Wright*, Robert Yeager.

Chairman Adelstein gave the following introduction to President Otis A. Singletary:

We will first have an address by President Singletary and I thought it wise, in greeting him, that I say a word or two about the President. I know that many of you are familiar with his academic record, but to refresh the memory of some people and to place it before others, let me remind you that he received the doctorate from Louisiana State; he was an instructor of history at Texas in 1954 and became a full professor in 1960. On his way to becoming a full professor, he received awards for teaching excellence in 1958 and 1959. He served as Associate Dean of Arts and Sciences in 1958 and 1959. He was Chancellor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro from 1961 to 1964. He was Director of the Job Corps from 1964 to 1966. He was Vice President of the American Council on Education from 1966 to 1968. He was Vice President of the University of Texas from 1968 to 1969 and became the Eighth President of the University of Kentucky in 1969.

As you can see, he has not perished but he has published: two books, one, The Negro Militia and Reconstruction, published by the University of Texas Press in 1957; the other on the Mexican War published by the University of Chicago Press in 1960. In addition, he has authored several monographs including "The South in American History," published in 1965 and now in its second edition, and another on "The Civil War and Reconstruction." In 1968, while with the American Council on Education, he published a work entitled "Freedom and Order on Campus."

I give you the President of the University of Kentucky, Dr. Singletary. President Singletary's address follows:

Thank you very much. That is the second testimonial I have had in the last 36 hours. For those of you who read the newspaper I would just like to say to you that I enjoyed this one more than the article in the Sunday Courier Journal referring to me as "river boat gambler" and "super jock."

*Absence explained

Thank you very much and good afternoon to you. It is my pleasure once again to be here for this first meeting of the Senate and to greet you and welcome you back to the campus. I hope you have had a pleasant and restful summer and that you are ready to go again for yet another school year.

It is always difficult to decide what to say to a group with such diversities as are represented in this room but I thought that perhaps this year the best service I could render would be to give a survey -- to touch the high spots on our campus last year -- and to take a very brief look at some of the problems that I suspect await us in the year ahead. Before moving into the body of these comments, however, I would like to make a personal observation. I have now finished four years in this job and as I begin my "graduate work" at the University of Kentucky I want to express my appreciation to many of you in this room and on this campus for the help and assistance you have given me -- help and assistance that ran not only to the furtherance of my own education, which I think does continue, but, more important, for your many and real efforts in helping to fuel and therefore move this great engine of this enterprise that is known as the University of Kentucky.

I would like to begin by making some comments in the area of students and their activities. Any such discussion begins nowadays with taking stock of numbers. The situation has become fairly stable at this institution. We are going to have a modest increase this year in head count over last year. This is a somewhat different situation than we have been accustomed to in the last decade. Up to two years ago we were having nine and ten per cent increases in students at the University. Last year it leveled off to where we had a very small increase and that is what we are experiencing again this year. It is my belief that the head count will show a gain of close to 300 bodies. When we convert that to full-time equivalence, we probably will have a lowering of enrollment over last year, but that remains to be seen. At any rate, it appears that for the second consecutive year we are out of the business of having to deal with a vast influx of additional students over those we had the year before, and I welcome that. The latest figures that I saw put the enrollment at something like 19,890 or so as of last Thursday. The Community Colleges' enrollment is something around the 12,800 figure. All in all, the head count, in toto, will be something in excess of 32,000 students.

The analysis of these figures is of some interest I think. On this campus we have seen increases, for example, in Agriculture, decreases in Arts and Sciences, some in Business and Economics, a decrease in Education, an increase in the Graduate School, and an increase in Home Economics. As you look at the picture in the aggregate, it is interesting to note that our new students are up a little and that our total returning students are up some more. So it is in both categories of new students and those who were here and are coming back that we have increases in numbers. I would say further that part of what is happening around the nation at large is not peculiar to us here and that there are reasons for it that I think can be identified. On this campus there is no question that our enrollment limitations have had some effect. As you know, we have been limiting the enrollment in such areas as Medicine and Dentistry and Law. This has been extended for us -- for example, Nursing and Allied Health. We are looking at it in still some other areas. We are talking about hundreds of students who could not come here this year in just the Nursing-Allied Health areas. So the whole impact of the limitation of enrollments is being felt somewhat in the growth of the student body at the University.

You have heard me before on the other topic - that the cost is getting to be a far more serious factor than it has been in determining a student's ability to come here. And when one adds to the cost the uncertainty that has been accompanying the federal aid business, which is a very big business indeed in student aid programs, one gets an additional complication.

It should come as a surprise to no one in this room that many students are simply disenchanted with what they see and are opting for other things. And I think that is fine. If that is their choice, that makes it simpler for that group although it does not relieve us of the responsibility of asking the question "Why?" And I think other preferences clearly do enter into it.

There are some other implications as far as students are concerned, implications that run primarily to the financial area, that ought to be mentioned. I think the big problem runs generally to a changing public attitude that does, in effect, place on the student and his family a heavier portion of the actual cost. If you are not familiar with the recent Carnegie Report on this topic, I encourage you to look at it. It is an old recurrent theme of "Who should pay?" "Who should go?" There is no clear-cut solution in sight, no policy that is being made clear or definitive. But in the default of those decisions, what is happening is that the cost is escalating rapidly and it is going to continue to have its effect. Tuition on this campus for in-state students went up $75 last year and another $75 this year -- one hundred fifty dollars in the biennium -- the largest increase ever imposed in any one biennium in the history of higher education in this state. And there is no indication yet of what is likely to be the resolution of that for the next biennium.

Student aid: I am happy to say we will salvage something out of the confusion attendant to federal programs and, for better or worse, we are about where we were last year in terms of ability to provide student aid. If I sound optimistic about that stagnation, let me say it could have been a great deal worse. We thought just a few months ago that it would be a great deal worse. But events have changed that picture, I think, for the better. The difficulty is that while the dollars remain essentially the same, there are more students and costs have gone up. One of the footnotes that I hope will be of interest to you -- although we remain very modest in this endeavor -- is to increase scholarship aid for academically talented students, the so-called superior student, if you want to use that old catchword. We have increased again this year the limited number that we have been able to provide for in the Honors Program and I am hopeful that, for the first time, we are going to be able to make some small amount of money available to the Dean of Undergraduate Studies' Office for the recruiting of superior students to help them come to UK, superior students who are not in the Honors Program. And I think that is all to the good.

Other campus affairs in the student area lead me to the following observations. The Kernel had a fairly good year last year in its fiscal and legal independence. We did hope to implement the Report of the Housing Policies Commission which is yet to be that, in practice. We got through the revision of the Student Code without the annual flap that accompanies that exercise. I hope that we have improved the recreational opportunities for a lot of our students by the opening of the Seaton Building which, I am told, is being very heavily used, a fact that should surprise no one. You should be aware that the Student Affairs Program, called NEXUS, is in operation. Actually, you phone in and dial a question. If you ask the right question, you can get the response needed.

I will end my comments in the student area by saying that I hope and believe the general situation on this campus is somewhat improved. I personally welcome what some people decry and that is the lessening and lowering of frictions on this campus. Make no mistake about my position. I am glad the decibel count has gone down. I would welcome, and do welcome, the return to some civility and, on the whole, consider this past year a very fine one.

I move now to make some comments about faculty and faculty activities during this past year. We explain our activities in rather traditional terms and I think that I want to approach it in that way. But first of all I would like to talk a little about teaching, if I may. One of the myths that dies hard, perhaps not at all, is that teaching is not a respected activity at this institution. It continues to be a primary pursuit although not the only one. The sooner we get it out of the context of "either/or," the better off all of us will be. The student evaluation of teaching is still considered to be an integral part of the annual review of faculty members and, while nobody in this room is going to believe it, I will tell you that administrative decisions about faculty are made on the basis of several factors, teaching being one of them.

