*Absence explained

Chairman Adelstein presented Dr. Otis A. Singletary, President of the University of Kentucky, who addressed the University Senate. The context of his address follows:

Mr. Chairman, and Members of the Senate. I want to thank the Chairman for the invitation to come here and speak with you this afternoon. The invitation is mainly and primarily a matter of budget, and particularly the operating budget of the University for next year. There are a number of other topics that I think it appropriate to touch on and will do so.

You probably read over the weekend in the paper about massive administrative reorganization. The author of that article is here with us today. Mr. Arder, I am glad to see you, and delighted to have you with us. I would like to explain, for his benefit and yours and my own, just exactly how massive this reorganization appears at the moment. This goes to the point of fact that two Vice Presidents of the University have decided to leave us and to take on other assignments. Glenwood Creech, as you have no doubt read or heard, has assumed the Presidency, or will assume it very shortly, of Florida Atlantic University. The exact date of his departure has not been set; he wants some leave time and I think it is a very wise choice before undertaking his new duties, and I would guess that he will officially be gone from here by July 1. A. D. Albright, as has been reported and widely discussed in the press, has accepted the executive directorship of the Council on Public Higher Education, and I would like now to make it clear for the record that both of these gentlemen have had my full support in their respective positions, and both go with my blessings -- not that I think that means much to them -- but at least they have them anyway. I think Glenwood is ready and, by this own action, apparently willing to undertake the headship of an institution, and having been close enough to one to have seen what it is like, if he is that foolish, I think we have no choice but to wish him well as he moves to Florida. A. D.'s going to the Council is, I think, a stroke of good fortune for the entire state. I believe that that job is likely to be more important in the months ahead than it has ever been before. I think we are coming to a fairly critical time in Kentucky about the role of that Council as it affects the institution. Further, it is my belief, for whatever it is worth, that he is going into that job when, for the very first time, there is some real significant chance for it to operate with some degree of effectiveness. He is going to be able to build a staff; he does have a kind of consensus among the institutions in the state that should, I believe, make his job easier, and I think there is fairly widespread general agreement that this is an important time for us to get on with some serious statewide planning in Kentucky. I can't think of anybody who is more familiar with our problems in this state or who will be better at securing, and evaluating, and interpreting the kinds of information on the basis of which decisions that are going to have to be made in Kentucky, will be made. Without saying more about that I will just repeat for you that the departure of two vice presidents will require some adjustment. For the record, let me make it clear that I have made no decision of any kind at this point about what that adjustment will be. I am not prepared to say that I am going to fill both jobs; I am not prepared to say that I am going to fill either job; or what. I really don't know. I am thinking very hard, at this point, about the restructuring of the administrative position. It does seem to me that with the kind of tight times we have, it is proper to think of retrenchment in administrative circles. I know you will find that a very hard message to accept, but it is at least one thought that is crossing my mind, and I would say that I will come to grips with this problem some time during this summer, and hope to take whatever steps necessary to replace these very able men who are leaving.

As another footnote, and we are speaking of departing comrades, Stuart Forth is leaving us to go to Penn State. Stuart Forth is not going with my blessing although he is going anyway. I think he is being lured away by a new title of Dean of Libraries and perhaps more money than we could pay him, but, in any event, I would like to take this occasion to say publicly how much I, and I think, speaking for you, have valued his work here, not just in his particular field, but, I think by common consent, Stuart has been a superb librarian and those of you who spend more time in libraries than I am able to these days know that really good librarians are hard to come by and I must confess harder to keep. At any rate, we do wish Stuart well and I have appointed a committee to begin a search for a successor for our Librarian position.

While on the subject of personnel, I think I would also like to announce the selection of our Academic Ombudsman for next year. It is my pleasure to state that I have held conversations with the man who was the number one recommendee of the Committee. We did discuss this job and I was as frank with him as he was with me, and he has informally accepted this position for next year. I see that he is here this afternoon. I would like now to ask Professor Donald Diedrich if he would rise and let us show our appreciation in advance.

Another matter of continuing interest is the matter of investigations of alleged violations of academic offenses and other administrative violations in the Athletics Department. In the area of academic offenses, at the conclusion of Dr. Cochran's investigation the material which we had was turned over to the instructor of the course. It involved, as you will recall from my last public statement, two students. The professor, of record, has made his decision. He has, I am told, informed both students of his action and his actions are in conformity with the Rules of this body. That, I believe, is all there is to be said about that particular aspect of the case.

As far as the tutorial program in the Athletics Department is concerned, on the basis of the evidence that was made available to me, I announced certain specific personnel actions that involved persons then connected with the program. Both sets of actions had to do with what I perceived to be matters of internal significance and internal importance and internal standards of the University of Kentucky. There has been a great deal of talk about NCAA and SEC concerns. Those are legitimate and reasonable. Earlier, we received an expression of interest in discussing this matter with us. Representatives of those organizations have made a very brief visit to this campus and we have sought to cooperate with them in every way we can. You should know that I have delivered to the NCAA representative a complete transcript of the reports that were presented to me and that of this moment I have no further word from them. The visit that I had with the representative of the NCAA took place Thursday, a week ago, and at that time we placed in his hands exactly what we had in fact. In the meantime our own investigation is being continued by Professor Matthews, seeking to find answers to some, as yet, unresolved points. But regardless of what further interrogation may or may not disclose, I would like to report to you two additional actions that I propose to take or have already taken. Dr. Cochran returns to town tomorrow and at that time I plan to ask him to appoint a faculty committee to look into the administration of correspondence courses at UK and I would hope that that committee would make appropriate recommendations as to how that program might be tightened so as to eliminate opportunities for abuse by any student. In addition, we are proceeding with a complete restructuring of the tutorial program in the Athletics Department. I have instructed the Director of Athletics to begin the search for a permanent head of that program -- someone with appropriate academic credentials, preferably the Ph.D. I have also asked that a set of guidelines be drafted for the proper function of that office and that a clear job description be written for the person who is to fill it. I want that to be fairly specific. I want it to say what that program is for and what it is not for. I want it to say what that person is to do and what that person is not to do and to get this in some better focus than we have ever had it. In addition, I expect that that position should be elevated at least to the level of an assistant athletics directorship in order to clarify the lines of authority and responsibility and to free the director from any pressures that might be generated out of ambiguity about the chain of command. I can report to you that there are several candidates for that position and that we will be working on that in the days and weeks ahead.

