and M. team, which later fell before Tulane by 20 points. Tulane had also defeated Alabama in two games, who in turn defeated Kentucky on their Southern trip.

Thursday night's game was one of the hardest fought and swiftest played on the local floor this season. The result was in doubt until McFarland sewed up things late in the final half. Throughout the contest, "Speedy" Al-

Throwing confusion into the ranks of the gold and white clad players by the rapidity and effectiveness of their attack, the Wildcats of the University of Kentucky dribbled, passed and shot their way to a one-sided victory over the Colonels of Centre College Saturday night in the Kentucky gymnasium by the score of 39 to 10.

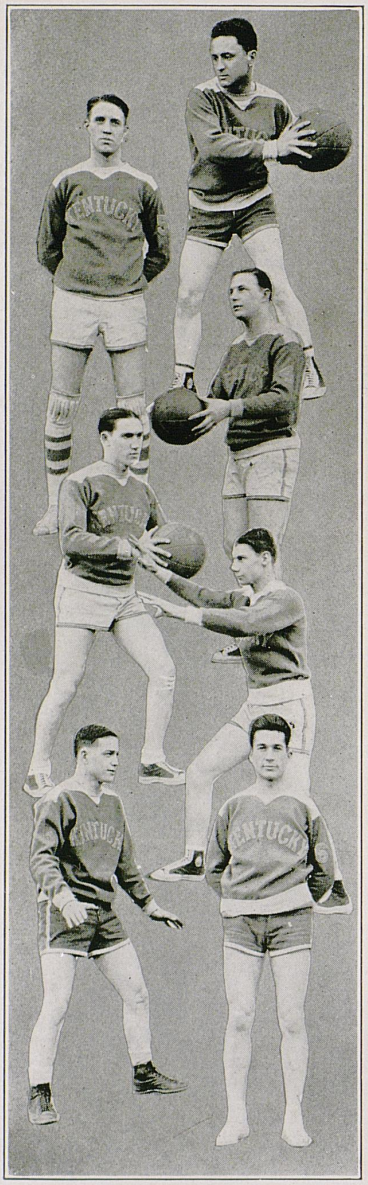

Notwithstanding the wide margin of victory, which betrays the deadly accuracy of the Kentucky floor men, the game at times bordered on mediocrity and at no time was the [illegible] so acute as to cause tense

Referee: Krueck, Cincinnati.

Captain McFarland

McFarland, captain and forward of the Wildcats, is a really great basketball player. "Jimmie" is always in training, and this, coupled with his aggressiveness and cool-headedness, makes him a great leader.

Will Millward

Millward, elongated center of the Wildcats, proved one of the stars of the Southern tournament. Though Will did not reach his real form in the early games, he was one of Kentucky's most reliable point-makers.

Burgess Carey

Carey, back guard of the Wildcat quintet, proved the star of the season. Fighting all the time, Burgess seemed an impassable barrier to Kentucky's opponents. He was acclaimed one of the best guards in the Southern tournament.

Lovell Underwood

Underwood's playing at forward left nothing to be desired. He could handle the ball proficiently with either hand, and his playing at all times was far above the standard. He was fast, and an exceedingly good dribbler.

Foster Helm

Helm, substituting at center, running guard, or forward, was a valuable asset to the team. He fitted in well anywhere, and although he did not get a chance until late in the season, he had much to do with the success of Coach Applegran's aggregation.

Charlie Albers

Albers, running guard. The flashy Albers was the pep and fight of the Kentucky team. He seemed everywhere at once, and was always there when necessary. Though handicapped by size, he was so fast that he invariably succeeded in scoring as many or more points than his opponent.

Charles Hughes

Hughes, running guard and forward. "Turkey" also got a late start because of football, but when he hit his stride his playing was above reproach. "Turkey" dropped in shots from all angles in the second contest with Centre.

*Karl Rohs

Karl Rohs, center and forward. Rohs, after four years of hard work, finally won his varsity letter. He fit in well both at center and at forward and his work was at all times commendable. He was of much value to Coach Applegran, especially early in the season.

Freshman Basketball Team

The basketball team of the Class of 1928, under the leadership of Coach Eklund, was by far the most remarkable freshman team in the history of the University. Champions of the South, as well as champions of Kentucky, the freshmen were never defeated, nor hardly threatened with defeat, by any of the teams they met during the entire season.

More individual stars were on the team than ever before, and they were welded into the best and smoothest running machine that could be produced. Playing with high schools, freshmen from other colleges, and even good varsity teams from smaller colleges, Eklund's first termers never faltered in their steady march to the dual championship.

Many games played by the freshmen on the home floor were so one-sided that most of the audience would tire of the perfect shooting of Van Arsdell, the superb crip shooting of Hickerson, and the floor work of Jenkins, and go home to read the final score in the morning papers. In fact, the daily practice of the freshman team, playing against members of their own organization, furnished more active opposition than the best teams that the Association could secure for the championship team.

Yea, Wildcats, Yea

Baseball, 1924

SEVEN victories and six defeats is the record of the 1924 baseball team. Our nine started off like a whirlwind, even though Samuell, a star hurler, was ineligible, and several members of the freshman team of the previous campaign did not come back to school.

Indiana University, a Western Conference nine, was our first victim. The game was played on a chilly day, which seemed perfect for "Turkey" Hughes, who let the Cream and Crimson athletes down with seven hits. The game was featured by the all-round playing of the Wildcats, several of whom appeared to be in mid-season form. The score was 6 to 2.

Michigan, famed and feared because of her position at the zenith of the college baseball world, next came to Lexington, and after nine innings of hectic baseball, Kentucky came out on the long end of a 9 to 8 score, victor over Michigan for the first time in many years. Vossmeyer was pulled in from center field to start this game, but was relieved in the third inning by Gregg, who pitched masterful ball.

Cincinnati proved to be our third successive victim in a game featured by Kentucky's loose playing. The score was 5 to 3. Our first defeat was suffered at the hands of Maryville, to the tune of 3 to 0, but we came back the next day and defeated the Mountaineers in a slugging match, 13 to 10. V. P. I. came to Lexington with a highly-touted team and successfully invaded the Wildcat camp in the first contest. The score was 8 to 2, but on the following day the Kentucky nine turned the tables and defeated the Virginians, 4 to 2, when John Riffe slammed a home run with one man on base in the seventh inning, just before rain necessitated the calling of the game.

Then came the disastrous Southern trip. The Wildcat nine seemed to have rounded into form and was proclaimed the strongest in the South. However, it could not function properly. Try as they may, the Kentuckians could not come up to their former standard. They had hit a "slump," and a slump in baseball means that everything goes wrong. Tennessee was the victor in the first contest, 5 to 1, but in the following exhibition Kentucky "came back" and defeated Tennessee's best pitcher, Cantwell, whom it was said was slated for a big league trial. The score again was 5 to 1. Maryville took the rubber game of the series by defeating the Blue and White, 7 to 1. Vanderbilt defeated our nine, 11 to 9 and 7 to 2, on successive days. Both contests were free-hitting affairs.

Kentucky wound up its season by defeating Centre, 7 to 0, at Stivers Field. The contest was truly one-sided. Centre never had a chance, for they were outclassed by a wide margin in every department of the game. Jesse Riffe pitched splendid ball for Kentucky.

Not a man from this year's varsity graduates, and, with the aid of several freshman stars, and the return of our ineligibles to good standing, Kentucky next season should have a baseball team that in perfection more resembles a major league outfit than a college nine.

Baseball Team

"Bill" King, Shortstop.—"All-Southern shortstop," several years ago, "Bill" came back this year and lived up to his "rep." He was a good hitter and a clean fielder, besides being a smart ball player. "Bill" made many sensational plays.

"Turkey" Hughes, Outfielder and Pitcher.—A real ball player is all we can say for "Turk." He can hit, field, and is extremely fast. Besides, "Charlie" is a good pitcher. Coach Barger said "Turkey" should "go up" some day.

Sauer.—"Squibbs" performed in the utility role. He was always willing, and a reliable catcher. He played well in the Maryville game.

"Chuck" Alberts.—"Chuck" could play the infield as well as the outfield. He was called upon frequently, and exhibited a good eye, besides being fast, and a good fielder.

John Riffe.—John is a slugger extraordinary. On several occasions he saved the day for Kentucky by cracking a hit in the pinch. He should some day develop into a really great baseball player.

Paul Rouse, Captain and Second Base.—"Old Reliable Paul" was always there in a pinch. Full of pep, fighting all the time, Paul was the kind of captain we like. He hurt his shoulder early in the season, but he played exceptionally well, nevertheless.

Baseball Team

REED MILLER, First Base, Captain-elect for 1925.—A good, heady ball player. Fast, with lots of pep, and always trying, Reed should make an ideal captain. This was his first year at the initial sack, but he performed well.