Let me talk a little bit about the qualitative aspects of teaching here. Some of our teachers are singled out and are given awards for good teaching. I think this is a symbolism that should be preserved. I was happy to see that we moved in the past year to recognize graduate teaching assistants -- the first time that graduate teaching assistants have been singled out and recognized for superior teaching -- a young man in Mathematics named Mike Slosser, was selected. This is the third year we have had the graduate summer orientation program. The summer program for teaching also involves a number of faculty people and is also having its effect. Let me give you a footnote here that I think is of interest. Members of this faculty either taught or conducted research at 14 colleges and universities other than in this country -- in Europe, Asia, Africa, the United Kingdom, and the West Indies, among others. We hosted visiting scholars from Colombia and France, from the Netherlands, Hong Kong, Nationalist China and, Zanzibar. The teaching function in this University produced more than 5,000 degrees last year if one includes the Associate degrees in the Community Colleges. When one looks at not just the general education that goes on, but the number of doctors and the number of dentists here, and the number of teachers and people who are going to have a direct effect on the mainstream of life in this Commonwealth, it is, I think, a very significant figure. There is one figure that sticks in my mind -- and I pass it along to you -- you probably already know -- about one-third of all students who are engaged in higher education in the Commonwealth of Kentucky in public and private institutions are being taught by the faculty of the University of Kentucky. Nearly a third. That, in itself, is a significant figure.

Let's say something about research which continues, as it should, to be a primary activity of the University faculty. The activities are too numerous to list and I will not bore you with a long catalog. I would simply generalize by saying that projects of particular interest to the world of scholarship, in general, and to the state of Kentucky, in particular, are being carried on in nearly all of our major colleges by individuals or by groups of faculty members organized into institutes of one kind or another. For example, in Agriculture alone there are more than 180 projects under way at this point in time. You should be reminded of the birth of a new national journal published on this campus entitled "Research in Higher Education," published by our Department of Higher and Adult Education.

Closely allied to the research activity is a figure that I think is also interesting. In fact, it has been in the press fairly recently. It has to do with extramural support -- a reflection, I think, of the quality of this faculty. These are the dollars that are attracted to this University and to its programs because of the competence and interest of members of this faculty. The generalization I would make is that the University of Kentucky has had the best year in its history in terms of attracting these dollars. I need hardly tell you that this makes me very happy because it comes at a time when other institutions around the country are finding it to be a very difficult time and many of them are suffering severe cutbacks. I think that is worthy of note.

The Research Foundation has had an all-time high, something in excess of 17 million dollars has funneled through that organization -- more than a million dollars over the year before. The University, with respect to federal dollars coming in, ranks now, or did in this last census, forty-sixth nationally. The point I would make to you here is that there were only four institutions in our region, two in North Carolina -- Duke and Chapel Hill -- and two in Florida -- Gainesville and Miami -- that received more federal monies than did the University of Kentucky. Once again I think that is directly related to the stature of this faculty.

The service function runs the same way. In an attempt to catalog this I would remind you that our service activities range very wide, as they always have, and I hope will continue to do. From our Agricultural Center in Thailand to the Pharmacy College's drug abuse interest, from teaching at the federal Youth Correction Center in Ashland to our service to the Lawyers' Information Service, the various programs we have in the way of counseling assistance to state and local governments, these are the things that have always been the responsibility of a state university and land-grant college and I hope will continue to be.

There are some other activities in which members of this faculty have been engaged that are worthy of some note. Here in Kentucky, for example, members of this faculty have served or are serving as Presidents of the Kentucky Nursing Association, the Kentucky Library Association, the Kentucky Federation on the Council for Exceptional Children, and the Kentucky Psychiatric Association. Beyond the boundaries of the state the members of this faculty serve as chief officers in the National Association for Education in Journalism, the Rural Sociological Society, the South Atlantic Modern Languages Association, the Regional Conference in Educational Administration. A member of this faculty is on the Board of Governors of the American College of Surgeons. Another is on the Advisory Board of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. These are the more visible, symbolic testimonials, I think, to a certain level of developed competence and expertise. Eight of our faculty members were selected last year for Hayes-Fulbright Scholarships. A member of our Sociology Department was selected as the outstanding teacher on the Council of Family Relations. Three members of this faculty were selected for American Council and Learned Societies post-doctoral research grants. A member of our History faculty was chosen a Fellow by the National Endowment for the Humanities. One of our mathematicians received the Sloan Fellowship in basic mathematics research. I am not just trying to detail a catalog for you. What I am trying to say to you by that listing is this: the evidence seems to me clear that the faculty is continuing to take seriously and to perform the various activities that are their primary concerns. I mean research and I mean public service. And in the process of doing these things, they are receiving widespread recognition for the quality of much of what they do.

We turn now to developments during the year in the academic program. In the area of Undergraduate Studies there are some things that I would like to talk about in the Undergraduate Dean's office. As you may know, John Stephenson, Dean of Undergraduate Studies, has been selected this year for an ACE Internship. In his absence, Professor Dan Reedy will be Acting Dean of Undergraduate Studies. We have recently appointed Dr. Robert Sexton to head up the Office for Experiential Education which is something new and experimental, something the interest for which grew out of a study by Professor Jesse Harris. I would say that the Undergraduate Office also had some major activities last year that were brought to fruition and that should be mentioned. We distributed an Advisers' Handbook. We have had three printings of it, something more than 1,100 copies. Another publication - Special Opportunities in Undergraduate Studies - was also completed. More than 10,000 copies have been distributed to high schools and guidance counselors. The aim of this publication is to call to the attention of the students or prospective students the unique and different and unusual academic opportunities at this University. We have had at work during the year a Committee on the Freshman Year. A report is being worked on now, as I understand it. The Undergraduate Studies office also has been the moving force behind the orientation program of teaching assistants, of the teaching award that I mentioned, and of the TA and the instructional improvement program. One other item in the undergraduate area - I think it is on your agenda today - a review of the Honors Program and some definition or redefinition of it.

Moving to graduate education I would like to share with you some information that I was made privy to just recently that I think is interesting. For a three year period from 1968 to 1971 the picture that emerges is that U.K. ranked something like 72nd among doctoral-producing institutions in the United States. In the southern region, a larger number of doctorates were awarded by Florida, Florida State, Chapel Hill, Tennessee, Georgia, L.S.U., Virginia, North Carolina State, Alabama, Vanderbilt, and Tulane. In the same period we awarded something like 1,775 or so Master's degrees which ranks us well below a hundred in institutions for that. One indication that this suggests is that graduate education is not being overemphasized at this institution. It could indicate some other things: the lateness with which we came into the field, the lack of adequate resources. As far as the graduate program is concerned, you may recall that we have reactivated the Ph.D. program in Educational Psychology and Counseling, we have approved internally a Ph.D. program in Health, Physical Education and Recreation, and a Master's in Public Administration. This is internally. They have not yet been approved by those external agencies which are required to do so. There are several that are now at one or another stage of consideration: a Master's degree in Education in three areas, Ph.D. programs in Philosophy and Communications, and I believe in Behavioral Sciences. I remind you at this point of the role of the Council on Public Higher Education. It must approve all graduate programs for any state institution. I remind you further that they still have in effect a moratorium on new programs and that does not suggest that our desire to have one nor our ability to clear it internally necessarily will bring it into being. Other items having to do with the graduate program that I would call to your attention are the two fairly important committee reports dealing with graduate education - the Wagner Committee Report having to do with guidelines for the evaluation of graduate programs - a business that we are going to be into fairly heavily - and the Mitchell Committee report having to do with the role of graduate education in the University.

I would remind you of another unsettling development and that is the decreasing support at the federal level in graduate fellowships. The NASA Fellowships are gone, the NDEA Fellowships will be phased out next year. After 1973-74, essentially no federal fellowship support is expected and the impact on the graduate program is going to be fairly severe, another manifestation of what I meant earlier when I talked about the student financial problem.

Still another development that I think is cause for some favorable reaction is the receipt by this University of a grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission - a million dollars plus. This is a satellite broadcasting program. What is significant about it is not just the amount of dollars, not just another grant to announce, but that it came to the University of Kentucky in spite of very fierce competition from other institutions and because of a very real interdisciplinary effort, in the best sense of that term, on the part of members of this faculty. I think that the ability of this institution to respond in a very short time and to prepare a proposal that beat out such institutions as Ohio State, Penn State - two examples of Appalachian-related institutions that were very interested in this thing - was, in no small measure, due to the effort that went into the production of that proposal.

One last item that has to do with the Graduate School is that Dean Royster has recently issued a very weighty publication having to do with publication. It is a compilation of the books and articles and referee journals published by members of the faculty in the last four years. I will simply remind you that there are more than 2,500 items listed in there and I am told by the Dean that he sees this as an annual effort in the future.

