SUPER SUNDAY PHONATHON SCHEDULED FOR APRIL 26TH

On Sunday, April 26th, hundreds of phone calls will be made from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. to Jews throughout central Kentucky. Volunteers will make these calls in an effort to obtain pledges to the 1998 Central Kentucky Jewish Federation Annual Campaign which supports a wide range of social services provided by Jewish agencies in central Kentucky, in Israel, and in 58 countries around the world.

Super Sunday is viewed as one of the most important fund raising days in the central Kentucky Jewish community. Funds raised will benefit a variety of local programs including: Jewish Family Services, Camp Shalom, the Leisure Club, the U.K. Judaic Studies program, the U.K. Jewish Student Organization/Hillel, and the Gift of Israel program.

Overseas, the funds are disbursed by the United Jewish Appeal. Nationally, the Federation Annual Campaign is the premier American Jewish fundraising system and one of the world's largest philanthropies. The money raised funds a broad network of social service agencies and educational institutions. It also promotes and facilitates closer ties between Americans and Israel.

So, Answer The Call. Your gift on Super Sunday will touch hearts around the world!

To sign up as a telephone volunteer, call CKJF Executive Director, Joel Eizenstat at 269-0672. *

One Jew asks another Jew to help others in need. A four thousand year tradition. We take care of each other. We ensure the survival of our Jewish faith, culture and heritage. We help make the world a better place, for Jews and non-Jews.

The Federation's largest volunteer effort, Super Sunday Phonathon, involves hundreds of participants who work to raise funds to help Jews in need - in Central Kentucky, in Israel and around the world.

Rather than responding to appeals from many organizations, we are given the opportunity to donate to the Jewish Federation which, in turn, allocates these contributions to local, national and overseas agencies. You are assured that your gift has the greatest impact, and meets the most pressing needs of the Jewish people.

Your gift to the 1998 Annual Campaign will help rescue Jews in danger, fund vital health services, provide care for the vulnerable, subsidize cultural programs, offer security for the elderly, and ensure that your children know what it means to be Jewish.

Answer The Call
Your gift on Super Sunday will touch hearts around the world.

The Annual Campaign reflects our efforts, as individuals and as a community, to translate the values of Jewish life into practice. Knowledge. Independence. Security. Justice. Tzedakah. Values that are as old as time, and as timely as ever.

Answer the call. Your gift on Super Sunday will touch hearts around the world. *

Insurance Claim Help for Holocaust Survivors

Survivors of the Holocaust and their beneficiaries and heirs who have been denied the settlement of insurance claims should contact the Kentucky Department of Insurance, Commissioner George Nichols III said on March 12.

Kentucky is participating through the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) in the investigation of Holocaust-related insurance claims that may have been denied or left unpaid following World War II. Some survivors and their beneficiaries and heirs have filed a class-action lawsuit against several European insurance companies for unpaid life insurance annuities, dowry, education insurance, and property and casualty policies held by victims of the Holocaust.

Although the companies named in the lawsuit are based in Europe, almost all of the European companies have worldwide holdings, including many U.S. subsidiaries.

Kentucky is one of 25 states to participate in the NAIC Holocaust Insurance Issues Working Group. The group has heard the

CHARTING OUR OWN COURSE

By the time you read this - and I surely hope you do read these articles on which your officers, editors, and staff work so assiduously - Purim will have come and gone. I trust you all had a "Fraylich Purim" - a Joyous Purim. And I hope that many of you took the time to give some thought to the question of how Jews today can find relevance in celebrating yet another holiday which marks our deliverance from an evil tyrant. I did and I'd like to share a few of my thoughts with you.

First, I must tell you that I had difficulty accepting the notion that the Purim story we read from this Megilla is a record - factual or allegorical - of life in a culture and at a point in history during which the structure of society was alien to modern thought and practice in the United States. In particular, I wrestled with the fact that women generally were regarded as chattel; as property subject to the absolute authority of their husbands or fathers. This troubled me deeply. I do not like the reality of subjugation of any group of people. I am especially troubled when the people being subjugated are women or Jews. No! I am not an historical revisionist, advocating rewriting the story of Purim to make it politically correct by today's standards. I simply draw this to your attention so you can recognize the enormity of what Esther did. At the behest of her cousin Mordecai, she presented herself at the court of Ahasuerus knowing that if she were not made queen, she would be relegated to the king's entourage of concubines - for life. O.K., she was spared this indignity. Then, she took her life in her hands by presenting herself to the king, uninvited. So one way in which I choose to deal with putting a modern interpretation on this commemoration of our deliverance from the despotism of Haman is to view it, not as a tale of the bondage of women, but as a recounting of one woman's complete and selfless bravery. She knew that the good of the many often must take priority over the good, if not the life, of one person.