There is another topic that I think should be of some interest to this group. About a week or ten days ago I spoke to the Department heads, Deans, others, Directors, Community College people, about the Affirmative Action program of the University. Many of you probably heard of that. I would like to make some further and some abbreviated comments about that for the benefit of those of you who may not have attended that meeting. The Affirmative Action program has been at one or another stage of development here for more than a year, and I think that we are, at last, getting some kind of clear focus on it, although there continues to be, I suspect, a good bit of misunderstanding about it. I would have you understand that there are two concepts involved, not one -- the concept of non-discrimination and the concept of affirmative action. One is essentially negative which says, in effect, stop doing some things, and the other is essentially positive which says start doing some things. These come out of federal law, of executive rulings and things that I would leave the lawyers to explain to you. Nonetheless this institution, like the others in the country, has come to a point in time where it's own performance has been challenged, and I must tell you by looking at the record, properly so. In the case of non-discrimination we were visited just before Thanksgiving by the officials of the Department of HEW. That was not a particularly successful affair, in my opinion. They did visit the campus - they did talk to people around and they did hold an exit interview with us in which they told us certain things that they had found, and that they thought they were going to put in a report. Under the HEW Guidelines they have thirty days to give us that report. We have not received a report as of this date. I repeat, that was the week before Thanksgiving. I say to you that in spite of that fact, I think we have learned enough ourselves, by taking a look at this institution, to know that we needed to move on anyway, regardless of whether we ever hear from them or anybody else. And so we have moved in the direction of creating an Affirmative Action program for the University of Kentucky and that is what that meeting was about -- to involve the chairmen and the people who are going to be at the hiring level -- to inform them of these developments and to let them know just exactly what the range of commitment and problem is. I am not going to get into a long discussion of the issues that were raised and the problems we had over records, and the problems we had over everything else. As we move forward, though, in the Affirmative Action area, there is one topic that continues to agitate many, many sections and many different kinds of people, and the academic community, I think, in particular. And that is the question that continues around goals and timetables. The word "quota" inevitably pops up and it is a concept that, at least to many people in the academic world, is anathema. It has been very hard all the way through this to get any clear statement of the policy changes from time to time, but in fairly recent times I think there has been a fairly clear and concise statement that I believe is important enough for you to hear. It runs to the point of making a distinction between quota and goal, although they will be quick to tell you that the goal is the numerical consequences of the plan; the plan must have some numerical goals as a way to evaluate, at some point in the distant future, whether or not anything has been done. Let me, if I may, read you very briefly this thing. I think it is the most significant statement that has come out, so far, on this question:

Under a system of goals an employer is never required to hire a person who does not have qualifications needed to perform the job successfully. And an employer is never required to hire such an unqualified person in preference to a better-qualified person, provided that the qualifications used to make such relative judgments realistically measures the person's ability to do the job in question or other jobs, at which he is likely to progress. The terms "less qualified", and "better qualified" as used in this memorandum are not intended to distinguish among persons who are substantially equally well qualified, in terms of being able to perform their jobs successfully. Unlike quotas, therefore, which may call for a preference for the unqualified over the qualified, or the less qualified over the better qualified, to meet the numerical requirement, a goal recognizes that persons are to be judged on individual ability.

I think that is a fairly central point to be made in connection with the academic problem.

To get back to the central question, we are going ahead with an Affirmative Action plan which we will further, and we are enlisting everybody on this campus to help make it a success. The fundamental point that I made the other day, and I would like to repeat now is it is a good one. It is clear, and it ought to be clear. The University of Kentucky can do a better job than it has done in recruiting and promoting and all the other things that are involved with women and minorities - which are the protected groups under the law. It is our intention to make that effort and I hope to make it successful, relying on the widespread support of this academic community to do that.

I will move now to the topic that occasioned this rather specific invitation today and that has to do with the budget. I am talking now about the operating budget at the University beginning July 1 of this next fiscal year. I have Mr. Clapp here with me and if you have any questions, he will try to answer them. What I would like to do is give you an overview of this so that you might have some more understanding than perhaps you now have. I have talked to the Trustees, and I have explained this budget as well as I could when I presented it to them. I have had a meeting with the Deans and tried to get before them this picture. I have met with the Senate Council and talked with them, at some length, about this budget, and in this day of breakdown of communication it is awfully hard to know where to turn next to talk, but clearly your Chairman and I share the view that this is a Body that perhaps does have some interest in this matter.

First of all let me make some generalizations about the budget as it was presented and approved by the Board. Like all budgets in recent times, it is the largest one this institution has ever had. It is up 6 million dollars over the year before. It is up from 130 million dollars a year to 136 million dollars a year. Sixty eight and a half million dollars of that is state money -- is appropriated dollars. In other words, just about half of what goes into the operation of the University of Kentucky is appropriated by this state. I think you should know this as a matter of trend -- the state appropriation in terms of total dollars is increasing, but the state appropriation as a portion of our total budget is slightly decreasing. That is a trend that has been going on, I gather, for several bienniums, but you ought to have that picture. We are getting more money but the total state input is a smaller percentage than it has been.

The next generalization that I would make seems to me the most fundamental one of all, if you want any feel for just exactly why this one is different in so many ways, and that is it is adopted and going to be put into operation at a time when two currents are at play that play havoc with whatever plans we make. Federal costs that were unanticipated and that could not be anticipated at the time the biennial budget request was submitted, have been put upon us in the form of fixed costs. I am talking about the Social Security increase, both in rate and base. I am talking about the increase in Unemployment Compensation. I am talking about the necessity to make some provision for the rise in the Minimum Wage Law. We don't know what that is going to be yet, but we know it's coming very soon, and as you can guess, like most university campuses, we have a large amount of minimum wage work going on. At the same time that we have been hit by unanticipated costs of some magnitude, we are also experiencing a federal reversal, if you please, or change, the result of which is either to cut back or completely eliminate many programs that have been financed up to now by the Federal Government, presumably that that money is going to go in the form of revenue sharing to the states. I can tell you there is no requirement that when it gets to the state it will continue to be used for what it was used before, nor is there any clear understanding, at this point, that there will be the same number of dollars available, but those are all different aspects of that problem. Just to hit the high spot I would say that while we are going to be affected pretty broadly on this campus, there are two areas where I suspect it is going to be most critical. One is in the area of medical education. The whole range of our five colleges that are engaged in the medical side are feeling already, for that matter, a tremendous shock. And the second area that I think is going to be rather harshly affected is the area of student aid. It is hard to know, at this point, because as you know, there is a rather substantial battle going on between the Executive and the Legislature over the student aid programs, and nobody knows whether the President is going to veto what was passed just last week. At least, I haven't heard it as of this reading. We will be in a better position to compute just where we are when we know what those figures are going to be, but we are at the point now where it is dreadfully late for us to be trying to plan for this year students who are coming back and who have financial need and who are already in one or another program, when we don't know whether there is even going to be funding for that program. There is a great deal of uncertainty thrown into the system.