Another area of interest which I think is worthy of mention is the fact that we redesignated the Department of Music as the School of Music this past year. We also witnessed the most interesting development in sometime in the dissolving of departments in the College of Pharmacy. I am compelled to comment that this may be the first such group to legislate themselves out of existence since the Continental Congress.

The University Press of Kentucky has had a good year. The Library has had some success, I am happy to say, in the acquisition of some valuable manuscript collections. The John Sherman Cooper papers have been given to us as have Governor Chandler's papers and I think these will upgrade and strengthen our holdings in 20th Century politics. We are seeking some others and have, I think, every reason to be optimistic.

We don't notice very often what is going on here in the extended education programs. You might be interested to know that the Evening Class Program last year reached more than 1,500 students, an enrollment that I suggest to you is larger than the total student body in all except one of the state's 14 private institutions. In the Independent Study Program, which is a fancy title for correspondence work, more than 3,600 students enrolled last year - some for credit, some for non-credit, some even working on high school courses. In the Extended Class Program that goes throughout the state more than 1,800 students were enrolled in 130 separate courses offered at towns and cities throughout Kentucky. In summary, these extended educational opportunities run to something like 248 courses, 24,000 students and over 400,000 contact hours. This is not an insignificant activity. In addition, in our Conferences and Institutes program some 137 programs were conducted last year that reached more than 22,000 people in and beyond the confines of Kentucky.

I think there are some activities of a special nature that require some additional comment and one of these is our Medical Center, certainly an important and active enterprise. In the area of program development, for example, the new Family Practice Program, which hopes to be in its new quarters in the new year, is proceeding; building up the faculty and staff, developing the curriculum, enrolling the families and working out the necessary affiliations around the state. We have cleared, internally, the Midwifery Program -- the B.S. in Nursing. I don't know whether you have heard about something called the Kentucky January Project in Allied Health. The entire faculty and student body are involved in 14 different locations in Kentucky -- out in the field for three weeks -- a dozen or so students at each location, highly successful both for U.K. and for the various communities. I am told that many of the places where those students were actually working were eager to hire them for those jobs when they finished their program here. I don't know whether you know anything about the Clinical Associate Program, a two-year program for training physicians' assistants. These are associates that work directly under the supervision of the physician. This is a federally funded program and was funded for 10 students. It should be a matter of some interest to you that we actually received in excess of 4,000 applications for the first class. They are also working on their aspect of the Master of Public Administration program as it relates to health care in cooperation with the College of Business and Economics. They are also at work developing a program for the Center for the Aging which is tied in with the gift that was announced last year. I am happy to say that the new Veteran's Hospital has been activated. As of July 1 we had something like 235 patients in that facility. The staff is being phased in. It will probably take something like a year to reach its full complement. I will simply say to you now that the facilities and the equipment in that facility are superb. The people who are knowledgeable about these things tell me that some of the x-ray and other highly specialized equipment is as fine as exists anywhere in this country.

The University Hospital continues to be one of the Commonwealth's most important medical care facilities. The many people who are arguing over little minor annoyances of one kind or another lose sight of the importance of that. Just consider, for a moment, that we will admit some 17,000 to 18,000 patients as in-patients this year for 130,000 patient days; that the out-patient clinics in that hospital will deal with something like 215,000 ambulatory patients in Kentucky; that some 32,000 people will come through that emergency room and, startling though this statistic may be, some 1,500 babies will be born in that hospital in the course of this year. It is a thriving, busy, booming place that provides very real services to this Commonwealth in many ways. One of its really significant areas is in the amount of indigent care that it provides for those who are not covered by those kinds of programs that seem to be available to so many people in our society.

Let me comment briefly about some organizational changes in the Medical Center. The College of Nursing has organized itself into administrative divisions. I have already mentioned that the College of Pharmacy has reorganized. There have been extended controls in the student area on enrollments as I told you earlier and they are facing the very serious problem there, as well as elsewhere in the University, of the loss of their capitation grants. The amount of dollars involved is substantial and the problem that it raises is serious.

Of particular interest to this group should be a report that has just recently come into my hands which is being called the Noonan Report in honor of its authoress. The Report deals with the question of whether this institution needs some new criteria developed for promotion and tenure of Medical Center faculty. Discussion is beginning on this topic and will continue until some resolution to this question is reached.

It is also to the credit of the Medical Center that they are engaged fairly extensively in long-range plans. They are looking hard at what is in store for them and what they want to be doing. There is a 10-year projection under way by Dr. Bosomworth and members of his staff and we will be receiving that, I think, in the very near future. Related to that, I can tell you that the Council on Public Higher Education has created a Health Sciences Education Advisory Council to deal specifically with the problems of the two medically-related institutions in the state and that many of our problems and concerns now have a point of focus when they leave this campus that they have not had in the past.

One last word, and that is that the former Chairman of the Senate Council, Dr. Sheldon Rovin, has left us. As many of you know he has gone to Seattle where he has become Dean of the School of Dentistry at the University of Washington. He was not only a former Chairman of the Senate Council, he was also the seventh Dean to come out of our relatively young College of Dentistry and whatever else that does for us it tells you that that college has become a kind of "launching pad" for Deans. It speaks well for us that our product seems to be very much in demand in other places.

Still another topic that I think you ought to hear something about has to do with the Community College System. I can tell you that that System is continuing to carry its burden. It is continuing to perform its basic mission and its own growth continues perceptibly. In the past eight years that System has experienced a 330 per cent growth and last year there were more than 12,000 students enrolled in the program. Ninety-nine per cent of them were from Kentucky, 51 per cent of them were women, 61 per cent of them were in the transfer program. The other 39 per cent of them were in the technical and vocational programs. I will tell you that they also had nearly a 10 per cent minority enrolled which is better than this University has been able to do by a large amount. And the best record of all was performed in Jefferson Community College where 17 per cent of its student population was minority.

You might be interested and I think not surprised, to know that the technical and vocational enrollments are growing; that new programs are being implemented as resources are made available. For example, last year at Southeast they added the Allied Health offering, Maysville added a nursing program, several institutions went into a particular kind of training in real estate. This year new programs are being offered at several institutions in tax preparation. Incidentally, this tax preparation is being done in conjunction with the Internal Revenue Service.

On the administrative front, as far as the Community College System is concerned, we have seen in the past year the creation of division chairmen on various campuses and the adoption of the Kelley Committee Report in which 22 of the 25 recommendations about that System were accepted and I am pleased to tell you that all 22 have either been implemented or are in the process of being implemented now.

The Rules of the Senate of the Community College System have been approved and distributed, modeled very much on those of the Lexington campus. Other developments in the Community College System that I would report to you: Elizabethtown is working very closely with Fort Knox personnel in helping some finish high school and others to prepare for college. There are more than 500 people involved in that program; and down at Hopkinsville participation in a consortium that is known as Eagle University. We also opened the Southwest Jefferson Branch last year and had some 300 students in there in its first year. You may have seen in the papers that we have had a consultant study the Glasgow-Carrollton situation where we have been authorized for sometime to open and operate Community Colleges but for which no funding has been received. The Consultants report that the lack of funding is probably deserved and they recommend against the creation of these institutions. That will be a matter for the Legislature to address itself to.

There are other things one could say but I have given you some inkling of the kinds of activities that are going on in the Community College area.

And now to the physical facilities problem, if that is what it is. You are probably aware of it as you walk about the campus. We have recently moved into some 11 1/2 million dollars worth of construction that includes the Animal Sciences Building and the HPR Building; there is a new building on the Madisonville Community College campus. These figures do not include either the Veterans' Hospital -- which comes out in a figure that is unknown to me -- I have seen it all the way from 17 to 23 million dollars, in terms of buildings and equipment, which is federal money -- and of the Stadium, which is essentially a state bond issue, at least nine million of it is. As you may have read in the paper, it is supposed to open this Saturday. Currently under construction on this campus are another 12 million or so dollars worth of facilities: the King Library addition which I am sure many of you have seen since school started. I must comment about that. It is one of those rare facilities where they have built a building that appears to bear some relationship to the buildings around it. I am delighted. It is absolutely thrilling. As a matter of fact I am more pleased with that than I am of most anything we have built. It does look like it belongs there at least in terms of the other buildings that are around it. The Biological Sciences Building over on Rose Street is now something more than a hole in the ground. The addition to the hospital is making it very difficult to get in and out over there I am told. The Family Practice Unit across the street is progressing.