Then I pondered over the fact that nowhere in this Biblical recounting is there any mention of the Eternal One. There apparently is no praying to Ha'Shem for deliverance or safety. There is no reliance on Divine intervention to save the Jewish people. Human beings are portrayed as behaving as human beings who have both positive and negative characteristics. On the negative side we see the selfish egomania of the villain Haman. On the positive side we find that the Jews relied on their own interventions - all right, on the interventions of a couple of brave leaders - to save themselves. Is this supposed to teach us something about our relationship with our Creator? I think that it exemplifies what my father - I called him Ahvee Daddy - used to say, "The Lord helps them that help themselves." If we want something to

A Program with

Mark Powers

National Director of Jews for Judaism

Sunday; April 5, 1998
7:00 p.m.

Temple Adath Israel
124 N. Ashland Avenue
Lexington, Kentucky

There are over 300 cults and missionary groups dedicated to preying on Jewish Youth and Jewish Adults. What is the extent of this threat? What techniques do they use? The answers will astound you! Is there anything we can do about it? Come and find out.

Mark Powers, National Director of Jews for Judaism, has been working for more than sixteen years to alert the Jewish community to the increasing threat of well funded missionary movements and the impact of destructive cults.

Jews for Judaism is North America's only full-time counter-missionary organization, working with every segment of the Jewish community to keep Jews Jewish. The efforts of Jews for Judaism have been endorsed by Federations, Jewish educators and rabbis from Reform, Conservative, Reconstructionist and Orthodox movements worldwide.

THIS IS A PROGRAM NOT TO BE MISSED!!
EVERYONE IS INVITED!

JESUS AND JUDAISM DON'T MIX

Picture a person in a baseball uniform. The bat he uses is a real bat, the glove a real glove and the ball an authentic baseball. The person hits the ball, and instead of running to first base, he goes to third base, heads towards second, then first and then to home plate. This isn't baseball as we know it anymore.

This is how Mark Powers, director of Jews For Judaism, describes messianic Judaism. "Yes," he said, "they wear a kippah and tallit and yes they have a Torah. But, they don't practice Judaism. They have accepted another system."

Jews For Judaism is a national group, based in Baltimore. It uses counseling, educational programming and outreach in an effort to counter and expose evangelical Christian missionaries who use Jewish symbols, like a tallit or the Torah, to draw in unsuspecting young Jews and ensure them that to embrace Jesus is to become a "fulfilled Jew."

In an interview with Lynne Meredith Cohn of Washington Jewish Week Powers notes that As a missionary religion, "Christianity has been a failure among the Jewish People." But some missionaries are motivated by the belief that if Judaism endures or prevails, it negates the premise of Christianity.

About 35 years ago, Christians with a "messianic" bent began to look at why Judaism had endured after centuries of persecution, Powers noted. They came up with two reasons: first, Jews would commonly scoff at the idea of becoming Christian, seeing members of this religion as "those" or the other. Secondly, Jews were reluctant to sever ties with their heritage.

Noting that Christianity builds on Judaism by adding the New Testament to the Jewish Bible or "Old Testament" according to Christians, missionary Christians began responding that "a real Christian loves the Jewish people," Powers said.

They would also tell wavering Jews: "We don't want you to cut your relationship" with Judaism, he noted. Jews were told that in becoming Christian they would actually be more Jewish. "Add to your Jewishness, fulfill your Jewishness, become a Bible-believing Jew -- a Messianic Jew," Powers said, paraphrasing the missionaries.

"If by doing this you become complete, what am I? Am I less complete?" Powers asked. "There is an underlying current of antisemitism in this movement because of the thought that any Jew who doesn't have this is incomplete."