Very closely allied with that point is the next generalization that I would make about the budget, and that is that it reflects a substantial increase in income from student fees, and I want you to listen to these statements. You will recall that in-state tuition went up $75 this year and that, at the same time that was done, the Council also put a $75 increase on for next year. That is already there, and those figures are built into this budget. Student fees are increasing, both in the total number of dollars that come to us, and in the total percentage of our budget. It has exactly the reverse trend of the state appropriation, and that is a matter of some concern. As a matter of fact four years ago the student fees made up just under nine per cent of the budget of the University of Kentucky, and next year it will be at 11.3 per cent of the total operating budget. The problem, I think, is self-evident: increasing costs, particularly at the rate we are increasing them. I haven't researched this -- but I would guess -- that $150.00 increase per biennium may be the largest single increase ever made at the University of Kentucky for in-state students. When you look at the per capita income and you look at parts of this state and see the conditions there, you cannot help but wonder just what impact this is going to have at a time when, presumably, the national policy is to provide some kind of opportunity for higher education for all those who are capable. I would say this, because this is germane to a later point. We took $40,000 off the top of whatever we had in the way of new money -- and I will talk about that more precisely in a moment -- and arbitrarily put it into student aid matching funds. Forty thousand dollars, by itself, would not make much difference in terms of funding but the beauty of this is that depending upon what legislation is passed in Washington, that money gives us leverage. And we would anticipate, depending upon just how the mix comes out, that that additional $40,000 may bring in somewhere between $200,000 and $400,000 in additional loan and grant funds for our students. So built into this budget is that figure, as well.

Still another generalization is that this budget reflects our attempts to move just one more step in the direction of implementing a funded retirement program. No provision was made for a funded retirement for either classified personnel or for that hard-to-identify group called middle management, who are neither classified nor faculty personnel. It is not that these people do not have some retirement rights but that there is no funded program for those rights and it means that as they retire, the funding of their retirement must come out of the operating budget of the institution, which I will tell you is a very poor way to run even a university. One has to keep building the budget, based on fluctuations in retirements and the size of the retirement pension. At any rate, since 1971 we have been trying, with very modest and very limited funds, to build an incremental program, taking one step at a time, so that we can bring the other major groups of employees on this campus under a funded retirement. We have taken another step in this budget, and I would guess that this process, if it goes happily uninterrupted, will be completed in 1976. At that time all of our employees will be under a funded retirement program and we will have a fiscal stability, in terms of budget-making, that we have never had and we will have, in my judgment, a fairer program for the employees of this University than we have ever had, and I think that is all to the good.

The matter that is closest to your hearts, I am sure, and one that I would now talk about, goes to the problem that touches us all -- the matter of salaries -- narrowing down to that specific topic.

I would like to review for you briefly the resources, and by that I mean the new money, that were available to us for the year coming up and work from that figure to show you how we got to where we are. To those of you who are interested, Mr. Clapp and I would be very happy to give you these figures. At the risk of boring you I am going to use some of these figures now, because I think they are important enough for you to know.

The first figure that comes to mind is that there is 4.7 million dollars involved in money that was at our disposal, so to speak, for all purposes not already undertaken, for the year coming. Two point seven (2.7) of that 4.7 came in state appropriation, either through the General Fund appropriation, or through a $100,000 enrollment increase which went either to the Community Colleges or to the Medical Center. One point eight (1.8) million of that increase is in student fees. There are a couple hundred thousand dollars that came from what we anticipated to be additional or interest funds from one source or another. But the figure I want you to get is that all of this from these sources adds up to 4.7 million dollars that we began working with. That is not to say that we could take this 4.7 million dollars and do anything we wanted to with it. Built into the budget itself, and to the request as made, were certain fixed costs that have to be met first of all out of that 4.7 million dollars. I will go through them very briefly. Our National Science Foundation matching grant in Mathematics that I believe is in its last year runs to $99,000. The Kellogg Grant for Allied Health -- a multi-year commitment we made -- runs to $33,000. We have two new buildings -- the Library and the Family Practice Building at the Medical Center which will also house the Student Health Services. These two buildings are going to come on line within the next year and we have to include them in this budget. Then there is the maintenance and operation dollars for these buildings. We don't just build the building; we also have to maintain it. That, too, becomes something of a dollar burden. We have Social Security increases for the year; we have retirement payments for the year; we have Workmen's Compensation. The fact is that there was $372,000 worth of specific fixed costs written into that budget and approved by the Legislature and these had to come out of the 4.7 million dollars. In addition, we set aside another $181,000 for new program money. These programs ran to the creation of some kind of opportunity in Southwest Jefferson as an adjunct to the Jefferson Community College -- a very small amount of money -- but it is in there nonetheless. There was money in there to help with the very critical problem that we had at the Jefferson Community College which was the fastest growing element anywhere in the System, and the one about which something had to be done. They were literally inundated. And then there was the $50,000 amount for the implementation of the Family Practice Program. So when the fixed costs and the programs that were identified in the budget are added up, we have over a half-million dollars already gone.

The next bite came out of our 4.7 million from that portion of it that was based on enrollment increases. That was very close to $100,000. There was no enrollment increase in the Division of Colleges; in fact, there was a slight drop. The enrollment increase money was divided between the Community Colleges and the Medical Center, based on the actual rate of growth assumed there. These dollars are specifically set aside to go where the students are; thus this $100,000 (approximate) came out.

Then came, I think, the most hurtful blow of all: those items I mentioned earlier that were not included in the biennial budget requests. In the area of fixed costs let me sample one for you. I mentioned Social Security. The change in that rate and base meant that this institution had to find $747,000 to put in to that. Now that is money that is going into programs for the faculty and staff.