In addition to these things, we have approved for construction a Tobacco and Health Building which is now in design, a Vocational-Technical Building at the Jefferson Community College, a Library that is vastly overdue for that same facility, and the second building for the Ashland Community College -- something between 13 and 14 million dollars worth of construction that is in the works. In the planning stage are several others: the Fine Arts Building which we are long overdue for and in great need of; the Health Sciences Learning Center to decompress the hospital and to centralize somewhat more the teaching function in the Medical Center; the Lexington Technical Institute -- not many know that is here. It is here. It is in the middle of this campus. You just can't find it -- and the Nursing Building. The significance of this, I think, runs to two points I would like to make. One is that when we know what is going to be built out of those things being proposed, I think we can say, with some reasonable degree of certainty, that the building program at the University of Kentucky is in pretty good shape for the next decade. I think that the physical plant at this institution will be pretty generally adequate to what I foresee, as the demand that is going to be put on us, and I think you ought to have some awareness of it. That does not mean that everything is great. It means that our facilities are going to be adequate -- which is no mean thing in itself.

The other point I would make is that there probably is no other area of activity in which you get so little in the way of immediate reward. Somebody said to me the other day that building a building in a public university is not unlike the act of conception of a baby elephant. It is accompanied by a lot of noise but it takes about two years to get any results and, indeed, I will tell you that that is pretty much the way it goes. Nonetheless, the building program is going forward, and I think that we all should have some measure of satisfaction with it.

Another area that I want to report to you about very briefly, because it has to do with some dollars, is the U.K. Development Program. I think I told you a year or so ago that we were getting started on that program. I remarked to you then that after a survey at the University of Kentucky, as compared to other state universities around, we were the lowest in all categories of private fund-raising. The Development Council has been at work. Now departed Vice President Glenn Creech was at work; Bob Toll of the Development Office has been at work, the Alumni Association has been at work; and we have, I think now begun to bear some fruits.

The Fellows Program has grown to where we have something like 160 University of Kentucky Fellows. The total commitment of this group, over the long haul, runs into the millions of dollars. The chairmanship of this committee last year by Rex Blazer was a very important step in getting it moving.

This Annual giving was just organized here in the last 18 months or so. In the last fiscal year we raised in excess of a million dollars. The bulk of this has been designated for particular colleges, departments, or purposes and the undesignated amounts are then allocated to the University by the Development Council. It is new, it is getting organized, it is going to get better, I suspect, and once again we are indebted to the work of a man like David Scott, who is an alumnus of this institution and is also the President of Allis Chalmers Corporation in Milwaukee and who is termed as the National Chairman for our annual giving program.

There were a number of special gifts in this last year and you have heard or read about most of them: the gift of the John Y. Brown Jrs. of the Center for the Aging which is a million dollar gift to be matched by the state with another million dollars. An alumnus of this institution, Mr. Hudnall, who was a geology student here and went to Texas at the right time I take it, has made us a gift of $100,000 as a challenge gift for matching the Alumni annual giving; the Development Council has, itself, raised another $100,000 and we are sure of two consecutive years of challenge grants there. Others I could mention: we know of a fairly sizeable bequest that will be coming to the University as soon as the estate is settled. Just last week I thought we finally had the money for a Planetarium we have been trying to get ever since I have been here and I regret to tell you that as of Friday we lost it. What I would like to say to you, though, is not just that we are getting some money but that that money has real impact on this institution. And, in addition to the money that went to specific programs or departments or colleges, I will tell you that we have been able to take this money and to put some of it into financial aid for needy students; we have been able to use a little of it for that superior student recruitment I told you about earlier; I have been able to allocate some to Undergraduate Studies in order to support some speakers and visitors to this campus. I still believe that we do not do as well as we ought to do in that kind of traffic. We have allocated some little amount of it for research equipment which somehow never seems to survive our budgets around here. Some has been allocated for library and art acquisitions, which are, and continue to be, in short supply; the continuation of the Alumni Programs, Fellowships, teaching awards, and now this year moving from one to three Alumni Distinguished Professors on this campus, a number that I hope to see grow as the dollars in this program grow. These are some of the uses to which that kind of money can be put. What I would say to you, in summary, about the program is that these dollars are critical to us. We have greater flexibility in their use and we can put them at points of strategic importance. I would say further that they have a University-wide impact and, hopefully, they are growing. In a relatively short time we have moved from a position where there simply wasn't any significant gift money available for this University's use to now where I can say, with some comfort, that it is a million dollar a year program. And that, I believe, to be a significant development.

Very hurriedly I will tell you some of the things that have happened in the administrative area. I could tick off a long list of appointments. We have one new Vice President, Ray Hornback is with us in the University Relations job. In the course of the year we named several new Deans: Dean Hardy of the Law School, Marjorie Stewart named as Dean of Home Economics, Ernest Witte was renamed as Dean of the College of Social Professions. We simply are not going to let him go anywhere, do anything. He is going to stay right here, presumably forever and ever. I have also mentioned to you, since it is not, I think, widely known, that we have named Paul Willis, the Law Librarian, as Acting Director of the Libraries. Donald Diedrich has been named as the Academic Ombudsman; Robert Grieves, the Director of the Water Resources Institute. We have named some 14 chairmen or acting chairmen of departments, four Associate or Assistant Deans, and there are several Search Committees at work for the Director of Libraries, the Tobacco and Health Institute Director, and for a Dean of the College of Social Professions. You may also be interested to know that Dr. Robert Moore has been appointed as Assistant to the Athletics Director in charge of the tutorial program. He has a Cornell Ph.D. with some teaching experience; was a former manager, I am told, of the basketball team at the University of Kentucky. Those qualifications would seem to fit him very well for that assignment.

I will call to your attention that a number of our offices have been affected by a reorganization that was announced in the summer. There is no point in covering old ground but I would simply say to you that the reorganization was occasioned by the departure of two Vice Presidents. We filled one position and redistributed the work load of the other and a number of jobs were affected. Al Morris' job as Vice President for Administration was affected, in the sense that he took on a considerably different range of activities than he had had before and his is becoming more a line than a staff position, although it is clearly some of both. The reorganization resulted in the creation of a new position in my office, that of Executive Assistant, in which Mr. Don Clapp is now functioning. It affected my own position in eliminating some activities that were reporting to me and putting in its place the Planning function and the Institutional Studies function which I think should be more closely related to the budget process than they have been in the past. Basically, what we are trying to do is to continue to see that the administrative work at the University is done. We are trying to bolster, in this case, with what savings can be effected, the Undergraduate Studies area, which is where we propose to put any of the money that we are able to salvage; and to free my time up some more to be out and about, both on this campus and around the state. We will just have to see how that works.

I call your attention to the fact that in the past year we changed a number of items in the Governing Regulations and that we went into Phase II of the Administrative Regulations. I am sure that you have been able to take your time reading those if you have at all. I will simply say to you that before you finish scoffing, those are fairly important documents in terms of what the University's present posture is on many matters that are of interest and concern to the faculty. I would single out Paul Sears, who is here, and say to all of you that Paul took the leading role in getting this material brought together and in the form to get it approved. One of the things about the Administrative Regulations is that it is too expensive to give everybody a copy so we have designated certain offices to receive them. Do not be possessive of those. Those of you who have them -- they are not for your eyes only. Share them with your colleagues. If there are members of the department who want to look at them, let them look at them. There are no great secrets in there. The idea was to get the information out. We simply cannot afford to give that publication to everybody here but we have tried to put them in a number of places where they can be readily accessible to all members of the faculty and staff.

There will be some other publications coming out soon and you will be interested to learn we are about to have a Retirement Handbook and that we will have a Faculty and Staff Handbook. I think in this year we will see that forthcoming. I would remind the emeriti personnel that we did issue a policy statement on the privileges of faculty members and I think that those of you who are not aware of that ought to look at it. There is another area in which there has apparently been some misunderstanding and that is this business of post retirement appointments. I issued a Policy Statement last week to clarify that and that Policy Statement directs that all employees be retired as of age 65. It sets forth in detail when post retirement appointments may be made. I would like to review very briefly these points. They may be made in limited numbers and for the benefit of the University. That is how they are envisioned; and none for more than one year at a time under the University's regulations. In no case will they go beyond age 70. There is some misunderstanding and I am told that a number of faculty believe that it is a right if one chooses to stay on from 65 to 70. That clearly is not either the intent or wording of the policy so I call it to your attention, for whatever it is worth.