Powers said that God has given the Jewish people guidelines on how to recognize and accept the messiah. The Jews did not reject Jesus, he said. Jesus simply did not fit those guidelines, just like many others who came before and after him claiming to be the messiah.

Among the criteria for the messiah, according to Jewish belief, is that he will come from human parents; his coming will bring world peace; and he will return the Jews to Israel where they will rebuild the Holy Temple. None of these criteria apply to Jesus, Powers noted.

All branches of Judaism agree that one cannot accept Jesus as the messiah and claim to be practicing Judaism. The

INVITE A FRIEND TO SEDER

Pesach will soon be here. And, as you are well aware, one of the things we do during the seder is to ask all who are hungry to come to our table and eat. Well folks, that is exactly what I am asking you to actualize.

If you have space at your seder table, or if you want to squeeze over a bit and make space, there are students and other members of the Jewish community who can help you fulfill this mitzvah. Anyone who wishes to host a fellow Jew for seder should contact the Temple Adath Israel office (269-2979), the Ohavay Zion Synagogue office (266-8050), or the Lexington Havurah (223-1299) to let them know how many guests you can welcome for Seder. And anyone in the community, including university students, who wants to commemorate the Exodus with a Central Kentucky family should call the same sources to request hospitality.

Chag Sameach Pesach to everyone! *

testimonies of Holocaust victims around the country in hearings held in Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Chicago, Miami, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and New York.

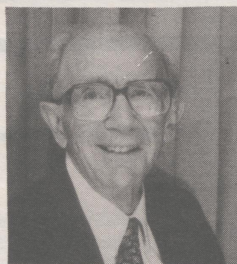

The collective group of insurance regulators has asked the insurers identified in the lawsuit to voluntarily provide them access to company records and policyholder information pre-dating the Holocaust.

"The business of insurance is regulated by the individual states. I believe the responsibility for resolving this issue lies with the individual states," said Commissioner Nichols, secretary-treasurer of the NAIC. "Through the cooperative efforts of the other states and the NAIC and the sharing of information and resources, we hope to give some resolution to those who have suffered tremendous injustice."

Kentucky has contacted the Jewish Community Federation in Louisville and the United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism in New York to request their assistance in our state's efforts to resolve these issues.

The United States is home to more than 150,000 Holocaust survivors. Seventy Kentuckians are voluntarily registered with the National Holocaust Museum as survivors of the Holocaust. The museum estimates the actual number of survivors to be three or four times the number on the registry.

Kentuckians who need assistance in resolving a Holocaust-related insurance claim should call the Office of the Commissioner at 1-800-595-6053. *

Time To Brag?

by Michael E. Adelstein

I was unwise.)

But my point is that perhaps many Americans have similar feelings and do not realize the valuable contributions that Jews have made to our country. Part of the problem is that we are often unidentifiable. Of course, most people know that Ruth Bader Ginsberg is Jewish but few realize that Stephen Breyer is also. I would guess that such film people as Woody Allen, Barbra Streisand, Steven Spielberg, and the Marx Brothers are known to be Jewish, but what about Harold Pinter, Edward G. Robinson, and Otto Preminger? And most people knowledgeable about music know that Isaac Stern, Leonard Bernstein, Oscar Hammerstein, Artur Schnabel (the "steins" are identifiable), and Aaron Copland are Jews, but what about George Gershwin, Richard Rodgers, and Gustav Mahler?

And how many people, even Jews, know that Andy Grove, head of Intel, Time's man of 1997, and Michael Dell, head of Dell Computer, are Jewish?

Or, do the millions of people who heard glowing TV tributes about Fred Friendly, who died recently, realize that he was a Jew?

I could go on and on but my point is clear. Most people do not realize that hundreds of outstanding Americans are Jews, who comprise less than two percent of our population.

For many years Jewish-Americans leaders felt that such ignorance was fine. The less said about American Jews, the better. Why call attention to ourselves? Why rock the boat? Life since the end of World War II has generally been fine. Anti-Semitism has been in decline.

But it has been in decline partially because some Jewish-Americans became more assertive. I'll try to document this point in my next column. For now, I want to suggest that we call attention to ourselves and our contributions. The African-Americans have shown us the way with their Black History Month. We might start with a Jewish or Jewish-American History Week. We have much to brag about. Let's do it. *

Stressed Out? . . . RELAX!!!!!!