Nonetheless, it was money not budgeted. There was not any way to have anticipated that or to have gotten the money if we had anticipated it, in all probability. Nonetheless, there was no option on our part of whether to continue to put in what they say the rate is for Social Security -- it is going in -- and it is coming right off the top. Retirement programs: $141,000; Workmen's Compensation; Unemployment Compensation; minimum wage; a total of $1,036,000. Add to that the student aid, the retirement programs we are talking about implementing, the waiver of disability insurance, the minimum wage problem and the campus recreation problem and we have another $300,000. We are talking literally about a million three. I started talking about 4.7 million and I ended up, after taking out those things about which there was very little in the way of judgment to be made and we are left with 2.7 million dollars and this is the money we have for increases in salaries for faculty and staff. What it comes down to is a relatively unimpressive figure of a 4.5 per cent increase, based on across-the-board. This includes the adjustments that were made and I need to say something about those adjustments.

We have conducted a department by department, position by position, review involving the protected categories of women and minorities and, in each case, have asked the appropriate officials either to recommend adjustment or to give us a written statement as justifiable reason why such an adjustment, in their opinions, was not necessary. The idea behind this is to place this institution in the position of either correcting the imbalance or making a case that is not an imbalance. The upshot of this was that the adjustments made were in the range of $180,000, by far the largest adjustments ever made by this institution and everybody needs to be aware of that fact.

To return to the 4.5 per cent, I am not going to make any arguments to you about how wonderful that is at a time when the cost of living is increasing at the rate it is increasing. I know, as you know, that it is not enough to keep abreast even of that change. I will tell you that we attempted to do what we could to maximize the impact of the dollars that were available. For example, we did not fill any unfilled positions. We used the money we had on filled positions. I thought it was probably in the best interest of everybody to put the dollars where the people were and to take our chances on unfilled positions. I think you should know, and I suspect this will be of some interest to you, that by deliberate design, we did keep the administrative salary increases to a figure below 2.5 per cent. I tell you this not because I hold the vice presidents in any disrespect or do not think they do a good job. This just did not seem the year, given the straitened situation on the campus, in which we could go with across-the-boards. Many of the administrative officials involved were given no increase of any kind, I talked with them and they either understood it or chose not to draw the line at that particular moment. I tell you this because I think it is important for you to understand some of the kinds of considerations that go into these decisions.

To give you some indication of how we are doing with our benchmark institutions, the burden of my message is that while the picture cannot be described as bright, it is not nearly as bad as a lot of people would have you believe it is. In the year we are now in there was only one institution among our benchmarks that had a higher percentage increase. We were down pretty well in the field but in the year we are in we should have improved our position somewhat. In the year we are going into, and it is very difficult to be precise about this, we have talked with officials at several of our benchmark institutions and have learned that all except three were within about three-tenths of a percentage point better off than we are; the three were eight-tenths of a percentage point better off than we are. I give you this for whatever it is worth. I don't expect you to say "Oh, goodie. Nobody else has any money; therefore, we don't have any money; therefore, we can all live happily ever after." I do think however, that what we are talking about is a condition that does apply around the country. Things are getting tougher lots of places, and while there are institutions that are doing better than we are, I will tell you, Ladies and Gentlemen, there are a lot of institutions doing far worse. I know several major institutions, one of which has had a 15 per cent across-the-board cut. I know of others that are being given a hold-the-line budget, with no increases of any kind. I know of others that are in the vicinity of a two to three per cent increase. So what I am saying to you is that as you nurse these wounds and bruises, take what consolation you can from the fact that there are others around the country going through the same predicament.

I don't know what else I can say except to assure you of my intention to seek, at the next session of the Legislature, a restoration of those funds which were unanticipated and which were taken out. I will tell you now that it will be among the highest priority items we have and I will also tell you that if we get that money, it will be my intention to put it where we would have put it in the first place, which is in salaries. I think you have a right to hear that from me and to understand my intent.

One last word, and that has to do with folklore. Like all other documents, budgets have a folklore all their own. I am frequently told, and sometimes by distinguished members of this faculty who ought to know better, that there are great pools of money lying around this place that are unused. I would like to give you an official figure to carry around. The contingency or reserve, that I have, that is available to me, the uncommitted recurring dollar that is available to me to use for any kind of emergency or any kind of program or anything else that I would like to do with, is less than one-half of one per cent of the budget of this institution and I will tell you that I don't think there are many enterprises in this country running on that narrow a margin. Any unforeseen circumstance -- another Social Security raise -- and we've had it. Or the price of coal or of any one of a number of things. Well, for whatever it is worth, since you know from close hand about many things, I will tell you that that figure does not give me great comfort, and I will tell you that it does keep me awake at night and I would hope that if any of you ever see me as you are wandering around, you can think, "Well, I wonder if he is thinking about that one-half of one per cent."

These are essentially the remarks I wanted to make to you. I have Mr. Clapp here, I do need to be back for an appointment very soon, but if there are any questions any of you would like to address to us, I would be happy to try and answer them. My purpose in being here is to try and give you some overview without killing you with the details of that budget. It is a very thick document, and it takes some time to get together and a lot of time to understand, and a lot of time to cuss. If you have any questions I would be happy to answer them.

I thank you then for your courtesy, Mr. Chairman. It is a pleasure to be here, and I will be excused, if I may, to get back to another chore. Thank you very much.

President Singletary was accorded a warm ovation by the Senators and members present.

The list of candidates for degrees at the May 12, 1973 Commencement had been circulated to the faculty and was approved by the University Senate for recommendation to the Board of Trustees.

The Chairman recognized Mr. Howell Hopson, Secretary of the Senate Council, who presented a motion that the Senate waive the 10-day Rule concerning circulation in order to consider the proposed Architecture program in Venice, Italy. The Senate approved the motion to waive the rule.

On behalf of the Senate Council, Mr. Hopson then presented a motion that the Senate approve and recommend for adoption by the Board of Trustees the proposal to establish a regular year program by the College of Architecture in Venice, Italy. This proposal had been circulated to the faculty under date of April 23, 1973. Chairman Adelstein reported that this program had been approved by the Undergraduate Council, by the Senate Committee on International Programs and by the Senate Council. Limited discussion was held following which the Senate approved the proposal as presented.