I would like to commend this Senate for a number of things that you did in the last year. I have a long list and will skip them in the interest of time but pick out two things. I think your adoption of the Faculty Code was a good move. I hope we will never have much use for it on this campus but I think it was generally well received by those who are interested in the affairs of this University. Also I want to say that I think a very significant development in this past year was the reorganization of this Body resulting from the Report of the Jewell Committee, altering the structure of the Senate. The creation of the new committees, the Charges that have been drawn up, the gathering together of the Committee membership, the ad hoc committees to be established -- I am sure you will have your hands full with the business of completing this reorganization.

The year in front of us deserves some attention. There are external and internal concerns and I will do nothing more than mention them to you now. In the external area: this is a legislative year and I need hardly tell you there are two things that run through that, one being the kinds of legislation that will affect higher education on a wide range, and the other is our budget request which is due in the Council about one month from now and which we will be wrapping up for production very shortly. The only thing I will say to you now is that the outlook for recurring dollars is fairly grim. We have had no great encouragement to think that the situation will be other than that. I will be back to you later to try to keep you informed about the course of that business.

Another external matter of some import is what I think will be our relationship with the Council on Public Higher Education. It has new authority and, with the revised legislation giving it more responsibility, we are going to go through a time in which all the institutions in this state will have to adjust to this new relationship. It is my intention, and I hope you share it, that this institution cooperate to bring about state-wide planning and coordination. We know the time is here and I think that is the intention generally.

Still another item of concern is the impact of the two new institutions of higher education that have been brought into the state system. They are now a part of the resource distribution in Kentucky. They have very real needs, as you know and I know and as they know. The problem is still what it has always been: the resources of the state are limited and the needs of the institutions virtually unlimited, and the question comes down to the rate at which institutions will be brought into what is called "full funding." The impact of these two additional institutions is a matter of some concern to us all.

Internally, a number of items are on our agenda for next year. We are working on the Affirmative Action Plan. I can report to you that the representatives of HEW having visited us last November have not been heard from since. They were to give us their report under the guidelines in 30 days. I have an uneasy feeling that they will not give us equal time to reply. Nonetheless we have gone ahead and we are proceeding to prepare an Affirmative Action Program for this institution. I want to tell you that I am deeply appreciative of the manner in which you and your colleagues received that problem and have begun to deal with it. I am not ready yet to say anything about figures - none of us are - but I am told that the new year found a much improved situation on this campus. We have plenty of room for improvement as I have told you before and our aim is what it has always been and that is to do somewhat better than we have done.

Another item that will be with us this year is the question of the reorganization of the College of Arts and Sciences. A year ago I asked Dean Gallaher to make some serious exploration of this question and in mid-August I received his tentative report and I am told that the document is in the mail now. It suggests a number of alternatives we ought to begin to consider. I think that this document will undoubtedly become the basic document for a dialogue on this campus as we come to some kinds of specific recommendations.

No report of this kind would be complete without some reference to faculty performance review. This is a perennial topic. I am sure you will be interested to know that as a result of a survey we took last spring with 359 responses from faculty members, only 14% per cent wanted to do away with it altogether although some of those were vehement in their comments. About one-fourth of those who responded wanted to keep it pretty much the way it was. The important fact is that over 50 per cent of the faculty wanted to keep it but to modify it. And that is what we are doing. There are a number of recommendations which we are going to consider and we will get on with it. I hope that this year we might get started earlier and get completed earlier in that process.

We have to do something in the way of program evaluation; we must take some kind of look at our present tenure situation and see what alternatives may be in front of us in terms of dealing with that situation; we must take a look at the Extension Program and see if we are doing all the things we need to be or maybe some we should not be doing. All these are items on our agenda.

Let me conclude by admitting that I suspect I have said a great deal more to you than you wanted to hear about a number of things. I apologize for the time and I apologize for the detail in some cases. However, I don't think it is bad for you, as faculty members, to occasionally stop and get some sense of the broad range of things going on here. My basic message to you, whether it came through or not, is that a great deal is happening in the University and a great deal remains to be done at the University of Kentucky. This University is caught up in many of the same social currents that are afflicting other institutions in this society. As I have said before and will continue to say, we have problems, but, in the main, the University of Kentucky is in relatively good shape. I, for one, continue to believe that it is a much better institution than many people in Kentucky and some not in Kentucky think it is. We are, I think, on the way to recovering some sense of balance in this institution. We seem to be getting away from that recently popularized notion that "anything worth doing at all is somehow worth doing on the University campus." We have become aware that the University's limited resources are grossly inadequate for solving problems in this society. We may even be moving into the significant insight that our more important contribution to this society is not to attempt to run some kind of "fix it" factory; rather, it is to turn out people, people who are equipped to deal with problems in ways that are likely to produce results rather than merely symbolic acts that all too often turn out to be exercises in futility.

In another sense we are facing what can only be described as straitened financial circumstances, bending our efforts to continue to perform those basic and important functions for which we were created and for which we are sustained. Given the circumstances of our time and our place, it is my personal belief that we here in Kentucky are doing these things reasonably well. And if this is true, the credit is largely due to you and to the many others like you on this campus who continue to believe in the intrinsic worth of this institution and who do real solid work in the support of that belief.

Thank you.

President Singletary was given a warm ovation by the Senators.

The minutes of the meetings of April 23 and April 30, 1973 were approved as circulated.

On behalf of the College of Agriculture, Professor James D. Kemp, Department of Animal Sciences, presented a Resolution on the death of Professor J. O. Barkman.

JOHN ORVILLE BARKMAN

J. O. Barkman, a retired professor and extension specialist in dairy manufacturing at the University of Kentucky, died March 16, 1973 at the age of 85. He was born on September 14, 1887 at Osborn, Ohio. In addition to his wife, Margaret Elizabeth Schulte Barkman, he is survived by two sons and one daughter, ⁽¹⁾nine grandchildren and eleven great grandchildren.

Professor Barkman graduated from Ohio State University in 1915, where he majored in Dairy Manufacturing. He was employed by Highland County Creamery

(1) Deceased children: Mary Barkman Mangione
Robert L. Barkman (was living at the time of Professor's death)

Company from July 15, 1915 until December 15, 1915. From January 16, 1916 until May 30, 1919 he was employed by the H. M. Owens Creamery Company at Falmouth, Kentucky. He came to the University of Kentucky on June 1, 1919 as Instructor and Extension Specialist in Dairy Manufacturing. Professor Barkman remained active in teaching and extension in this field until his retirement November 1, 1957.

Professor Barkman's 38 years' service on the professional staff of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture were particularly distinguished by his outstanding service to the dairy manufacturing industry of Kentucky. Examination of some of his old grade books reveals that many of his students became and are presently well-known dairy industry leaders of Kentucky and of the nation.

Perhaps Professor Barkman's greatest contribution resulted from his aggressive and effective extension work with the dairy manufacturing industry personnel of Kentucky. His personality, his sincere interest in the people with whom he worked, and his leadership qualities established a legend of "Prof" Barkman among the leaders of the industry, which resulted in the creation of a tremendous amount of good will toward the College of Agriculture. It is appropriate to quote from a public statement made by one of these dairy industry leaders: "Professor Barkman's personal qualities of leadership have been outstanding. He has been able to bring together around a conference table managers of competing companies for the purpose of improving the quality of Kentucky dairy products."

Formal recognition for his dedication to public service has been given to Professor Barkman in many ways:

1. At the end of 25 years as Superintendent of the Kentucky Cream Improvement Association he was presented a Lord Elgin watch by the Association.
2. He was appointed Advisory Member of the Board of Directors of the Dairy Products Association of Kentucky.
3. At a special program honoring him on his retirement in 1957, Professor Barkman was presented with a DeSoto Station Wagon, funds being provided by contributions from more than 500 friends. At this same program he was commissioned a Kentucky Colonel by the governor of the Commonwealth. This program was sponsored by Central Kentucky Manufactured Milk Improvement Association, Kentucky Cream Improvement Association, Dairy Products Association of Kentucky, University of Kentucky Dairy Science Club, and the Dairy Section of the Animal Industry Group.
4. In 1957 remodeling and modernization of the dairy processing pilot plant was completed, and it was renamed "Barkman Dairy Products Laboratory."
5. He was awarded the 50-year Service Plaque by the Alpha Gamma Rho agricultural fraternity.
6. He was elected to membership in Gamma Sigma Delta, the Honor Society of Agriculture.