Most of us have stress in our life. Most of us have daily challenges we must meet that may be the cause for our stress. Stressors may be work related, school related, family related, or a result from other aspects in our lives. Stress may sometimes be a catalyst for positive change or events in our lives, but more often than not, stress is not a positive experience.

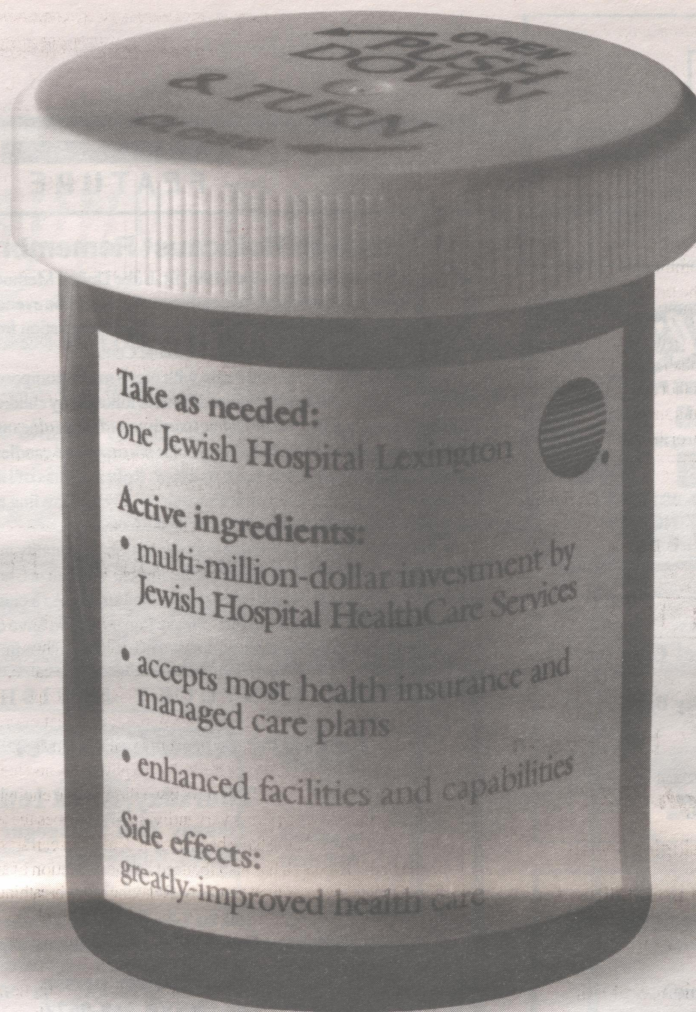

Stress is typically a response to a perceived threat or danger in our lives. It is an instinctual response to the "fight/flight" that occurs when brain signals alarm to our body and organs. The problem with stress is that it takes a toll on us physically and mentally. Eventually our immune system wears down and then our body. (As if we didn't have enough to worry about!)

Just as the causes of stress vary individually, so does the way in which each of us deal with the stress in our lives. There have been a great deal of research on the effects of stress on the mind and on the body. Research has also focused on the reduction of stress through relaxation and the benefits of practicing relaxation regularly. Relaxing helps breathing and circulation. Relaxing reduces the physical and emotional effects of stress, enhances the ability to concentrate and can even increase energy levels (mentally and physically). The relaxation response acts as a beta blocker. It is important and healthy and produces healthier, longer lives.

Some of us may already practice stress reduction activities. Others could use some pointers. Still others realize the benefits of relaxation and stress reduction but do not practice it. Perhaps the biggest obstacle to practicing stress reduction is time. True relaxation requires taking the time to do it, whatever the activity may be. Twenty minutes a day, however, may be all that is required to achieve a good dose of relaxation and reap the benefits. There are many ways to relax. The following is just one exercise that can produce the relaxation response. Give it a try:

- 1) Find or create a quiet environment
- 2) Get into a comfortable position.
- 3) Develop a passive mental attitude
- 4) Think of a single mental stimulus and repeat it in your mind over and over, (a word, phrase, prayer, image, etc.). If the image is disrupted by internal dialogue, concentrate and return to the image. Do this for 20 minutes, once a day, every day.
- 5) Practice, practice, practice.