CROFT, Third Base.—Lysle has one of the best arms on the team. He is a clean fielder and a good base runner. Should be a star next year.

HENRY, Catcher.—"Jim" was worked overtime behind the bat this year. He caught every game but one, and deserves a world of credit. He has a great deal of pep behind the plate and delivers when at bat.

VOSSMEYER, Center Fielder and Pitcher.—"Voss" came to school as a pitcher, but lack of outfielders necessitated that he switch to center field, besides taking his turn in the box. Lots of pep, willing, and a smart player.

JESS RIFFE, Pitcher.—Although usually late in getting into form, Jess has a world of stuff. His exhibition against Centre was a dandy, as was his effort against Maryville.

ROBBIN DINWIDDIE, Manager.—Hustling, bustling Robbin; always busy. Few managers have it on Robbin—he knows his stuff. Robbin has that faculty of making one believe that he is especially interested in him, and that, aside from the business viewpoint, is the most desired quality of a manager.

*TURNER GREGG, Pitcher.—"Sparky," playing his second year for Kentucky, made a good record. His pitching against Michigan was faultless. As he does in football, "Sparky" likewise exhibits a good baseball head.

Freshman Baseball, 1924

DUTCH BURNHAM'S 1924 freshman baseball team, though not as good as the all-star team of the previous year, made a good record.

The yearlings opened their season with Stamping Ground and won an easy victory. They broke even in two games with Eastern State Normal, defeated DuPoint Manual High, of Louisville, trounced the Woodland Athletic Club twice, and lost to Georgetown. In all, the freshmen won five games and lost two. Arnold, center fielder and captain; Smith, second baseman; Mulhall, shortstop; Chancellor, and Goodman were the mainstays of the team, and should furnish excellent varsity material.

The numeral men were:

R. H. Ackerman
W. P. Clark
C. H. Mulhall
B. F. Arnold
L. Chancellor
Frank Smith
W. Armstrong
S. S. Goodwin
E. Sherwood
L. E. Bach
D. Loftus

Track, 1924

THE track team of the University of Kentucky was a winner. The team won all of the dual meets.

March 29, at the Louisville Federation meet, at Louisville, the team came third. Illinois Athletic Club won the meet, with 36 points; Butler College won second place, with 27 points; and the University of Kentucky came third.

April 12 the Kentucky track team defeated the strong Vanderbilt team in a dual meet at Nashville, Tenn., by a score of 63 points, against 58 points for Vandy.

April 19 the team defeated the University of Tennessee, making 101 points, against Tennessee's 33.

May 3 the State meet was held in Lexington. The Wildcats won the State meet by scoring 88 points to Centre's 36½. At this meet four state records fell. Wolfe, of Kentucky, broke the javelin record by throwing it 173 feet, 3 inches. Brady, of Kentucky, broke the pole vault record by clearing the bar at 11 feet, 6 inches. Gordy, of Centre, broke two records, throwing the discus 123 feet, 6 inches, and the shot, 41 feet. Kentucky made 88 points, Centre made 36½, Georgetown made 8½, and Berea made 1 point.

May 10 the S. I. C. meet was held at Montgomery, Ala. The University of Kentucky won second place in this meet. The strong Mississippi A. and M. team won the meet by collecting 64¾ points. The Kentucky team, with only six men, came second to Mississippi, with 26½ points. Ray Hall, of Kentucky, broke the two-mile record at the Southern meet.

Varsity Track Letter Men

Ed. Anglin, J. Allen, James Brady, B. Creech, T. Coons, Sam Caldwell, T. B. Dewhurst, B. D. Hall, Ray Hall, C. T. Hughes, Al Kirwan, E. S. Melton, Uncas Miller, Dave Nantz, Len Tracy, George Woolf, H. Wilson, Basil Frost, Manager.

George Wolfe

He hurls a wicked javelin. Wolfe set a new State record in the 1924 State meet for the javelin throw, at 173 feet, 5 inches. Wolfe is captain-elect for the 1925 track team, and is a popular man on the campus.

James Brady

Brady is the little boy that runs with a great, long pole, hops, rises, and goes over a bar that you have to crane your neck to see. In other words, he is a pole-vaulter, and besides, he is extraordinary. Set a new State record in the State meet in the spring of 1924 at 11 feet, 9 inches, for the pole vault. He also won the 220 hurdle finals in the State meet.

Uncas Miller

"The Flying Wildcat." "Unc" has the steam of a locomotive and the power of a tank. He can run all day and win every one of his races. Miller set a new State record at the 1924 track meet in the spring for the 440-yard run at :51 1-10. Very quiet young man, and a good sportsman.

A. D. Kirwan

"Ab" is especially good in the relays and can hold his own with the best anywhere. Very popular athlete and has a splendid scholastic standing. He will lead the Wildcat football team in 1925, taking the place of Captain Curtis Sanders, who graduates in June.

Ray Hall

Although Hall was not in school during the first semester of 1924-25, he promises to be with us within another semester. In 1924 he set a new Southern record for two miles at 9:58 5-10 at the Southern Conference track meet in Atlanta. He holds, also, the State record for the one-mile run at 4:36 6-10. Hall is from Louisville. He is also a cross-country runner, helping Kentucky to win all of her meets last year, including the Louisville Thanksgiving run against the best in the country.

Len Tracy

Len is Kentucky's ten-second man. He is strong and one of the swiftest men to ever don a Wildcat track suit. He won the 100-yard dash in the State meet last year at 10 seconds flat over the best the other Kentucky institutions had to offer. He also plays halfback on the Wildcat grid eleven.

Sam Caldwell

Caldwell is a relay man extraordinary, and is one of the most dependable men on the team. Very popular on the campus. Was not in school during the first and second semesters, 1923-24.

C. T. Hughes

"Turkey" is the best broad and high jumper in the South. Went to Tennessee and set a new record for the two jumps. He holds the State record at 5 feet, 9 inches, for the high jump. Plays halfback on the Wildcat football team, and very consistent in his work.

Jack Frost

Frost is the popular manager of the track team. Was a candidate for the manager of the Cat football team, but Berkeley Bryan beat him out.

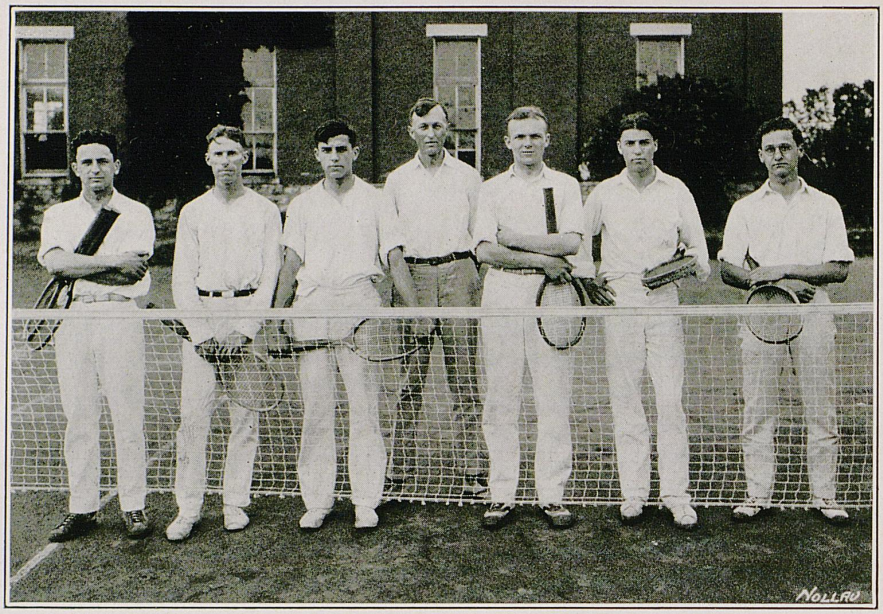

Back Row, Left to Right—Manager C. Charles, Assistant Manager G. Yager, Johnson, Hargon, Fenn, McClure, Taylor, Coach Buckhiet.

Freshman Track

The freshman track team won the championship of Kentucky in the State freshmen meet, held at Georgetown. The yearlings amassed a total of 70 points, while Centre was second, with 34, and Georgetown third, with 30, points. Previous to the meet the Centre frosh had taken points in the Southern meet at Atlanta. Davis and Lindle were high point men for Kentucky in the State meet.

The following boys composed the squad: K. A. Atkin, D. Brame, O. Lindle, R. Sousley, Hargon, Finn, S. Boden, H. Dossette, Taylor, G. Davis, Johnson, and C. Walte.

The ones awarded numeral sweaters were: Davis, D. Brame, O. Lindle, K. A. Atkin, Hargon, Ray Sousley, H. Dossette, and C. M. Charles.