7. During World War II he was designated Official Federal Grader of shipments of all butter and cheddar cheese made in Kentucky.
8. His excellent services to the Kentucky dairy industry plus his close friendship with the leaders of that industry were mainly instrumental in procuring a state appropriation for the construction of the Thomas Poe Cooper Dairy Products Building on Rose Street in the early 1930's.

J. O. Barkman was a member of Mary Queen of the Holy Rosary Catholic Church and of the Legion of Mary.

On behalf of the College of Agriculture, Professor James E. Criswell, Department of Agricultural Economics, presented a Resolution on the death of Professor John H. Bondurant.

JOHN HARVEY BONDURANT

Dr. John Harvey Bondurant, Professor of Agricultural Economics for 40 years, died as a result of an accident at his home on April 16, 1973. Dr. Bondurant was appointed to the University faculty in 1932 and served the University, its students, his community and the public of Kentucky faithfully and well until his death. He retired from the University at the age of 70 in 1971, but continued his interest in research projects and was very active in agricultural organizations. Even after retirement, his services were very much in demand by farm groups.

Dr. Bondurant was born on a farm in Calloway County and was educated in the local public schools, the University of Kentucky, from which he received the B.S. degree in Agriculture, and Cornell University from which he received the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees. Prior to joining the University staff, Dr. Bondurant was principal in the Marshall County School System.

Dr. Bondurant was untiring in his research, teaching and public service. He was always cheerful, friendly and helpful to those around him. In professional life, he had many friends. At home, he was an exemplary husband and parent.

Dr. Bondurant's accomplishments were many and varied. In 1932, he served as state project manager for the U.S. Resettlement Administration. Over 50,000 acres were purchased in the Land-Between-the-Lakes in Western Kentucky as was the land in Otter Creek Park near Louisville, and part of the land in Pine Mountain State Park and Pennyryle Forest State Park. He pioneered in the organization of the Kentucky Association of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers and served the organization as secretary-treasurer from its inception in 1949 until his death. The Association recognized Dr. Bondurant as Appraiser of the Year in 1969.

During his career, he served several committees of state government. In 1965, he was a member of the committee which revised and consolidated planning and zoning laws. In 1966, he was a consultant to the State Department of Revenue in revision of rural land values. He served on a committee in 1970 to prepare a statute to implement constitutional amendment which provided that farmland can be assessed on the basis of agricultural use value.

Dr. Bondurant was the state representative for the annual U.S. Department of Agriculture cost and return studies of family farms. He wrote and published numerous articles and bulletins on land use and management.

Dr. Bondurant's expertise as a land economist was recognized internationally. In the early 1960's, he served the Joint Commission of Rural Reconstruction of the Republic of China as a consultant in the designing and implementation of the internationally acclaimed Taiwan land reform program.

Dr. Bondurant was a member of the First United Methodist Church, Alpha Zeta, the American and Kentucky Societies of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers, Gamma Sigma Delta, the American Agricultural Economics Association, and the International Agricultural Economics Association.

Through the years hundreds of students and private citizens have benefited from his teaching and advice. Kentucky is a better place because of John Harvey Bondurant.

The Faculty of the College of Agriculture wishes to express to Mrs. Bondurant and her sons, John T. Bondurant and David M. Bondurant, their deep sympathy and feeling of mutual sorrow in the loss of this beloved teacher, associate and friend.

I move that this Resolution be spread upon the minutes of the University Senate and that copies be sent to Dr. Bondurant's family.

On behalf of the College of Arts and Sciences, Professor Joseph A. Bryant, Jr., Department of English, presented a Resolution on the death of Professor James H. Cobb.

JAMES HARRELL COBB, 1906-1973

On August 3 Professor James Harrell Cobb, a member of this faculty for thirteen years, died on his way to class. Professor Cobb formally retired at the end of the spring term, but at the request of the Department of English he had agreed to teach one of his courses, A Survey of Western Literature from the Greeks through the Renaissance, during the 1973 summer session. He was 67 years old.

Teaching was half of Professor Cobb's life. By his own account, his mother reared him on Bible stories and myths, and he decided in the second grade to become a teacher of such things. From that early commitment he never wavered. Scholarship was the other half of his life, and he never wavered from that either; but almost all of his scholarly activity was deployed to the immediate benefit of his teaching. A former colleague put it well when he described Professor Cobb as "a man of scholarly, ivory-tower tendencies, who prepared his classes with medieval thoroughness and was deeply interested in his students."

Professor Cobb did work for his bachelor's degree at Indiana State College, where he majored in English, history, and Latin. From there he proceeded to Indiana University and by 1931 had completed a master's degree in English. He began his teaching career at his alma mater, Indiana State, and went on from there to hold appointments at a number of other institutions including Montana State College, Kendall College, Kansas Wesleyan College, Central College, Toledo University, Vanderbilt University, Yankton College, Southeast Community College, and the University of Kentucky.

Early in his career Professor Cobb's interest in English Literature gave way in part to interests in biblical languages and literature and in languages generally. He pursued his study of these subjects at a variety of institutions including the University of Utah, Garrett Biblical Institute, the University of Chicago, Hebrew Union College, Brandeis University (where he studied archaeology), and Butler University. Within a space of ten years after leaving Indiana he had added to his knowledge of Latin, French, and German, a solid knowledge of Italian, Spanish, Greek, and Hebrew, as well as a respectable reading knowledge of Russian. He had also become sufficiently competent and distinguished as a biblical scholar to be asked by the Encyclopedia Britannica in 1943 to revise their articles on Bible and religion and in 1952 to make revisions in their articles on non-Christian religions.

Professor Cobb came to the University of Kentucky system first in 1960 as an instructor at Southeast Community College in Somerset, where he taught English for four years and advanced to the rank of Assistant Professor. In 1964 he joined the faculty here on the Lexington campus, and taught a number of courses including the Survey of Western Literature, Literature of the Old Testament, Literature of the New Testament, and the Survey of English Literature. During his Lexington years Professor Cobb's published scholarship was limited mainly to book reviews in scholarly journals; but he found time to write the University's extension courses in the survey of western literature and in literature of the Bible, all of which continue in use. Professor Cobb's students at Kentucky were sometimes awed by the depth and breadth of his learning, and they recognized his abiding interest in teaching them and regularly sought to be in his classes. His colleagues in the English Department regarded him as an honest man of firm opinions and forthright utterance who met the world with compassion and a sense of humor. For those who knew him well, his example was the most persuasive aspect of his teaching.

The Senators stood for a moment of silence in tribute and respect to Professors J. O. Barkman, John H. Bondurant, and James H. Cobb and in acceptance of the Resolutions.

Chairman Adelstein welcomed the new members of the Senate, asking them to stand and be recognized; he recognized the following Senate Council members: Professors W. Garrett Flickinger, Paul Oberst, Constance P. Wilson, Stanford L. Smith, Stephen Diachun, Roger Eichhorn, Joseph Krislov, and J. R. Ogletree (who is completing the term of Dr. Jacqueline A. Noonan, resigned from the Council). He recognized Mrs. Cindy Todd the permanent secretary in the Senate Council Office, Dr. Gifford Blyton, the Parliamentarian, Dr. Elbert Ockerman, Secretary of the Senate, Mrs. Kathrynne Shelburne, Recording Secretary of the Senate, Dr. Homer H. Burkett, Sergeant at Arms, and Mr. James Alcorn, Sergeant at Arms at Large. He stated that the latter two gentlemen would be responsible for seeing that the Senators signed the roll and that they did not occupy the back two rows in the Court Room.

He reminded the Senators of the "No Smoking" sign posted at the rear of the auditorium and asked that they refrain from smoking during Senate meetings.

He also reminded the Senators of the purge rule which provides that a Senator be purged from the Senate if he has three unexplained absences during an academic year; that should a Senator find it impossible to attend a meeting, he should call Mrs. Shelburne in the Registrar's Office and report his absence.