The European Program in Architecture was originally initiated in the Summer of 1971. Because of its organizational and educational success at that time, and the ultimate demands made by the students for its continuation, the following proposal is being presented now as a request for approval for the formalization of such a program as an integral part of the Architectural curriculum. The program is seen as an extension of the Senate recommendation on International Programs. Architecture, urbanism, the accelerated pace of societal change, all emphasize the immediacy, and complexity of the discipline's circumstances. The need for a re-affirmation of the essential character of the discipline finds its roots in expanding beyond our provincial and parochial limitations. In this program, the essential evolutions and transformations of the development of Western Architecture will be addressed in their historical context. Our understanding of where we are, what we are, how we got here; our comprehension of where we might be going, what we might become and how we might achieve some appropriate transformation is intricately bound into the fabric of the city as the ultimate manifestation of the noble moments in human culture. Venice is such a city.

The program is an extension of the College of Architecture, University of Kentucky utilizing faculty from the College and supplementing these with visiting faculty from the University of Venice, officials of the United Nations Program in Venice, the city of Venice, and its various organizations concerned with planning and the International University.

ECONOMICS:

The status of the summer 1971 program was such that no funds were requested from the University. The fees paid by students were sufficient to defray all expenses. The experiences from that program and another operated by one of the present faculty participants obviates the necessity for significant funds. It is envisaged that the program would be an integral part of the College of Architecture curriculum in all respects. Room, board, transportation and special trip expenses would be assumed by the student.

PROGRAM STRUCTURE:

Presently the response from the student body within the College of Architecture seems sufficient to eliminate any need to subscribe outside of the University of Kentucky, although qualified students will be accepted. Because of the broad base from which Architecture and Planning operates, it is ultimately envisioned that other areas of proficiency from Arts and Sciences and professional schools would become a viable part of the program.

It would be self-defeating to offer anything at this point except that which is contained, or is possible to obtain, within the structure of our present offering. The curriculum as it exists would be the basis of the program. No difference, except the difference in location, would be anticipated.

Students would be limited, except in special circumstances, to taking two segments of the regular school and summer calendar in any combination desired. This means a summer and fall session or a fall and spring session, etc.

Participating students would be mainly selected from the professional years of the Architecture program.

Courses would be utilized that are an integral part of the total program in architecture, such as: Architectural Studio I, Architectural Studio II, Architectural Studio III, Architectural Studio IV, History of Architecture, Advanced Architectural Problems, Seminar on Selected Topics in Design, Seminar on Special Problems in Architecture, Architectural Photographic Media in Design, and Advanced Special Problems in Architecture.

The program is similar to one currently operated in Venice by the University of Virginia.

FACULTY:

All faculty will be regular, qualified faculty of the College of Architecture or will be exchange professors, approved by the College. European professors will be utilized as guests and specialized area lecturers.

CREDITS:

All students will be awarded credits on the same basis as the resident student at the University of Kentucky, Lexington Campus. Out-of-state students will receive credits on the basis that all accredited institutions accept.

ADMISSION:

All students in good standing at accredited architecture schools in the United States will be eligible to participate for the present.

As the program expands the areas of competency will be expanded. Eligible students from acceptable European Universities will be encouraged to participate in order to fulfill the intents and purposes of international interchange.

The program will be supervised by the Director of the program who shall be responsible to the Dean of the College of Architecture and the Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Chairman Adelstein called on each of the Chairmen of the Senate Committees who had presented annual reports (circulated to the faculty under date of April 17, 1973) to rise and answer any questions which might be asked. In connection with the Honors Report he stated that the ad hoc committee appointed to carry out a comprehensive evaluation of the Honors Program had made its report; that the Honors Program Advisory Committee had evaluated it and the Senate Council had approved it and that it would become an action item on the agenda of the University Senate in the fall of 1973.

Chairman Adelstein thanked each of the Committee Chairmen and their Committees for these Reports.

He stated that Dr. N. J. Pisacano, Chairman of the Athletics Committee, had not as yet submitted a report from that Committee; that as soon as it was received, it would be circulated to the faculty.

RULES COMMITTEE Abstract

The Rules Committee of the University Senate has met frequently and profitably during the year. Many of the results of our labors are visible in the revisions of the Rules and the new section on faculty rights and responsibilities. A number of the changes in the Rules have been made by Senate action, and these are available in the minutes. Others, primarily editorial or non-substantive changes, are yet to be circulated as the revised pages of the Rules are prepared. Many additional changes seem to be certain as a result of the Jewell Report.

In addition to the changes which have originated outside of the Committee, as in the case of the Jewell Report, we have also exerted considerable effort toward initiating revisions for several purposes:

- 1) To clear up language where intent and interpretation seemed to be in conflict.
- 2) To eliminate obsolete passages, usually "orphaned" by other changes in the Rules, or in administrative procedures.
- 3) To reduce apparent contradictions.
- 4) To adjust language to consistent terms.

Obviously we have not yet achieved all our noble purposes. But we have made significant strides in that direction. Two principles have emerged by which many of our decisions have been guided:

- 1) We have tried to avoid regulating morality and writing the unenforceable rule.
- 2) We have attempted to establish principle instead of describing the details of application

These two principles themselves have frequently appeared to be in conflict. We have spent lexicons and calendars in searching for a Golden Mean, and we hope, have occasionally found it.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS COMMITTEE Abstract

Committee activities during the current year have moved along two principal lines.

First, we have given continuing attention and consideration to the document, "Academic Policies for International Programs," which was endorsed by the Senate in February 1971. This paper enunciates ten distinct policies, relating to academic course content, foreign students on campus, and extension programs, which represent desirable goals and commitments on the part of the University if it intends to make progress in the international-intercultural component of higher education. With this paper as a starting point, the important task remains of assigning degrees of priority to the various policy recommendations set forth therein, and to work toward implementation of the several policies through the contribution and involvement of those University programs and groups directly or potentially concerned with international-intercultural affairs. As the University administration clarifies its position in regard to the coordinated implementation of this policy statement, we on the Committee have attempted to represent Senate, faculty, and campus opinion in respect of the establishment of priorities and of effective implementing procedures.

The second line of activity has been in serving as a sounding board and consultative resource in regard to academic proposals which have strong international implications. Instances of this activity can be seen in our consultation concerning the establishment of a University summer residence center in Rumania and in the application for a federal grant to strengthen the international dimensions of General Education.

PRIVILEGE AND TENURE Abstract

The University Senate Advisory Committee on Privilege and Tenure is charged with three kinds of responsibilities: To advise administrators and faculty on rules affecting privilege and tenure at the University; to conduct preliminary investigations on various specific cases referred to it and make recommendations thereon; and to conduct a continuing study of privilege and tenure regulations.