Tennis Team

The 1924 tennis team won for the second consecutive time the state championship by virtue of their victories over every team in the state. During the season only one match was lost, that to a strong North Carolina team who came here fresh from the Southern tournament. Score, 5 to 1.

The schedule within the state included two matches with Berea. Scores 3 to 0 and 3 to 2; two matches with Georgetown, scores 5 to 0 and 3 to 2, and one match with Wesleyan, score 4 to 0.

Other matches were scheduled, one with Cincinnati and a return trip, but due to the inclement weather that prevailed during the season these two matches were called off and many of the others had to be postponed. The team is looking forward to a week trip next year and hopes to compete with strong teams in the Southern universities and colleges.

May Day Celebration on the Campus

It is the custom each year at the university to set aside May Day for the Seniors to turn over the Senior Class to the Junior officers, and for the Senior Class to plant its tree upon the campus. Last year, aside from this, classes were suspended during the entire day, and Lamp and Cross, and Mortar Board, the men's and women's honor fraternities, held their pledging exercises. The afternoon of the day was dedicated to the May Queen, Miss Ann Shropshire, who was crowned queen of the pageant and who led the parade through the city and back to the campus, where, attended by her court, she dismissed the festivities, after a welcoming dance by the girls of the campus in honor of her majesty.

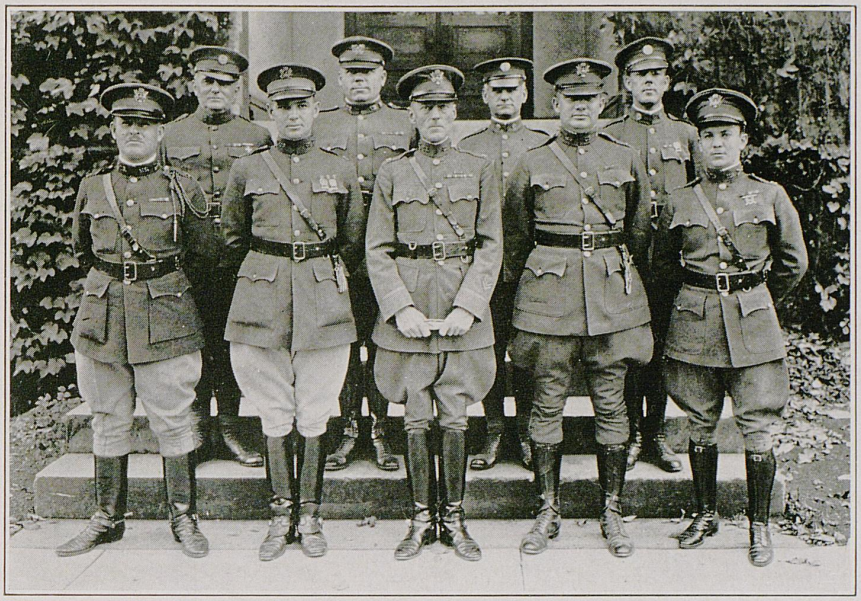

Organizations

The Purpose of the R. O. T. C.

THE World War, like all our previous conflicts, demonstrated again the imperative need for a large number of trained officers who must be provided in time of peace and not after the outbreak of war. The Reserve Officers' Training Corps exists for the purpost of enlisting the co-operation of the educational institutions in the national defense, and its primary object is to promote military training in schools and colleges and to enable specially-qualified students to earn commissions as reserve officers. This result is to be obtained with the least waste of time by providing military training at the same time that men are pursuing their general, or professional, studies and by employing methods designed to fit men for pursuits of peace as well as for pursuits of war. Some of the comprehensive scope of the R. O. T. C. may be adduced from the information that there are 150,000 students receiving military training in the two hundred junior and senior units in the country.

Full benefit will be derived from this innovation in our national policy when every man to whom the opportunity for training is given shall apply himself assiduously to striving towards the ideals espoused by the sagacious founders of our success as a nation, and towards developing this zeal for the proper pursuance of a sane preparedness program is directed the work of the staff of service-tried instructors at the University of Kentucky.

Colonel Horace P. Hobbs

Colonel Horace P. Hobbs graduated from Pennsylvania Military College in 1897; began his military career in 1899; served in Philippine campaign; served on the Mexican border; served overseas in the World War with the Twenty-sixth Division in the Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne offensives; received Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action in the Philippines; cited for gallantry during the Meuse-Argonne offensive; graduated from Advanced Course at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia, in 1921; commanded the Twenty-ninth Infantry until assigned to the University of Kentucky, July 1, 1924.

Captain John J. Bethurum

Captain John J. Bethurum graduated from Centre College in 1915; began active army career in 1916; served on the Mexican border; served overseas during the World War as Regimental Adjutant, Sixty-fourth Infantry; awarded Brigade citation for gallantry in action in the Meuse-Argonne offensive; was graduated from Company Officers' Course, Fort Benning, Georgia, in June, 1921; detailed to the University of Kentucky in September, 1921.

Captain James Taylor

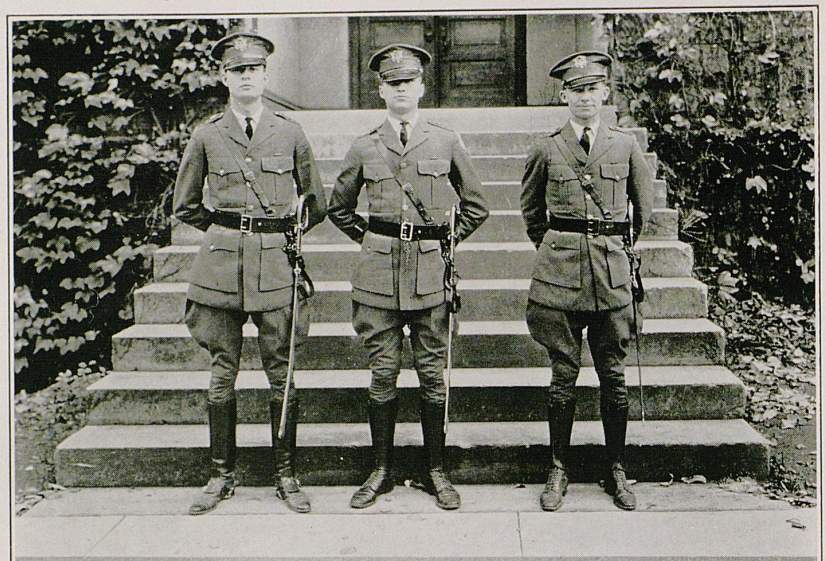

Captain James Taylor attended Phillips Andover Academy and Stevens School; graduated from V. M. I. in 1891; served on the Mexican border; served overseas with the Tank Corps attached to the British forces; wounded in action during the Somme offensive; served as United States courier in Southeastern Europe; graduated from the Company Officers' Course, Fort Benning, Georgia, in June, 1924; detailed to the University in September, 1924.

Captain Joseph E. Torrence

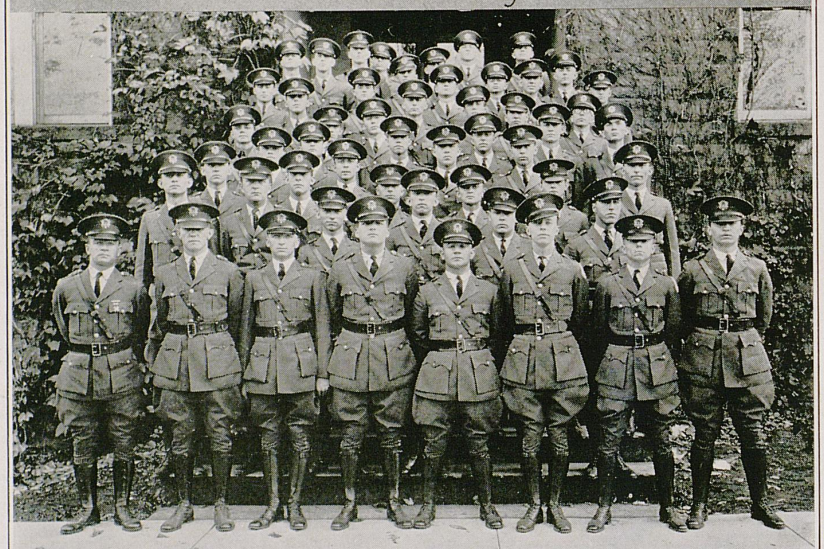

Captain Joseph E. Torrence graduated from K. M. I.; graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1916; served overseas during the World War with the British and with the First American Division; wounded in action at Soissons and retired from active service; awarded the French Croix de Guerre with Palm, and three Division citations for gallantry in action; stationed at the University of Kentucky since April, 1921.