With respect to Council activities for the summer Chairman Adelstein reported that it had met with the President for a planning discussion of many matters about the University;

that the Council had met approximately twice a month during May, June, July, and August;

that it had assigned some 200 members of the Senate to the 13 standing Senate Committees; that it had drafted the charges for each of these 13 committees and had met with the Committee Chairmen to give them these charges;

that it had discussed with the Committee Chairmen procedures and issues for the coming year;

that the composition of these committees had been circulated by the President's Office and that an addendum would be forthcoming from the Senate Council announcing the student and ex officio membership of the Senate Committees;

that the Council had considered and approved, pending final Senate approval, several Rules changes;

that it had considered numerous programs, namely, the Master of Science degree in the Department of Social and Philosophical Studies; the Master of Public Administration; a major in Linguistics; a Bachelor of Science degree with a major in Vocational, Industrial and Technical Teacher Education; and that some of these would be circulated shortly;

that the Council was instrumental in establishing a Search Committee to search for a new Dean of the College of Social Professions to replace Dean Witte who is retiring; that it is working on the 1976-77 Calendars for the University - the University Calendar, calendars for the Colleges of Law, Medicine, and Dentistry - and that these will be circulated as soon as they are ready.

He listed the dates for the remainder of this year's Senate meetings as October 8, November 12, and December 10, 1973, and stated that effective January 1, 1974 Dr. Stanford L. Smith, the present Vice Chairman of the Council, would assume the duties of the Senate Council Chairman and the Chairman of the Senate.

He announced that it was tentatively planned that the October agenda of the Senate would contain the General Studies Report chaired by Dr. Sidney Ulmer, and the Report on the Status of Graduate Students, primarily dealing with teaching and research assistants, and chaired by Dr. Richard Lowitt; that the November agenda would contain the Report of the Promotion and Tenure Committee which is in its final drafting stage and which is chaired by Dr. Joseph Krislov, and a proposal from the College of Education on Selective Admissions.

On behalf of the Senate Council, Dr. Stanford L. Smith, Vice Chairman of the Council, presented a motion that Section I, sub-section 5.2, second paragraph, Rules of the University Senate (circulated to the faculty under date of August 21, 1973) be changed from ". . . the election shall be held during the Spring Semester . . ." to ". . . the election shall be held during the Fall Semester . . ." The University Senate approved this change of when the faculty election to the Board of Trustees is to be conducted.

On behalf of the Senate Council Dr. Smith presented a motion that the University Senate recommend to the President that the Honors Program be designated a separate educational unit, subject to the same policies and regulations as departments, with a Director responsible to the Dean of Undergraduate Studies; and that the Governing Regulations be amended accordingly. This had been circulated to the faculty under date of August 27, 1973.

Debate followed in which the question was raised of whether or not this proposal was a means of obtaining job security for the faculty involved. Following explanation that this proposal was not unique to this campus but paralleled that of the Military and Aerospace Science Programs, that it would be establishing a unit wherein its faculty would enjoy the same rights and privileges (which it does not now have) as all other departments, units or programs on the campus the Senate voted to close debate on the question. The Senate then voted to recommend to the President that the Honors Program on this campus be designated a separate educational unit, subject to the same policies and regulations as departments, with a Director responsible to the Dean of the Undergraduate studies, and that the Governing Regulations be amended accordingly.

The Senate adjourned at 5:10 p.m.

JOHN ORVILLE BARKMAN

J. O. Barkman, a retired professor and extension specialist in dairy manufacturing at the University of Kentucky, died March 16, 1973 at the age of 85. He was born on September 14, 1887 at Osborn, Ohio. In addition to his wife, Margaret Elizabeth Schulte Barkman, he is survived by two sons and one daughter,⁽¹⁾ nine grandchildren and eleven great grandchildren.

Professor Barkman graduated from Ohio State University in 1915, where he majored in Dairy Manufacturing. He was employed by Highland County Creamery Company from July 15, 1915 until December 15, 1915. From January 16, 1916 until May 30, 1919 he was employed by the H. M. Owens Creamery Company at Falmouth, Kentucky. He came to the University of Kentucky on June 1, 1919 as Instructor and Extension Specialist in Dairy Manufacturing. Professor Barkman remained active in teaching and extension in this field until his retirement November 1, 1957.

Professor Barkman's 38 years service on the professional staff of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture were particularly distinguished by his outstanding service to the Dairy Manufacturing industry of Kentucky. Examination of some of his old grade books reveals that many of his students became and are presently well-known dairy industry leaders of Kentucky and of the nation.

Perhaps Professor Barkman's greatest contribution resulted from his aggressive and effective extension work with the dairy manufacturing industry personnel of Kentucky. His personality, his sincere interest in the people with whom he worked, and his leadership qualities established a legend of "Prof" Barkman among the leaders of the industry, which resulted in the creation of a tremendous amount of good will toward the College of Agriculture. It is appropriate to quote from a public statement made by one of these dairy industry leaders: "Prof. Barkman's personal qualities of leadership have been outstanding. He has been able to bring together around a conference table managers of competing companies for the purpose of improving the quality of Kentucky dairy products."

Formal recognition for his dedication to public service has been given to Professor Barkman in many ways:

1. At the end of 25 years as Superintendent of the Kentucky Cream Improvement Association he was presented a Lord Elgin watch by the Association.
2. He was appointed Advisory Member of the Board of Directors of the Dairy Products Association of Kentucky.
3. At a special program honoring him on his retirement in 1957, Professor Barkman was presented with a DeSoto Station Wagon, funds being provided by contributions from more than 500 friends. At this same program he was commissioned a Kentucky Colonel by the governor of the Commonwealth. This program was sponsored by Central Kentucky Manufactured Milk Improvement Association, Kentucky Cream Improvement Association, Dairy Products Association of Kentucky, University of Kentucky Dairy Science Club, and the Dairy Section of the Animal Industry Group.

SEP 13 1973

4. In 1957 remodeling and modernization of the dairy processing pilot plant was completed, and it was renamed "Barkman Dairy Products Laboratory".
5. He was awarded the 50-year Service Plaque by the Alpha Gamma Rho agricultural fraternity.
6. He was elected to membership in Gamma Sigma Delta, the Honor Society of Agriculture.
7. During World II he was designated Official Federal Grader of shipments of all butter and cheddar cheese made in Kentucky.
8. His excellent services to the Kentucky dairy industry plus his close friendship with the leaders of that industry were mainly instrumental in procuring a state appropriation for the construction of the Thomas Poe Cooper Dairy Products Building on Rose Street in the early 1930's.

J. O. Barkman was a member of Mary Queen of the Holy Rosary Catholic Church and of the Legion of Mary.

James Harrell Cobb, 1906-1973

On August 3 Professor James Harrell Cobb, a member of this faculty for thirteen years, died on his way to class. Professor Cobb formally retired at the end of the spring term, but at the request of the Department of English he had agreed to teach one of his courses, A Survey of Western Literature from the Greeks through the Renaissance, during the 1973 summer session. He was 67 years old.

Teaching was half of Professor Cobb's life. By his own account, his mother reared him on Bible stories and myths, and he decided in the second grade to become a teacher of such things. From that early commitment he never wavered. Scholarship was the other half of his life, and he never wavered from that either; but almost all of his scholarly activity was deployed to the immediate benefit of his teaching. A former colleague put it well when he described Professor Cobb as "a man of scholarly, ivory-tower tendencies, who prepared his classes with medieval thoroughness and was deeply interested in his students."

Professor Cobb did work for his bachelor's degree at Indiana State College, where he majored in English, history, and Latin. From there he proceeded to Indiana University and by 1931 had completed a master's degree in English. He began his teaching career at his alma mater, Indiana State, and went on from there to hold appointments at a number of other institutions including Montana State College, Kendall College, Kansas Wesleyan College, Central College, Toledo University, Vanderbilt University, Yankton College, Southeast Community College, and the University of Kentucky.

Early in his career Professor Cobb's interest in English Literature gave way in part to interests in biblical languages and literature and in languages generally. He pursued his study of these subjects at a variety of institutions including the University of Utah, Garrett Biblical Institute, the University of Chicago, Hebrew Union College, Brandeis University (where he studied archaeology), and Butler University. Within a space of ten years after leaving Indiana he had added to his knowledge of Latin, French, and German, a solid knowledge of Italian, Spanish, Greek, and Hebrew, as well as a respectable reading knowledge of Russian. He had also become sufficiently competent and distinguished as a biblical scholar to be asked by the Encyclopedia Britannica in 1943 to revise their articles on Bible and religion and in 1952 to make revisions in their articles on non-Christian religions.