Our primary business has been in the first two areas - the third we do as a matter of course while considering specific cases.

By way of information, the Committee offers the following observations:

Committee deliberations have indicated a need to clarify the position of teaching and research assistants in relation to their status under the Governing Regulations.

The Committee has frequently been queried with regard to a statement of reasons to accompany notices of terminal appointments. University regulations do not now require a statement of reasons and present practice indicates that they are seldom given in writing and often not clearly stated orally.

The committee has had no new formal cases this year, but one of last year's cases is pending. As Chairman, I have made a number of informal inquiries on behalf of individual faculty and have been consulted by the Administration in two or three instances as required by the Governing Regulations.

The Committee has no action recommendations to make at this time.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE Abstract

The addition to the Margaret I. King Library is progressing almost on schedule, and its completion and the renovation of the present building are now expected in the coming months. Also the beginning of construction on the Biological Sciences Building with the proposed 6,000 square feet of library space will soon get under way.

Additional funds have been provided by Dr. Cochran for a pick-up and delivery service of books on a campus-wide, regularly scheduled basis. This service will start as soon as possible. The University Administration must be commended for their support of this needed service.

The University Libraries has joined other institutional members of the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries in a feasibility study of a proposed library computer network for the Southeast. The benefit of such a system will be primarily shared cataloging, a catalog card production system, serials control system, data base for circulation, and improved interlibrary lending.

The University libraries has received two outstanding gifts during the year. One of them is the official papers and records of Senator John Sherman Cooper, who has served this state and nation for so many years. The other is the official papers and records of Governor A. B. Chandler, a long time supporter of the University.

The Committee is still very concerned about the overall budget for the libraries. The allocation for this year remained the same as last year in spite of the fact that the cost of books, periodicals, and labor continue to rise. With the cost of books up some 43% since 1968, the enrollment up to 26% and the increased use of the libraries up some 35%, it continues to put a heavy strain on the budget of the libraries. This committee has recommended some increases in the overall budget for many years to meet these increased costs. Inconveniences have been noted, such as shorter library hours, continued loss of books, the growing backlog of uncatalogued materials, declining service to students, and increasing failure to meet teaching and research needs of faculty.

However, Dr. Forth and the library staff must be commended for stretching the present budget as far as they have. It is important that the University increase the total budget of the libraries in order to maintain, or hopefully improve, our present rank of Number 50 out of the 79 member libraries of the Association of Research Libraries.

The reduction in the number of members of this committee as recommended last year should be continued this year.

HONORS PROGRAM COMMITTEE Abstract

The Advisory Committee on the Honors Program has been singularly inactive so far during the 1972-73 academic year for the simple reason that the Senate Council and the Advisory Committee have been awaiting a report from an Ad Hoc Committee which was charged with a comprehensive review of the entire Honors Program.

Background: In a joint meeting of the Honors Program Advisory Committee and the Senate Council in February 1972, the Senate Council requested the Dean of Undergraduate Studies to initiate and carry out a comprehensive evaluation of the Honors Program. In March, 1972, the Dean of Undergraduate Studies, in consultation with the Senate Council Chairman, appointed an Ad Hoc Committee to carry out the request of the Senate Council and to follow a charge set forth by the Dean of Undergraduate Studies which was prepared in consultation with the Chairman of the Senate Council. The report was to be made to both the Dean of Undergraduate Studies and the Senate Council.

It is the Advisory Committee's understanding that the work of the Ad Hoc Committee has been completed and that a report has been submitted. It is expected that the Honors Program Advisory Committee will consider program recommendations from this report in the near future.

STUDENT AFFAIRS COMMITTEE Abstract

The Senate Advisory Committee on Student Affairs has met in five formal committee meetings during the 1972-73 academic year. Major items considered or received for consideration by the Committee included the following. Role of the Student Affairs Committee, Screening of Student Members of the Publication Board, Intimidation or Bribery as an offense for inclusion in the Student Code, Honor Code for College of Medicine, and the issue of whether a single student government body is still viable.

A recommendation was drafted to include intimidation or bribery as an academic offense in the Student Code, Part II. Evaluation of the Honor Code for students in the College of Medicine has not been initiated. Consideration of the student government issue is in progress with a report anticipated before the end of the academic year. The Committee recommends that its consulting role in the selection of student members for the Publication Board be terminated.

COMMUNITY COLLEGE COMMITTEE Abstract

Statement of Charge: The Committee provides over-all liaison between the University System and the Community College System. It may recommend on any matter relative to the Community College System which is in the purview of the University Senate, and shall report at least annually to the Senate.

Issues Resolved by the Committee: 1) Consideration and recommendation in the area of credit and grade transfer of all freshman and sophomore Community College courses; 2) preparation of guidelines for reducing student uncertainty of course credit application to degree programs on the University of Kentucky Lexington Campus; and 3) formulation of a Committee posture with regard to course-numbering consistency of general studies type courses throughout Kentucky State Colleges and Universities.

Issues Pending in Committee: 1) the "67-hour rule," now the maximum number allowable for credits earned/to be earned from a two-year college; 2) applicability of Community College courses to University-wide requirements; and 3) the examination route to credit. This latter topic is to speak to the feasibility of coordination (between Lexington campus departments and Community College departments) of exam types, format, and content, mostly restricted to "special" examinations.

With the Senate approval of the acceptance of "D" grades of all accepted/admitted transfer students, one of the last distinctions between Community College and "other" two-year college transfer students has been removed. The Senate might, therefore, consider expanding the scope of this Committee to include other two-year colleges, retaining however, the title Community Colleges for purposes of identifying with that academic unit.

BUSINESS AFFAIRS COMMITTEE Abstract

The charge given to our committee is as follows:

This committee will consult with and suggest to the Vice President for Business Affairs concerning matters that involve the Business Affairs function, with particular emphasis to be placed on the working relationship between Business Affairs units and other University units, especially academic organizations. It is not intended to supplant already established channels of communication. It is intended to provide liaison with organization unit heads and/or other University persons who do not have an accustomed or satisfactory method by which they may address questions or problems concerning Business Affairs.

The committee may initiate recommendations and shall advise with the President at his request. It shall, in accordance with the Rules of the University Senate, make recommendations to the University Senate through the Senate Council on matters, including space and physical facilities when they affect the attainment of educational goals, and shall report to the Senate at least annually.