First Lieutenant Marvin W. Marsh

First Lieutenant Marvin W. Marsh graduated from Southwestern University in 1917; served overseas during the World War with the Forty-second Division; participated in the Meuse-Argonne, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, and other offensives; wounded in action; received Regimental citation for gallantry in the Meuse-Argonne offensive; detailed to the University of Kentucky in the fall of 1921.

Our Army Sponsors

The Sponsors of the University R. O. T. C. Department have long been an established part of the Military Department, and since the installation of that division of military work, have been the subject of more debate and arduous work than any other phase of the army. In years past, before our Military Department had attained its present massive proportions, each platoon was entitled to a sponsor, with rank of lieutenant; each company, a sponsor with rank of captain; and one sponsor of the regiment as an honorary major. This year, however, the Department is so large as to make this number of women in the army burdensome, so the platoon sponsor was eliminated.

At present, one young lady is honorary colonel of the regiment, three are majors, and each company has a captain. Miss Helen is the sponsor-in-chief of this year's army and holds the honorary rank of Colonel. The sponsors are elected in the second semester of each year by the members of the R. O. T. C. regiment. A great deal of honor is attached to this office by the co-eds of the University, and they march proudly at the heads of their respective companies when the regiment is on parade, lending color to the drab appearance of the army.

Miss Marcia Lampert, who is the sponsor of the now famous University Military Band, is on parade more than any of the other sponsors. She accompanies the band to all football games and on parades through the city. In company with the "Strutting Drum Major," Ed. Gans, Miss Lampert is well known to the students of the University and townspeople.

Sergeant John J. Kennedy

Sergeant Kennedy, of the "United States army" and director of the "University of Kentucky Band," is his full title. In plain English, he is the man who is directly responsible for the University of Kentucky having a bunch of wind blowers that are second to no college band in Dixie or Yankee land. He is the man who is always one hundred per cent for the university, an instructor, a clerk, and a loyal enthusiast. Few people have much more to keep them busy. Yet when the Wildcats take the field and in taking it score a touchdown, it is the movement of his baton that causes "On On, U. of K." to float through the air and thrill all of us. Again when the Wildcats are trying to keep the field from being taken, and are backed up to the shadows of their own goal posts it is that same baton that starts that battle hymn of all Kentuckians, "My Old Kentucky Home," which puts the fight in all of us. Yes, this is still Sergeant John J. Kennedy, of the United States army and director of the University of Kentucky Band.

The Band

"It was a wonderful game and I enjoyed it, but that Kentucky Band! It was superb!" Such is the comment of all those who have been fortunate to have heard the Kentucky wind-jammers during any contest at which the band was present. The band is good. We do not deny it. We boast of it. Any band that can rally a team once when it is in the shadows of its own goal post is good; but when that band can, with its powerful rendition of "My Old Kentucky Home," put enough fight into a team to hold not once but four times in the same contest, that band is the superlative of any adjective denoting perfection that any one may think of.

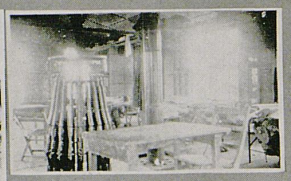

So much for its ability to stir school spirit to its highest pitch of enthusiasm. You should see that same band on parade, with Gans doing, as Fuzzy Woodruf describes it, "a combination of a pigeon wing and a Jim Corbet side step," then you would be truly inspired as you watched the regiment file by on parade to the air of Sousa's famous march.

The band has set a standard for the rest of the university to follow. Let us indulge in the pleasant day dream that the other organizations that represent the school will soon raise themselves to the standard of our inspiration—the Band.

Six Weeks in Camp Knocks

By TOWLES

I can see the cadets now as they bid their friends good-bye and hasten to Camp Knocks for six weeks' training in the life of a soldier. Forty boys from Kentucky went and were quartered with 500 other cadets from other universities and colleges throughout the fifth corps area.

The old train went rickety-rack from Louisville and civilization and dropped us at Stithton, a town of twelve inhabitants before the war and of 300,000 during the war. It has a postoffice and a canteen. The camp itself lies in back of the town. We were left at the station at midnight, and forty men are not very many when out in God's great open spaces.

Then to our quarters and bunks. When the sergeant mentioned bunks we had short-lived pictures of high feather beds with plenty of covers. He gave us a bed sack, which we had to fill with straw from a shed near-by; told us we would find iron cots folded and waiting for us in a shed two miles down the track, and informed us that we were not to turn on the lights, and sleepily bade us good-night.

After the first day, real army life began. We retired at 9:30 and arose at 5:45. The second day we were in camp we went on a five-mile hike to see the town. We saw it all, both the postoffice and the canteen. Dinner consisted of cabbages, potatoes, iceless ice-tea, and prunes. All became routine—to bunks at 9:30, arise at 5:45, breakfast at 6, hike all morning, dinner at 12, hike all afternoon, retreat at 5:45, supper at 6, cards, singing and carousing until 9:30, then to bunks again. Each evening we sang "We Would Give the Whole Damn State of Indiana for One Glimpse of Our Old Kentucky Home."

How easy it is to recall the first dance that was held down there. The entire Kentucky barracks went over to the hall and found a bunch of hard-boiled regulars and a score or more "laundry queens." There were five men to each female and the regulars looked at us in such a disapproving tone of voice that we politely went home and decided as we walked to our barracks that we had rather not dance anyway.

Remember when "Herb" blew the whistle at 10:30 and yelled "fire-drill?" That was the night that we had to lock the doors. Three hundred men turned out in their pajamas for the drill, but the Kentucky barracks remained quiet. And then the endless nights of games of chance and singing and cavorting. "Kid" was the laziest man, but had quite a bit of competition. He won in the stretch when he refused to undress at night because he was too lazy to dress himself the next morning. "Red" and "Froster" could never decide who had the better moustache. "Zooke" lost out early in the race when he received a letter from the Kappa house and cut his moustache.

It was 10 o'clock; Kentucky's lights were out; Purdue artillery decided they would come over and razz Indiana. They formed a pajama parade and came over. The Indiana boys who were in our company failed to heed them, and the Kentucky boys felt that the honor of the company was at stake. "Pewter," of Kentucky, slipped to the bath house and returned with a fire bucket full of water. As Purdue circled under our window, the water was released from the second story. Pandemonium broke loose and "Pewter" crept out for more water. He met the colonel at the foot of the steps, but did not recognize him. He threw the rest of the water on him and flew to his bunk and was sleeping soundly when the "Old Man" came upstairs.

One morning we had soft-boiled eggs for breakfast and retained more than half of our allotment and stored them in our barracks. Three mornings later we skipped formation and rushed to the Purdue barracks laden with fresh and unfresh eggs. Forty Kentucky boys slinging eggs at 140 pajama-clad Purdue prospectives, running hither and thither, with yellow and white dripping from the ends of their noses and the tips of their chins. They were indeed a delectable-looking sight. Revenge, thou art sweet and we got you.

Two girls walked through our area one afternoon and caused a rush comparable to a Freshman bag rush. Wine, hikes of fourteen to twenty-two miles in a single day, spending hours in the pits and hearing bullets hit the bank at the back of your head, throwing dirt in your face and eyes, polo games, athletic contests, dances, excursions—all went to make us proficient in the art of soldiery.

At 4:15 o'clock one July morning long lines of pajama-clad boys were meandering their way to the straw pile with their bed sacks to empty them and hurry back again, pile up their little cots in the shed from which they had taken them six weeks before—bid farewell to the bunks that had been their best and most constant companion during their training period and bid farewell to buddies. Indeed, it was a sad parting. We had sworn and fretted while we were in training, but after all, there were pleasant associations and tried friends whom we hated to leave. We left on a special at 8 o'clock, declaring that we were glad it was over, but retaining a tender spot in our hearts for the camp that had changed from Camp Knocks to Camp Knox on the last day. We felt that we had received some profitable instruction and knew that we had really tasted the cream of the life that our American doughboy lives.

The Student Government

An organization created a few years ago upon the campus to put into the hands of the student the instrument of self-government. It is a body that has performed its duty well and gained the respect of both the students and the faculty by its decisions in matters of government that have arisen from time to time since its existence.

Its members are elected by popular election each spring, a number of men being nominated from each college, with the result that there is one chosen from each College, and also from the classes.

Objectives of the Association

1. To lead students to faith in God through Jesus Christ.

2. To lead them into membership and service in the Christian Church.

3. To promote their growth in Christian faith, especially through the study of the Bible and prayer.

4. To influence them to devote themselves in united effort with all Christians to making the will of Christ effective in human society, and to extending the Kingdom of God throughout the world.

Toward these objectives the students of the Young Men's Christian Association are working. May their number increase, that the influence of the Association might be extended in the University, and through the University, to all parts of the State!

The Education Club was organized in October, 1923. The purposes of the organization are, first, to furnish a means by which those students of the University who are preparing to teach may become better acquainted with each other; second, to give the future teachers of Kentucky a greater appreciation of the work that they are preparing to do; third, to acquaint the members of the organization with the educational conditions of Kentucky today.