Whether it be a relaxation or meditation like that above, or a hobby, sport, or other recreational activity, make it your relaxing-stress-reducing activity. The important thing is to take the time to reduce your stress and of course . . . RELAX!!!! #

Interfaith Holocaust Remembrance Service

On Sunday evening, April 19th, St. Luke United Methodist Church will host its seventh Interfaith Holocaust Remembrance Service. The evening will begin at 7:00 p.m. with a thirty minute silent video of pictures and information from the Holocaust years. The pictures were produced by the Simon Wiesenthal Center.

At 7:30 p.m. the service will begin with piano music composed and performed by 13 year old Aaron Orin. There will be six minutes of silence followed by children sharing selected readings. Mrs. Emilie Szekely and Dr. Oscar Haber (survivors of the Holocaust) will speak and they and their families will participate in the lighting of the six memorial candles. Rabbi Eric Slaton will give the Jewish Response to the Holocaust and Rev. Robert Hollas of Lexington will give the Christian Response. The service will end with music by Vivian Bowling as the congregation shares in the lighting of individual candles remembering the 6,000,000.

St. Luke desires to build a bridge with the Jewish community in standing against the atrocities of the Shoah and the silent indifference of the church. We realize Christians such as Corrie Ten Boom were an exception and not the rule in Christian Europe. As a church we stand with you in saying "This must NEVER happen again!" Please join us. If you have questions, call Carla Hunter, the service coordinator at 858-9333 or e-mail: chunter@asbury.edu. #

Let's talk about the

from Israel on Jewish unity

While the debate on religious diversity swirled around us, 800,000 Jews representing every religious and political orientation, and from all across North America, proved that, during good times and bad, the UJA Federation system is still the place where all Jews can come together to build tolerance and responsibility.

- Working with our partners in the religious movements and concerned Jews throughout our communities, the United Jewish Appeal/Council of Jewish Federations Partnership helped create a respectful place for the exchange of ideas.
- Over 80 Knesset members signed a petition supporting the recommendations of the Ne'eman Committee, the Israeli committee charged with finding accommodations on the issue of Jewish conversions. Many of those Knesset members also visited American Jewish communities and Federations over the past 90 days so that they could understand Jewish diversity in the U.S.
- Last week the Knesset officially resolved to support the Committee's report in its entirety.

There is still work to be done for the report to be fully implemented, yet Jewish Federations should be proud of their role in the developments to date ... developments that could eventually preserve the unity of the Jewish people and create a far more tolerant Israel. Because, all through this, the UJA Federation system continued to ensure that no one was isolated or left out in the cold, no one went hungry, was left alone or uncared for.

As Jews we share a common history. Today, even as we celebrate the Knesset resolution, let us rededicate ourselves to a common future where all Jews are respected and every Jew who needs help gets it.

two beliefs are mutually exclusive. "To say that you can accept Jesus and still practice Judaism is a deception and a lie," Powers emphasized.

But he did add that synagogue leaders could take an important lesson from the warmth and friendliness of messianic congregations.

"We've said it time and again, that often when somebody new comes into a synagogue, they sit down in back and everybody gives them these stares and these looks, but nobody says a word to them, except for maybe the one guy who comes over and says 'excuse me, but I think you're sitting in my seat.' We need to reach out to people, to new faces and make them feel warm and wanted. I guarantee you that is what the Hebrew Christians do."

Powers is concerned that the Jewish community downplays the growth of the messianic movement. He says that many Jews still consider them members of the fringe, "the wackos, the loonies, the people who are carrying other problems with them." And because of those feelings, mainline Judaism has essentially written these people off. These are people, Powers added, that could be making positive contributions to the Jewish community. And that is why it is important to reach out to these people and give them an opportunity to return to Judaism.

He suggests that synagogue families team up with their new members, matching a congregation family with a new family in much the same way that is being done with the Russian emigres. But he also said that synagogues and religious schools have to be tougher and realistic about dealing with the messiah questions.

"It's always been shh, don't even mention the name. Shh, you don't have to know about that. Shh, it's not Jewish, so we don't even talk about it. We have to talk about it. Our children need to know about it, so that when somebody comes along and says, 'have you examined the Jewish claims for Jesus?' we can answer them that there are no Jewish claims for Jesus." *