It shall report and recommend to the Senate Council, upon request, on any specific matter referred to it. The committee shall, upon the advice and recommendation of the Vice President for Business Affairs set regular meeting dates on a bi-monthly basis or on some other mutual basis which will insure an active group.

Although we have met on several occasions during the year, our discussions have been limited to those issues raised by committee members themselves and to points of general information concerning the business affairs of the University as presented by Vice President Forgy.

The primary purpose of this report, therefore, is to reacquaint members of the Senate with our function and to solicit such questions and comments regarding the business affairs of the University as may be of interest to you.

APPOINTMENT, PROMOTION AND TENURE COMMITTEE Abstract

To date in this academic year this Committee (which is composed of the Chairmen of the six Academic Area Advisory Committees) has met twice in rather extended sessions. Both meetings were for the purpose of responding to a request for advice from the President's Office concerning a proposal from the Vice President of the Medical Center to reassign the Department of Oral Biology of the College of Dentistry from the Academic Area Advisory Committee for the Biological Sciences to the Medical Center Academic Area Advisory Committee for the Clinical Sciences.

The basis and need for the reassignment request, as explained in writing by Vice President Bosomworth and as interpreted in some detail to the Committee by Dr. Charles Walton, of the Oral Biology Department, stemmed from an institutional change of mission for the department. In response to national trends in dental education (and other health sciences) this department and its members, are committed to the development of innovative, new approaches to basic science instruction, particularly the development and implementation of an integrated, modular program.

The scholarly and creative work of the departmental faculty now is in pursuit of this objective rather than in the more traditional forms of research.

After full consideration, the Committee advised that the request be approved. In its advisory report the Committee expressed its view that existing assignments of departments to area committees serves to encourage interdisciplinary scholarship and interdisciplinary evaluation of appointment, promotion and tenure. However, it reported, creative scholarly performance and its evaluation should be responsive to changes and new developments in the educational mission of the department or College, especially those generated by national need for new designs in professional programs of instruction. The Committee also expressed its view that both of these general institutional objectives might be achieved in some instances without reassignment from one area committee to another but by providing the area committee with well defined statements of the department's mission (including criteria and information concerning "balance" in assignments) for its use in advisory review.

The Chairman announced that Dr. Stanford L. Smith had been elected Chairman of the Senate Council and would assume office January 1, 1974; further, that Professor Constance Wilson had been elected secretary of that body and would take office in the fall since Mr. Hopson would be graduating.

He also stated that it had been found to be impossible to implement the Senate apportionment in the fall of 1973, as previously announced since it involved a change in the Governing Regulations by the Board of Trustees which could not be effected before the fall semester; therefore, it would be the fall of 1974 before this apportionment implementation would take place.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS COMMITTEE: Abstract

Committee activities during the current year have moved along two principal lines.

First, we have given continuing attention and consideration to the document, "Academic Policies for International Programs," which was endorsed by the Senate in February 1971. This paper enunciates ten distinct policies, relating to academic course content, foreign students on campus, and extension programs, which represent desirable goals and commitments on the part of the University if it intends to make progress in the international-intercultural component of higher education. With this paper as a starting point, the important task remains of assigning degrees of priority to the various policy recommendations set forth therein, and to work toward implementation of the several policies through the contribution and involvement of those University programs and groups directly or potentially concerned with international-intercultural affairs. As the University administration clarifies its position in regard to the coordinated implementation of this policy statement, we on the Committee have attempted to represent Senate, faculty, and campus opinion in respect of the establishment of priorities and of effective implementing procedures.

The second line of activity has been in serving as a sounding board and consultative resource in regard to academic proposals which have strong international implications. Instances of this activity can be seen in our consultation concerning the establishment of a University summer residence center in Rumania and in the application for a federal grant to strengthen the international dimensions of General Education.

PRIVILEGE AND TENURE: Abstract

The University Senate Advisory Committee on Privilege and Tenure is charged with three kinds of responsibilities: To advise administrators and faculty on rules affecting privilege and tenure at the University; to conduct preliminary investigations on various specific cases referred to it and make recommendations thereon; and to conduct a continuing study of privilege and tenure regulations.

Our primary business has been in the first two areas - the third we do as a matter of course while considering specific cases.

By way of information, the Committee offers the following observations:

Committee deliberations have indicated a need to clarify the position of teaching and research assistants in relation to their status under the Governing Regulations.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE: Abstract

The addition to the Margaret I. King Library is progressing almost on schedule, and its completion and the renovation of the present building are now expected in the coming months. Also the beginning of construction on the Biological Science Building with the proposed 6,000 square feet of library space will soon get under way.

Additional funds have been provided by Dr. Cochran for a pick-up and delivery service of books on a campus-wide, regularly scheduled basis. This service will start as soon as possible. The University Administration must be commended for their support of this needed service.

The University Libraries has joined other institutional members of the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries in a feasibility study of a proposed library computer network for the Southeast. The benefit of such a system will be primarily shared cataloging, a catalog card production system, serials control system, data base for circulation, and improved interlibrary lending.

The University libraries has received two outstanding gifts during the year. One of them is the official papers and records of Senator John Sherman Cooper, who has served this state and nation for so many years. The other is the official papers and records of Governor A. B. Chandler, a long time supporter of the University.

The committee is still very concerned about the overall budget for the libraries. The allocation for this year remained the same as last year inspite of the fact that the cost of books, periodicals, and labor continue to rise. With the cost of books up some 43% since 1968, the enrollment up to 26%, and the increased use of the libraries up some 35%, it continues to put a heavy strain on the budget of the libraries. This committee has recommended some increases in the overall budget for many years to meet these increased costs. Inconveniences have been noted, such as shorter library hours, continued loss of books, the growing backlog of uncatalogued materials, declining service to students, and increasing failure to meet teaching and research needs of faculty.

Library Committee Annual Report, Abstract
4/17/73

However, Dr. Forth and the library staff must be commended for stretching the present budget as far as they have. It is important that the University increase the total budget of the libraries in order to maintain or hopefully improve, our present rank of Number 50 out of the 79 member libraries of the Association of Research Libraries.

The reduction in the number of members of this committee as recommended last year should be continued this year.

HONORS PROGRAM COMMITTEE: Abstract

The Advisory Committee on the Honors Program has been singularly inactive so far during the 1972-73 academic year for the simple reason that the Senate Council and the Advisory Committee have been awaiting a report from an Ad Hoc Committee which was charged with a comprehensive review of the entire Honors Program.