The club receives the hearty support and encouragement of the entire faculty of the College of Education. Meetings are held monthly at which the members have the opportunity of hearing several prominent educators.

Champion Judging Team, National Swine Show, 1924

On September 29, 1924, the University of Kentucky sent its first judging team to the National Swine Show, held at Peoria, Illinois. This team put Kentucky on the map by winning the contest with a score of 3,461. Nebraska, Ames, Ohio, and Illinois followed, in the order named. Stuart Brabant was high man of the contest, with a score of 720 out of a possible 750. W. S. Ligon ranked fourth and B. Y. Redford fifth. Gladys Platts was the only girl in the contest. She ranked first in the judging of Poland China hogs. Ten rings of hogs were judged. The prize for the winning team was $125 in cash. In addition, Brabant, Ligon, and Redford each won a cash prize and a gold medal offered by the National Block and Bridle Club.

International Live Stock Judging Team, 1924

This judging team represented the University of Kentucky in the Intercollegiate Live Stock Judging Contest held at the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago, November 29. Teams of five students each from twenty-four agricultural colleges in the United States and Canada competed, making this the largest contest ever held anywhere. Twelve rings of draft horses, beef cattle, sheep, and hogs were judged. The Kentucky team ranked ninth, but the scores from first place to ninth were very close. The team ranked fourth in cattle judging and seventh in sheep judging. R. H. Lickert was the high man of the team, ranking nineteenth out of one hundred and twenty contestants. He ranked twelfth in cattle judging. W. S. Ligon and Gladys Platts made an excellent showing by ranking in the upper third. Miss Platts was the only girl in the contest. The Chicago Daily News gave her a special interview and published a picture of her judging a ring of draft horses. This is the best team that has ever represented Kentucky in the International Contest.

Early in the year of 1924 the Board of Trustees re-organized graduate work at the University and established a graduate school with a dean in charge. Dr. Edward Wiest was appointed acting dean, and at his suggestion the Graduate Club was organized with a view to establish and maintain social and academic relationships among graduate students on the campus. While the club is interested in contributing to the graduate students' social life, its chief purpose is to promote general interest in research and advanced study at the University, and to foster higher education throughout the state at large.

To the Student Body and Reader

We desire to take this opportunity to present officially the 1925 KENTUCKIAN, and to thank the Senior Class for the honor it bestowed upon us by choosing us to edit and manage its yearbook, THE 1925 KENTUCKIAN.

We will say that we have ever been conscious of the responsibility the Class of '25 entrusted us with, and that we have served the class and the university to the best of our ability. The book is by no means perfect. Yet we have no apologies to make for it. We gave our best and worked our hardest.

It is also our desire to thank Miss Lucille Bush, the art editor of THE 1925 KENTUCKIAN, for the spirit of service and co-operation which she has willingly given throughout the year. The staff with which we have worked during the year has been ever willing and helpful, and it is to them that you owe in a large measure the finished product, your yearbook, THE 1925 KENTUCKIAN.

With best wishes,

The State Press was organized for the purpose of giving the University publicity throughout the State and nation. Its duty consists in assigning the student write-ups, and directing these write-ups to the home paper of the students. It is a valuable organization to the campus, as it acquires thousands of dollars worth of publicity free for the University each year.

The Strollers

ONE spring, a decade and a half ago, a band of wandering players, who took unto themselves the name of "Ye Strollers," made their appearance on Kentucky's campus, and from that day even unto this year 1925 a great clashing of cymbals and sounding of trumpets has, each returning season, announced the coming of the Stroller players and of springtime.

Kings have come and kings have gone, but the reigning regent of this band of players is Sir James Darnell, while the leading minstrel is the Honorable Gardner Bayless, both of whom are royal knights of the Lamp and Cross.

With the spring of 1924 came the actors to our midst, bringing with them great rumors of a wonderful play, the like of which had never been seen in these parts before. And in the great child story of "Seventeen" the Strollers gave to us a draught of the elixir of life and eternal youth.

But lo! another year has passed, and with the players' return has been published a proclamation by the "leading minstrel" to the effect that all those who have the precious gift of gentle voice and subtle poise may compete for an eligible place in the king's favor.

And, behold! many of these gentlefolk answered the call, and there were found among this number many Cinderellas and Princes Charming who found favor in the eyes of Sir Gardner, whose spring festival of love, luck, and laughter, called, in the lore of the Stroller folk, "Fifty-Fifty," will require new and varied genius of minstrelsy.

But Strollers find little time to linger, and so throughout the countryside, both east and west, these minstrel folk have wandered, carrying their old and new-found friends away from the things that are into a glorious land of magic, a land of "might have been."

Deans

C. R. MELCHER
Dean of Men

Holds one of the most important positions on the campus, and does it with success. He has helped more than one "old boy," and would do it again, too, if the opportunity

"BUDDY" FREEMAN
Assistant Dean, College of Engineering

Here is one who is literally loved by the engineers and highly respected by all others. Dean Freeman is a splendid adviser before "accidents" happen; stands ready to help a fellow out of trouble, once it does happen.

EDWARD F. WEIST
Dean of Graduate School

They could have hunted a month and then not found a person so well adapted for this position, when they were recently trying to fill this chair. Doctor Weist is highly respected by the students and fills this position with entire satisfaction to all concerned.

MISS SARAH BLANDING
Dean of Women

Kind, friendly, sympathetic, and easily approached, all these adjectives do, in too small a degree, describe 'Sarah"—but, oh boy! you had better walk the mark when it comes to a matter of the rules.

PAUL P. BOYD
Dean of College of Arts and Sciences

One of the best men on the campus, and we will stop with just saying, "he's a fine scout."

WILLIAM TAYLOR
Dean of College of Education

Now, it's really hard to talk about him and say enough for Will Taylor, but he's a man 'tis well to know. He was graduated from the University years before the concrete walk was laid from the entrance up to the Main Building, but played the part of the prodigal son, and came back last year to head the College of Education.

GEORGE ROBERTS
Assistant Dean of College of Agriculture, and Head Department of Agronomy

"George Roberts," as he is known, is known to more farmers throughout the State than any one man that travels out of the Experiment Station, and he's their friend, too. He has seen every student that has been graduated from the College leave the College since the College was founded, and he's their friend, too. In short, "George Roberts" is a real man, besides being a true friend of the students.

THOMAS P. COOPER
Dean College of Agriculture

"Dean" is truly a commoner. He is a real friend to the "flunkin' " underclassman as well as a source of encouragement to the "A" senior. He has been all along the road, receiving his share of the knocks, which has been quite a liberal portion. Many a student owes his now more comfortable condition to this man's efforts.

CHARLES J. TURCK
Dean of College of Law

He has just come to our campus this year, but you will have to move on down to your toes when you are counting the friends he has already made. He is in great demand as an off-the-campus speaker.

PAUL F. ANDERSON
Dean of College of Engineering

"Little Paul" is an administrator—he is famous for that. He has actually made the Engineering College, and his graduates are in demand everywhere. He's a bear when it comes to organization.

THE BUSY HUM OF MEN AND WOMEN

MODERN University life, as is everything else, is two sided. One may come to the University and see only one side. One may come and see both. It is the purpose of activities to give to every student a chance to meet both sides. Should the student, through lack of incentive, go through school without participating in some activity, that student has missed part of his or her college course.

One may come to the University and study—just study. That student, we feel, has missed the real campus life. True, his grade may be a shade in his favor, but through his non-participation in activities he has failed to gain anything but theoretical knowledge of his subject; this alone is not sufficient in the pursuit of his chosen profession.

With the foregoing facts in mind, there have been a number of clubs and honorary and professional societies organized upon the campus to promulgate closer relation between the theory and the practical, between college life and the world.

These organizations are working to one end—the help of the student. They were organized for the students' good and for the promotion of the welfare of the University.

For proof of their help to the student, ask anyone in any of them, and their answer will be: "The organization of which I am a member has benefited me." The organization can continue without you; but can you continue without it?

Features

To the

Squirrels and Co-ed Students

of

"Old State"

We disrespectfully dedicate the following feature work
of the

1925 Kentuckian

Forgiveness I Crave

If you play with the hearts of women,
Be they old or merely maids,
Be sure, my son, you'll regret it,
As surely as spades are spades.

You've laughed and joked with the other boys
At the way you've strung 'em along,
Never considering the pain you've caused,
Nor thinking of the wrong you've done.

But wait—some time you'll really love,
And then you'll begin to pay,
For the hearts you've broken will give you no rest
In your dreams, your work, or your play.

For the day you find yourself in love
With a girl so wondrous fair,
You'll think of the hearts you trifled with,
And you'll begin to doubt she's square.