Professor Cobb came to the University of Kentucky system first in 1960 as an instructor at Southeast Community College in Somerset, where he taught English for four years and advanced to the rank of Assistant Professor. In 1964 he joined the faculty here on the Lexington campus, and taught a number of courses including the Survey of Western Literature, Literature of the Old Testament, Literature of the New Testament, and the Survey of English Literature. During his Lexington years Professor Cobb's published scholarship was limited mainly to book reviews in scholarly journals; but he found time to write the University's extension courses in the survey of western literature and in literature of the Bible, all of which continue in use. Professor Cobb's students at Kentucky were sometimes awed by the depth and breadth of his learning, and they recognized his abiding interest in teaching them and regularly sought to be in his classes. His colleagues in the English Department regarded him as an honest man of firm opinions and forthright utterance who met the world with compassion and a sense of humor. For those who knew him well, his example was the most persuasive aspect of his teaching.

RESOLUTION ON THE DEATH OF DR. JOHN HARVEY BONDURANT

Dr. John Harvey Bondurant, Professor of Agricultural Economics for 40 years, died as a result of an accident at his home on April 16, 1973. Dr. Bondurant was appointed to the University faculty in 1932 and served the University, its students, his community and the public of Kentucky faithfully and well until his death. He retired from the University at the age of 70 in 1971, but continued his interest in research projects and was very active in agricultural organizations. Even after retirement, his services were very much in demand by farm groups.

Dr. Bondurant was born on a farm in Calloway County and was educated in the local public schools, the University of Kentucky, from which he received the B.S. degree in Agriculture, and Cornell University from which he received the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees. Prior to joining the University staff, Dr. Bondurant was principal in the Marshall County School System.

Dr. Bondurant was untiring in his research, teaching and public service. He was always cheerful, friendly and helpful to those around him. In professional life, he had many friends. At home, he was an exemplary husband and parent.

Dr. Bondurant's accomplishments were many and varied. In 1932, he served as state project manager for the U.S. Resettlement Administration. Over 50,000 acres were purchased in the Land-Between-the-Lakes in Western Kentucky as was the land in Otter Creek Park near Louisville, and part of the land in Pine Mountain State Park and Pennyrite Forest State Park. He pioneered in the organization of the Kentucky Association of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers and served the organization as secretary-treasurer from its inception in 1949 until his death. The Association recognized Dr. Bondurant as Appraiser of the Year in 1969.

During his career, he served several committees of state government. In 1965, he was a member of the committee which revised and consolidated planning and zoning laws. In 1966, he was a consultant to the State Department of Revenue in revision of rural land values. He served on a committee in 1970 to prepare a statute to implement constitutional amendment which provided that farmland can be assessed on the basis of agricultural use value.

Dr. Bondurant was the state representative for the annual U.S. Department of Agriculture cost and return studies of family farms. He wrote and published numerous articles and bulletins on land use and management.

Dr. Bondurant's expertise as a land economist was recognized internationally. In the early 1960's, he served the Joint Commission of Rural Reconstruction of the Republic of China as a consultant in the designing and implementation of the internationally acclaimed Taiwan land reform program.

Dr. Bondurant was a member of the First United Methodist Church, Alpha Zeta, the American and Kentucky Societies of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers, Gamma Sigma Delta, the American Agricultural Economics Association, and the International Agricultural Economics Association.

Through the years hundreds of students and private citizens have benefited from his teaching and advice. Kentucky is a better place because of John Harvey Bondurant.

The Faculty of the College of Agriculture wishes to express to Mrs. Bondurant and her sons, John T. Bondurant and David M. Bondurant, their deep sympathy and feeling of mutual sorrow in the loss of this beloved teacher, associate and friend.

I move that this Resolution be spread upon the minutes of the University Senate and that copies be sent to Dr. Bondurant's family.

10 ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

August 27, 1973

TO: Members, University Senate

FROM: The Senate Council

RE: AGENDA ITEM: University Senate Meeting,
September 10, 1973.

RECOMMENDATION: The University Senate recommends to the President that the Honors Program be designated a separate educational unit, subject to the same policies and regulations as departments, with a Director responsible to the Dean of Undergraduate Studies; and that the Governing Regulations be amended accordingly.

RATIONALE: The recommendation that the Honors Program be designated as a separate educational unit was proposed in a report by the Ad Hoc Committee for the Evaluation of the Honors Program, appointed by Dean John Stephenson and chaired by Professor Bruce Langlois. This recommendation has been approved by the Director and faculty of the Honors Program, the Honors Program Student Advisory Committee, the Senate Advisory Committee on the Honors Program, the Senate Council, and the Administration.

The proposed amendment will in effect formalize an administrative change that took place in the fall of 1971, when jurisdiction of the Honors Program was transferred from the direct authority of the Vice President for Academic Affairs to the new office of the Dean of Undergraduate Studies, in accordance with the recommendation of the committee which proposed the office of the Dean of Undergraduate Studies.

The status of the Honors Program will be altered from a de facto educational unit to one specifically authorized by the Governing Regulations. As a result, the Honors Program would be identified as a unit equivalent to a department; and with respect to its administrative program, the Dean of Undergraduate Studies would be allowed to function as the equivalent of the Dean of a college; the Director as a department chairman; and the faculty as a department faculty.

RE: AGENDA ITEM: September 10, 1973 Senate Meeting Change in Date of Election of Faculty Member to the Board of Trustees, University Senate Rules, I, 5.2.

As a result of approval of the Jewell Report, the Secretary of the Senate now is required to conduct four elections in the spring semester (Senate, Undergraduate Council, Graduate Council, and Faculty-Trustee) and one in the fall (Senate Council).

To distribute the heavy workload more equitably and to give voters some relief in the spring, the Senate Council recommends that the pertinent portion of Section I, 5.2, be changed as follows:

Section I, 5.2 Election of Voting Faculty Members of the Board of Trustees [second paragraph only; delete bracketed portion; add underlined portion.]

Elections shall be held only during the academic year. During years when a regular term expires (June 30), the election shall be held during the [Spring] Fall Semester. If at any time a faculty . . .

The Senate Council believes that it is more logical to change the date of this election than of any other one, and that a faculty trustee elected in the fall (probably December) could still continue to take office in July as prescribed in the Rules.

MEMO

TO: Senate Council

FROM: Mike Adelstein

RE: Change of election date for faculty member to the Board of Trustees

The present rule (I, 5.2) stipulates that the election for the faculty member to the Board of Trustees shall be held during the Spring Semester. I propose that we change it to the Fall Semester.

The Registrar's Office conducts five elections: Senate, Senate Council, Undergraduate Council, Graduate Council, and Faculty Member to the Board of Trustees. Due to the change of the election of the Undergraduate Council from the fall to the spring at our last Senate meeting, the present schedule looks like this:

Fall Semester
Senate Council

Spring Semester
Senate
Undergraduate Council
Graduate Council
Faculty-Board of Trustees
(two of three years)

In order to relieve pressure on Ms. Shelburne, to distribute the workload more evenly, and to provide voters with some relief, I suggest that we recommend to the Senate that the Faculty-Board election be changed to the fall. Because this election would be conducted late in that semester, I do not believe that it would be necessary to change the present July 1 date for taking office.

SUBJECT: Enforcement of "No Smoking" regulation
in Law Building Court Room

Although a request was made for observing the regulation prohibiting smoking in the Law Building Court Room, a number of Senators chose to ignore the announcement much to the discomfort of others. I was particularly aware that a gentleman near me was experiencing breathing difficulty and learned he was allergic to cigarette smoke; although he was able to endure the discomfort until Dr. Singletary had completed his presentation, he left immediately after as a result of his breathing difficulty.

Cannot the "No Smoking" regulation be enforced at Senate meetings? To paraphrase your memo of February 23: Senate members should not violate the regulations nor permit others to do so. I call upon you, in your role as delegated chairman of the Senate, to remind the Senators as often as is necessary during the course of each meeting, that the health and safety of all, there should be no smoking in the Senate "chamber".
