PREFACE.

Since the publication of our last City Directory, Lexington has made satisfactory progress in every direction.

Important changes have been made in our organic law. Under the new Constitution, a new charter, applicable to cities of the second class, in which class are Lexington, Covington and Newport, has been enacted by the Legislature; and at the election in the ensuing November, all the municipal officers will be elected under that charter. During the last two years under the present Mayor, Hon. Henry T. Duncan, the brick streets have been greatly increased; a new and nearly perfect system of bookkeeping with admirable checks has been adopted; the facilities for the education of the children, white and black, have been enlarged and the public credit of the city strengthened.

The changes in the control of the railroads have been to our further development; the Ky. Union has passed out of the hands of the Receiver; has been reorganized and under the name of the Lexington & Eastern Railroad Company, is bringing into close connection with the city a large, important and growing section of this State; the Belt Line has been purchased by the C. & O, and will be of much benefit; the Ky. Central now forms a part of the L. & N. system.

Handsome buildings have been added by the Ky. University on the campus and by the A. & M. College on its grounds, and all our educational institutions have prospered.

The Water Works Company; under the management of its deservedly popular superintendent, Mr. S. A. Charles, has quadrupled the capacity of its resorvoir, and put the city beyond the possibility of a water famine.

Our banks passed through the financial depression unscathed and demonstrated their solvency and the wisdom and skill of their management.

Our population we estimate at 36,000, which shows a steady increase, and buildings have gone up in every section of the city. Our past has been prosperous, our present is satisfactory and we believe confidently in our future.

In this work we furnish the proof of our progress and we commend it to the reader for further information.

LEXINGTON, KY., August 20, 1895.