You'll see their faces as you talked to them,
You'll remember the look in their eyes
As you speak of love and other things—
God! but you'll hate those lies!

Some day it will all come back to you,
And the question you'll ask will be,
"I've fooled and played with a dozen girls—
Do you suppose she's playing with me?"

When you kiss the lips of the girl you love,
As you leave her at the door,
You'll wonder, in spite of all you can do,
If she's been kissed that way before.

For the things she does in innocence
Will fill your heart with doubt.
And the moments you spend away from her
Will tear your heartstrings out.

You'll never think she's doing right,
Though she does and tries her best.
You'll be jealous of every man you see,
And think she's like the rest.

For you'll think of the many girls you've kissed,
And you'll reason that this is true:
The things I do to the other man's girl,
The other man to my girl can do.

Superlatives

Author's Note: These characters chosen as Superlatives in Fiction (College) are selected carefully and with a desire to delineate characters familiar to our readers and to encourage further study in this field.

The Most Dumbest

From all the characters in our limited range of fiction, the one that deserves the title of "The Most Dumbest" is the hero in the famous and widely read work, "The Plastic Age." Hugh (the last name escapes us) is the hero of the story, and he exhibits a brand of dumbness that is hard to equal in the world of letters. From the time he is a freshman, when his dumbness is excusable, when he becomes a Nu Delt, and so on until death or graduation, our Puritan hero steadfastly refuses to indulge in the college sports of necking or booze-fighting, thus being a model for the Y Secretary to point to with pride.

The Keenest Lover

Our choice for the all-American fictional loving team is the hero of Ben Hecht's latest outburst, "Humpty Dumpty." Every college girl who is at all studious will agree that as a real lover Saravon has the sheik backed off the boards, and is rapidly crowding the "flaming youth" hero out of the running. Saravon loved for the sake of love on all occasions, and, like the Deity, was no respecter of persons. In fact, he was an artist in his chosen field as well as a hack writer, and never failed in a conquest. Saravon is a model young man to emulate if one is a writer of fiction and desires wide sales of his work, but to imitate the great lover in real life would be fatal, without the necessity of going to the mountains to get killed.

The Profanest

Wentzell, the wonderful dramatic character in "White Cargo," a delightful little romance that was witnessed by all good State students from the University box, easily qualifies for this nom de guerre in our review. He used more "cuss words" in less time, and with more genuine feeling, than has been our pleasure to hear outside of a hardened driver of army mules on a muddy road. He knew all the superlatives in the profane vocabulary, and the author insisted on using each one individually and collectively twice in every act.

The Easiest Faller

Peter Graham, principal character in "Simon, Called Peter," a successful dramatic offering, and a book that ran into two millions in sales, is, without doubt, the easiests faller. A preacher that would insist in falling in love with a red-headed nurse who was poor and not too pure, rather than a prominent and beautiful English girl, is remarkable. But the most puzzling feature of the whole character is the fact that while he flopped for the little nurse, he let the beautiful French girl get by, a tactical error that would not be committed by the dumbest freshman in State.

"To the Men"

(With Apologies to Rudyard.)

I've taken my fun where I found it—
  I've tricked college sheiks in my time;
I've had my pickin' o' sweethearts,
  And most of the lot was prime.
The first was a Sigma Chi frat man—
  I called him my sweet cherubim;
But he got lit one night, and of me he lost sight,
  And I learned about frat men from him.

The next was a Phi Delt from Centre—
  Tall, good-looking, and blond—
Who came to a dance at Kentucky,
  And of me he became very fond.
He had a line like a cable,
  And oh, how I took it in!
But a girlie I met said she was his pet,
  And I learned about "squirrels" from him.

The next was a Kappa Sig necker—
  A devil at parking he were.
He liked me because I was speedy,
  The kind of girl men prefer.
One night when we went a-sparkin',
  With headlights and taillights turned dim,
I gave him a whack, so I had to walk back,
  And I learned about neckers from him.

The next was a K A beau brummel—
  The worst-leaking oilcan I know.
His would-be old-fashioned politeness
  Was nothing but put-on and show.
He never took me out to dinner—
  My chances for movies were slim.
He was so blame tight—but oh, how polite!
  And I learned about tightwads from him.

The next was a Sigma Nu caveman—
  Straight from the mountains he came
Rushed for his dough and his moonshine—
  A new hand, and green at the game.
Thank God for necking insurance,
  Though I'm not old-fashioned and prim!
I couldn't do such, for I can't risk too much—
  And I learned about cavemen from him.

One of the S A E thousand
  Flopped for me right at the start.
He gave me his pin in five minutes,
  And vowed that we never should part.
Hart, Shaffner and Marx are his tailors—
  Neat, natty, nobby, and trim;
I thought him the best till I found him a pest,
  And I learned about dumbbells from him.

An A T O hick fell flat for me—
  His manners were awful, I'll say;
He tried to act like a town guy,
  But his clothes contained pieces of hay.
Yet somehow he won my affection—
  The way he lied to me was a sin.
I believed what he said, then he dropped me like lead,
  And I learned about liars from him.

The next was a Pi K A tricker—
  He had me right under his thumb;
He floored me with flowery language,
  Which soon became boring and dumb.
The dates that he broke almost killed me,
  But now I am cured and grim.
I'm not sorry now that he broke every vow,
  And I learned about trickers from him.

The next was a squirrely Phi Tau man—
  A nut full of nonsense and prunes;
Heaven, to him, was a dance hall
  Where angels played snappy jazz tunes.
He shook a mean leg to perfection
  In a dark corner of the new gym.
No brains in his head—past the neck he was dead—
  And I learned about Phi Taus from him.

A Delta Chi drunk was my next one—
  He loved his corn and his gin;
I told him the next time to be sober,
  And never get hopped again.
For a week he was just like a deacon,
  Then he got filled to the brim.
I loved him so well! but his path led to Hell,
  And I learned about drunkards from him.

The next was an Alpha Sig roughneck
  Who won my approving regard;
His clothes were made of "K" letters,
  For at football and baseball he starred.
But when we were alone in the parlor
  He lost all his pep and his vim.
He had plenty of weight, but he just couldn't rate,
  And I learned about roughnecks from him.

The next was a Triangle bluffer—
  His big house at Rhodes Place is found;
He brags of his dates and his necking,
  For he aspires to be a tea-hound.
At first I found him amusing,
  For he gratified my every whim;
But, beneath his veneer he's a plain engineer,
  And I learned about bluffers from him.

The next was a Delta Tau student—
  He knew all about Sodom and Tyre;
He quoted from Shakespeare and Milton
  Each evening we sat by the fire.
He wouldn't take me to "Rosalind"—
  No dancing nor movies for him!
I got wise myself—now he's "on the shelf"—
  For I learned about students from him.

My last love was just a good fellow—
  No frat pin gleamed on his chest.
He loved me despite my flirtations,
  And I found him, of all them the best.
And so, in the beautiful June-time
  The church with flowers they'll trim;
For I'll walk by his side—just a shy, blushing bride—
  And I'll learn about husbands from him.

Pull Your Shades Down, Mary Ann

'Twas a moonlit night in summer,
  Flowers breathed upon the air,
When I saw her by her window—
  Lord! how lovely, standing there!

She had paused before a mirror,
  And the breeze her gold hair fanned.
She seemed thoughtful, pond'ring, pensive,
  Looking downward at her hand.

I moved nearer 'neath her window—
  Could she hear my noiseless tread?
What was that I heard her murmur?
  "Kiss me again—again," she said.

Then my eyes turned green and glossy,
  And my heart did several flips,
'Til I saw her take a lipstick—
  With it, redden both her lips.

Then again I heard her mutter
  To the lipstick, bright and red
(Silly, foolish little flapper!):
  "Kiss me again—again!" she said.

Bill, the big, bad, boring bum,
Lost his love to Lillian,
And he's now beneath her thumb.
Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha! Ho, hum!
L'envoi
Oh, my gosh! This poetry's dumb!

A Pressing Question

Have you ever danced with that little girl,
  The one so dainty and sweet,
And by some chance or misfortune
  You walked all over her feet?
Then, smilingly she looked at you,
  Without a moment's halt,
And says, so sweet and soothingly:
  "Why, dear, it's all my fault!"
But do you think she means it,
  Even though she says it was?
Now, do you really think so?
  THE DEUCE SHE DOES!

Have you ever taken that girl to lunch
  When three bucks was all your dough,
And told her not to order much
  Because you'd be late for the show?
Then watched her big eyes smile at you
  As she whispered, soft and sweet,
When she had finished eating nothing
  That she had had enough to eat?
Though her words don't sound so bad,
  Now, do you really think so?
  THE DEUCE SHE HAD!