Background: In a joint meeting of the Honors Program Advisory Committee and the Senate Council in February 1972, the Senate Council requested the Dean of Undergraduate Studies to initiate and carry out a comprehensive evaluation of the Honors Program. In March, 1972, the Dean of Undergraduate Studies, in consultation with the Senate Council Chairman, appointed an Ad Hoc Committee to carry out the request of the Senate Council and to follow a charge set forth by the Dean of Undergraduate Studies which was prepared in consultation with the Chairman of the Senate Council. The report was to be made to both the Dean of Undergraduate Studies and the Senate Council.

It is the Advisory Committee's understanding that the work of the Ad Hoc Committee has been completed and that a report has been submitted. It is expected that the Honors Program Advisory Committee will consider program recommendations from this report in the near future.

STUDENT AFFAIRS COMMITTEE: Abstract

The Senate Advisory Committee on Student Affairs has met in five formal committee meetings during the 1972-73 academic year. Major items considered or received for consideration by the Committee included the following: Role of the Student Affairs Committee, Screening of Student Members of the Publication Board, Intimidation or Bribery as an offense for inclusion in the Student Code, Honor Code for College of Medicine, and the issue of whether a single student government body is still viable.

A recommendation was drafted to include intimidation or bribery as an academic offense in the Student Code, Part II. Evaluation of the Honor Code for students in the College of Medicine has not been initiated. Consideration of the student government issue is in progress with a report anticipated before the end of the academic year. The Committee recommends that its consulting role in the selection of student members for the Publication Board be terminated.

COMMUNITY COLLEGE COMMITTEE: Abstract

Statement of Charge: The Committee provides over-all liaison between the University System and the Community College System. It may recommend on any matter relative to the Community College System which is in the purview of the University Senate, and shall report at least annually to the Senate.

Issues Resolved by the Committee: 1) Consideration and recommendation in the area of credit and grade transfer of all freshmen and sophomore Community College courses; 2) Preparation of guidelines for reducing student uncertainty of course credit application to degree programs on the University of Kentucky Lexington Campus; and 3) Formulation of a Committee posture with regard to course-numbering consistency of general studies type courses throughout Kentucky State Colleges and Universities.

Issues Pending in Committee: 1) The "67-hour rule," now the maximum number allowable for credits earned/to be earned from a two-year college; 2) applicability of Community College courses to University-wide requirements; and 3) the examination route to credit. This latter topic is to speak to the feasibility of coordination (between Lexington campus departments and Community College departments) of exam types, format, and content, mostly restricted to "special" examinations.

With the Senate approval of the acceptance of "D" grades of all accepted/admitted transfer students, one of the last distinctions between Community College and "other" two-year college transfer students has been removed. The Senate might, therefore, consider expanding the scope of this Committee to include other two-year colleges, retaining however, the title Community Colleges for purposes of identifying with that academic unit.

BUSINESS AFFAIRS COMMITTEE: Abstract

The charge given to our committee is as follows:

This committee will consult with and suggest to the Vice President for Business Affairs concerning matters that involve the Business Affairs function, with particular emphasis to be placed on the working relationship between Business Affairs units and other University units, especially academic organizations. It is not intended to supplant already established channels of communication. It is intended to provide liaison with organization unit heads and/or other University persons who do not have an accustomed or satisfactory method by which they may address questions or problems concerning Business Affairs.

The committee may initiate recommendations and shall advise with the President at his request. It shall, in accordance with the Rules of the University Senate, make recommendations to the University Senate through the Senate Council on matters, including space and physical facilities when they affect the attainment of educational goals, and shall report to the Senate at least annually.

It shall report and recommend to the Senate Council, upon request, on any specific matter referred to it. The committee shall, upon the advice and recommendation of the Vice President for Business Affairs set regular meeting dates on a bi-monthly basis or on some other mutual basis which will insure an active group.

Although we have met on several occasions during the year, our discussions have been limited to those issues raised by committee members themselves and to points of general information concerning the business affairs of the University as presented by Vice President Forgy.

The primary purpose of this report, therefore, is to reacquaint members of the Senate with our function and to solicit such questions and comments regarding the business affairs of the University as may be of interest to you.

APPOINTMENT, PROMOTION AND TENURE COMMITTEE: Abstract

To date in this academic year this Committee (which is composed of the Chairman of the six Academic Area Advisory Committees) has met twice in rather extended sessions. Both meetings were for the purpose of responding to a request for advice from the President's Office concerning a proposal from the Vice President of the Medical Center to reassign the Department of Oral Biology of the College of Dentistry from the Academic Area Advisory Committee for the Biological Sciences to the Medical Center Academic Area Advisory Committee for the Clinical Sciences.

The basis and need for the reassignment request, as explained in writing by Vice President Bosomworth and as interpreted in some detail to the Committee by Dr. Charles Walton, of the Oral Biology Department, stemmed from an institutional change of mission for the department. In response to national trends in dental education (and other health sciences) this department and its members, are committed to the development of innovative, new approaches to basic science instruction, particularly the development and implementation of an integrated, modular program. The scholarly and creative work of the departmental faculty now is in pursuit of this objective rather than in the more traditional forms of research.

After full consideration, the Committee advised that the request be approved. In its advisory report the Committee expressed its view that existing assignments of departments to area committees serves to encourage interdisciplinary scholarship and interdisciplinary evaluation of appointment, promotion and tenure. However, it reported, creative scholarly performance and its evaluation should be responsive to changes and new developments in the educational mission of the department or College, especially those generated by national need for new designs in professional programs of instruction. The Committee also expressed its view that both of these general institutional objectives might be achieved in some instances without reassignment from one area committee to another but by providing the area committee with well defined statements of the department's mission (including criteria and information concerning "balance" in assignments) for its use in its advisory review.

Dear President Singletary:

In view of the widespread faculty interest in the new budget, the Senate Council would appreciate your reporting on it to the Senate at its special April 30th meeting, 3:00 p.m. in the Law Building courtroom.

This is an open invitation in the sense that you may determine whether you wish merely to confine yourself to the remarks made to the Trustees or discuss other matters that would be of special academic interest to the faculty. In addition, you naturally have the privilege of deciding whether to allow questions or not.

I hope that you will be able to attend. Please know that I will be glad to discuss this subject with you at your convenience.