Have you ever sat with that little girl,
  In the light of the silvery moon,
With her fluffy head upon your chest,
  While with her you madly spoon?
Then, as you pressed your lips to hers,
  Felt a flutter in your breast
As she told you that of all the boys
  In the world, she loved you best?
But while into your eager ear
  She murmured, "You're some kid!"
Did you think she really meant it?
  THE HELL SHE DID!

PROLOGUE

College, to the average writer, is a place infested by girls (co-eds) who drink, smoke, pet, and do a few other things, unworthy of mention, that their grandmothers never had the chance to do. It is also a place where all of the men drink Scotch and lead the co-eds astray. (They don't; they drink "shine.") In fact, all of the snappy plays read something similar to the following:

Scene: Sorority House.

Time: Evening, between 8 and 9 o'clock.

Jack de Dozero (one of the principal males in the play) enters the house and calls Eleanor, who gaily trips down the stairs clothed in a little flimsy silk and, mostly, nothing.

Eleanor rushes to greet him with outstretched lips and arms stretched wider, and in the wild joy of the kiss, suddenly asks him if he brought the flask.

Jack: "Yes, dear."

Eleanor grabs coat, grabs Jack's arm, and out they go (mind you, not signing out) into his beautiful car, off for a spin in the country.

Later—3 a. m. and four flasks too many.

Jack carries her into the house. Her hair is down; her dress is torn; her breath is smelling like the proverbial distillery. He enters the living room and staggers into a strip poker party, and so on into the night.

Now, that is the stuff we get, when it really is as the following:

Enters house at eight. Goes to show. Tries to pet, and can't. Leaves sorority house at eleven and wishes—oh, well, you know what he wishes. As well as we do.

"So be warned by my lot, which I know you will not—
And learn about women from me."
—KIPLING.

VERILY, verily, the ways of women are devious.

This prophet of the Higher Learning sojourning at this institution of Higher learning has journeyed forth into the byways and the harbors of life looking for the One woman. And seemingly at a certain place near the campus came he forth near the presence of one of the Opposite sex and was mightily struck by her bearing and Grace. Her Actions betokened those Properties which man looks for in the elusive beings of the inhabitants of Astarte. Struggling valiantly one morning to reach a First hour class, the Prophet noticed the presence of the much Desired woman. For many A. M.'s afterward the same woman was wont to take her Repast at a certain establishment noted for furnishing food for the Lowly student. And at various and sundry events, whereupon entering the portals of the Greeks, the Prophet noticed that the fair maiden of his dreams was very economical in her choice of viands. Never a morning passed but the same Menu was strictly adhered to. A cup of Chicory and the Toasted slice of bread constituted her Meal. And after Eons of time and by the grace of the Fates, circumstances conspired that aided the said Prophet to obtain a Carte blanche acquaintance with the ethereal Edmongarde. Here may the Prophet scatter seeds of wisdom concerning the ways of women. Oh, ye of Lower classes, be not deceived by the actions of women when they dine alone! For whereas this maiden, constituted Diana by her Birth, and named Legion by her Omnipotence, was merely playing the Game taught her forbears by the Lately known Eve. For on a Certain morn the Prophet encountered the presence of this Quasi-Feminist and invited Her with words of succor to enjoin Him in the Usual morning repast. (And during all of the time the Prophet remembered earlier occasions whereupon the Maiden adhered strictly to the call of the Calories as they should be entertained in the Earlier hours.) And so with the Wiles of her sex she accepted the challenge, and the Two of us seated ourselves before the widely known Board. Memory seemed to assail the Fair one, and she had to resort to the Comforts of the Menu to aid in the Nourishment of that Fair body which, surely, could not exist on the Mundane qualities of the usual Ham and Eggs, but which was more likely to sustain Itself on Angel food cake. Verily, verily, I say unto Thee—and I bid Thee, hearken unto the words of the Prophet—Beware of the ways of Women. For, with the Flair with which is bestowed upon the Daughter of the Gods, she began Ordering until the lowly Garcon had to journey forth to obtain the unusual Pencil and Pad to Transcribe her Wants. Brother, listen to One who has trod far Portions of the Earth, and hearken to the Parables of the Wise. Look not upon the woman who Dines alone. For if You do, the skin of Thy purse shall shrink, and the Shekels and Dinuros will pass from Hand to Hand. Verily, verily, Brother, the words I whisper into the Portals of Thy ear are the sayings of wise Men—that the Ways of Women are devious.

An Educated Bluff

"Say, friend, what's all these buildings for?" asked Freshman-on-Parade.
"It's the Knowledge-Mill for you and me," the Haughty Senior said.
"An' what's the knowledge for?" asked Freshman-on-Parade.
"Merely a bluff; merely a bluff," the Haughty Senior said.

"They give you this and say take that, an' make you like it, too.
You cram on English One and Five, an' flunk in History Two.
And four long years will find you full of superficial goo,
An' an educated bluff that works both ways."

"Explain the presence of the co-eds," asked Freshman-on-Parade.
"Mere penance for the doughty male," the Haughty Senior said.
"And why so many whiskered 'profs'?" asked Freshman-on-Parade.
"They say, variety has spice," the Haughty Senior said.

"For it's study this, an' that, an' attend the lectures all,
Which has not the least connection to the ever-whirling ball.
But a mere pedantic reason that's given for a stall,
An' an educated bluff that works both ways."

The dance started at 10; he got there at 11:30; the dance ended at 12; his coat did not match his pants; he was drinking water; his face had been scraped; he had three varieties of studs in his shirt; the shirt was making its third dance without having called on the laundryman; the tie was frayed; the collar would have looked very well on a horse; the pumps had been patent leather; his hair had been combed (last week). No, he was not from the country, neither was this his first dance, nor was he a climber. He was the last man that dressed around at the "house."

Freakish Fancies

TOME I.

Porch swings
Creak suspended from rusty chains;
Jade earrings glitter in the dim
Half-light that seeps
Unwanted through the living
Room window.
Four-wheel brakes run the gamut
Of scales phonetic;
Low roadsters are eels
That slither and crawl
Through a morass
Of street-cars and freshmen caps.
All roads
Lead eventually to inviting porches
And hidden nooks
In the sorority houses on Limestone

ALPHA XI DELTA

Modern . . modern . . modern.
Money and wealth.
Girls from the country
With hair fresh-bobbed;
Rouged lips and mascara-ed eye-brows.
Girls from the city
With sleek black hair,
Skin that is grey as the color
Of ashes of dead desires.
None but will fit in
A bungalow
Or kitchenette.
A symphony in half-doses,
Tea that is brewed in a samovar,
The coffee one drinks in the Creole
Quarter of New Orleans:
They are all that
And more.
Yet never they reach
The niche
Where one places the scintillant
Cocktail;
Never they grasp the witching charm
The fragile loveliness of Debussy.
Red
As the evening sun;
White
As the bride's trousseau;
Always the bold colors,
Never
The delicate
Half-tones.
Oh, for a lavendar lady!

Cosmopolitan urges.
Rustic inhibitions,
Complexes born of inferiority,
Or superiority;
Mix in a savage jumble,
Are flung out in a mad Slavic folk-dance
At 266 S. Limestone.
Freud's ghost sits in a corner
And leers at bandolined freshmen.
They haven't learned to drink tea—
Half these bandelined freshmen.
The pictures that hang
On the wall
Shrink noticeably year by year,
And shrinking,
Seem to protest
'Gainst the phonograph's blare
And the dancing,
The soft-spoken word and the gesture,
The eyes that bespeak adoration;
One sees when the crowd
Is dancing.

CHI OMEGA

Painfully acquired sophistication,
Parading of apish words—
"Melange," "dilettante," and "hoi polloi"—
Who of them knows
Bocaccio, Daudet, or Kreymborg?
Because it are,
It therefore am
Must or shall be.
The cinemas exist through the patronage
Of a million
Kindred souls.
Withal their taste in cookery,
Wassail,
And imported motors,
Oft betrays
Understanding;
Portrays in the glare of the spotlight
Knowledge of Cyrenaicism.
May we forgive them the "movie?"
Shall we forget the nonchalance
With which they couple
The names
Of Maeterlinck and Avery Hopwood,
Of Gorky and Sabatini?
When peach-blossoms bloom in the trees,
Shall we regret the orchids?
Enroll with Epicurus.
Which had you rather
Or go angling?

DELTA ZETA

"Far from the madding crowd",
They sit and enviously reach;
Contend
One with another;
Tilt for the smiles
Even of engineers,
Than which there is no whicher.
Vain attempts they make
To understand
The "Kernel."
Stumblingly they memorize
The names
Of sorority sisters.
Once a sister was heard to remark
"Veni, vedi, videlicet."
That was before she had taken exams;
Now she is with us no longer.
White were her cheeks
With something that glittered
In the flickering glare of the gas jet.
I wondered whether it was powder or quinine.
Now I am cured of the flu.
Over the seas
Came Argosies
Bearing ivory and apes and peacocks;
Marine caravans,
That halt at Three-Mile Oases,
Bearing fragrant garlic.
Nothing matters.
With
Bated breath they utter
The name of Harold Bell Wright,
Speak of Mynheer Florian Sappey.

Perhaps they would give you an answer,
Tell why they'd like to make eyes,

A pasture for cows and horses.
We have many cows;
We have many horses.
Our pasture is larger by far
Than we need for the cows and the horses.
The Kappas would fill our pasture
If stacked in rows of precision.
The Kappas would crowd out the cows;
The Kappas would crowd out the horses.

Neither is it extended.
The Kappa house is on Maxwell Street,
Not very far from the corner.
Maxwell Street is not long;

Blues.
Slow, mean, undulating blues,
Conducive to the Coogan and
Making the spine wriggle at weird minors.
Then, perhaps,
A Nocturne.
A Little Frog Sat on a Log is
Popular with them.
Oh, to be unlike the others.
To be Different.
To be a type.
To have personality, they care not
How.
And so they go not out
For activities thinking much effort
To be unseemly.
They would not break into the
Stroller combine,
Nor yet assail with flattery the High

As countless as the stars of heaven,
But in small quantities.
In sooth, one might think they aimed to
Be exclusive.

Crying out ineffectually,
Weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth,
Roll of drums,
The curtain rises on the play.
A Drama—
Or better, a Tragedy—
In one act, two acts, three acts, four acts—
How many K D's are there?
Under the Proscenium,
Down in the dressing rooms,
Cower and hide the supers;
"Often a bridesmaid, but never a bride."
The curtain descends.
There are no cries of bravo;
Never a soul
Applauds.
Even your best friends won't tell you.

Stream that flows unceasing past.
Last year on the bank
Stood willows;
And no one came to admire them.
This year a young poplar tree
Has arisen
Mute

The stream lingers close to the eddy;
The zephyrs stay 'mid the willows.

Form Letter to Any Girl

Lexington, Ky., ..., 192....

Dearest Mabel, Jane, Isabel:

Honey, I am sorry that I didn't answer your last two letters, as you so unjustly accuse me in your last letter (special delivery), but you know, dear, how busy we men are, especially we college men. Of course you wouldn't understand, dear, but a man must keep up with his social affairs, and with the Sigma Sigma Zee formal last week, and the Kappa Xi Gee informal house dance next week, I have hardly any time to devote to correspondence.

Mabel, Jane, Isabel, you needn't think that I would ever forget you, even though there are some beautiful women here. But none of them suit me as you, Jane, Isabel, Mabel, and our love is true and constant, even though we have been separated for two whole months, as you say in your letter. Of course, a man must have dates with women down here, because they would say that I didn't rate if I didn't, and that would never do for a pledge to Kappa Gamma Iota. It will be agreeable with me for you to have dates with boys in High School, but what the world you can see in that skinny John Guginheimer is more than I can see. However, suit yourself.

I am in an awful hurry, for I must go to a Tappa Kegg smoker tonight.

Yours, REGINALD.

THE CHAPTER LETTER

Dear Sisters in the Greek Alphabet:

Such and such a chapter of such and such a sorority extends its most cordial greeting to its dear sisters, and hopes that they have been as fortunate in securing such wonderful girls during the bid season just past as we have.

Of those that we have pledged, we wish to mention Vera Pretty, for whose very presence we must be thankful, even though her delicate constitution prevents her from accepting any of the heavy responsibility of the chapter in later years. Another is the daughter of a prominent judge in Hoboken, who came in very handy during rushing season, as with her elder sister, one of our most attractive actives, and one of the staunchest supporters of the Pan-Hellenic regulation, they assisted in maintaining the standard of honesty for the others on the campus to follow.

With such material as this and our sister, Iam Vane, who in spite of her fatigue from the social whirl, makes her sweet, sincere presence felt on the campus, and peppy, enthusiastic Never Worry, the life of the dorm, we are looking forward to the most successful year in the history of our chapter.

Yours in the bond of .....

Potpourri

A college education has a few advantages, at least. We think this one worthy of mention:

A college man necks and pets, puts out a pin, and, in passing, calls it an evening.

His noncollegiate brother, under the same circumstances, buys an engagement ring and, in later years, calls it—deleted by the censor.

* * *

Frosh: "I see where they are going to give college courses through the air."

Old Grad: "That's nothing new. We all got our degrees through hot air before Marconi was born."

Anyone except the students at State will tell you that it is the wildest university in the country. The studes will be more considerate—they will prove it.

* * *

How to Recognize Them.

If she seldom speaks, she is a Kappa.

If she is easily thrilled, she is a Tri Delt.

If she never speaks, she is a Chi O.

If she wants something, she is a K. D.

If you can stay late, she is an Alpha Gam.

If she yells at you across the street, she is an Alpha Xi.

If you are not sure who she is, she is a Zeta.

If you don't know who she is, she is a Delta Zeta.

The University of Kentucky, affectionately known as "State" to its few grads, announces that it is the Only University in the United States that offers to its students a thorough course in parimutual betting, having two race tracks in Lexington to give its students practical experience in the gentle art. Send your boy to State, and let us teach him how to beat the ponies.

Unmistakable Evidence of Their Identity.

If she arises when Phi Delt Bungalow is being played, she is a Kappa.

If she has attended a boarding school, she is a Tri Delt.

If you can't see her for the "grand old gang," she is a Chi O.

If she is continually humming "The White Star of Sigma Nu," she is a K. D.

If she is disappointed in love, she is an Alpha Gam.

If she is with a freshman, she is a Zeta.

If she wears galoshes and a slicker, she is a Delta Zeta.

If she has a Phi Tau in constant attendance, she is an Alpha Xi.

"Isn't it aggravating as the dickens to lean on the doorbell at Patt Hall after 11 o'clock week-end night?"

"Yeah—but not half as exasperating as the co-ed who makes you miss the finale, then runs you all the way to the Hall, so she won't be campused, and then, when she gets you there, won't give you the chance to lean against the bell."

And another favorite saying of the co-ed is, "Familiarity breeds content."

Frosh: "Louise Burks talks a lot, doesn't she?"

Senior: "Yeah; but she isn't to blame—she had diphtheria when she was a freshman."

Frosh: "Well, what's that got to do with it?"

Senior: "Dumbell, don't you see? The doctor made a mistake, and vaccinated her with a Victrola needle."

Walsh: "They tell me 'Herb' Carter has gone broke."

Towles: "What's the matter? Did the KENTUCKIAN fail?"

Walsh: "No; the reason is, swift women and slow horses."

Freshman: "Why do they have all the school dances in the gym?"

Fresherman: "Because it's the only proper place to shake dumbells."

THE KENTUCKIAN WANTS TO KNOW:

From what variety of nut the Kentucky Kernel comes?

Where Strollers stroll, with whom, and how late?

How "Turkey" Hughes can be the only four-letter man at the University when we have R. O. T. C. Bethurum and Y. M. C. A. Kavanaugh?

If girls went out for track, could they let out the hems and wear their old evening dresses?

If one acquires the Eskimo Pie swing, can he attempt the Su-Ky Circle?

Forrest Bell has left us; is that why Sterling Towles?

Flapper: "Who are the good-looking men going rabbit hunting?"

Flopped: "Why, that's the R. O. T. C. out for drill."

OH, TELL US—HOW LONG?

If it took the fish in Mammoth Cave twenty years to go blind because they didn't use their eyes, how long would Robinson Crusoe have been able to talk had Junius Millard and Jimmy Darnell been on that island with him?

Very Near the End

You will never guess why we are writing this. You see, it is like this: We need half a page, and we haven't got it. So Bill (that is the business manager of this aforesaid book that we are trying to end), says to me, "Herb, why in the h— (yes, these were his exact words) don't you write something, and take up the space?"

Well, here we go. You ask, where? We say to you, turn over to the "L'Envoi," and the poet will end the book for you in great style. Now, as this is very near a half a page, and I am just about to quit; but I decided that this should have an ending, also. So here I am again, trying to dope out a "cracking hot" finale, as Emmet would say. Well, here it is. If you have got this far, I have fooled you, so console yourself with this—that he who laughs last laughs best, and turn over and read the ending, and you will have finished the 1925 KENTUCKIAN.

L'Envoi

Now, Alma Mater, is our journey ended,
Mute is our minstrel, silent is our song;
Sweet the bard's voice whose strains our course attended,
Pleasant the paths you guided us along.
Now must we part. Oh! words full of sadness,
Changing to pensive retrospect our gladness!

U. of K., farewell! We part, perchance, forever;
Scarce may we hope to meet with thee again.
But e'en though fate our fellowship may sever,
University, will aught to mark that tie remain?
Yes! there is left one sad, sweet bond of union,—
Sorrow at parting links us in communion.
