Curry accepts 5-year offer from UK

By BARRY REEVES
Sports Editor

When it comes to making decisions concerning his life, Bill Curry learned something from UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton: "Be quick, but don't hurry."

After mulling-over Newton's offer to become the new UK football coach for almost a week, the University of Alabama coach decided it was time for a change.

And when the UK Athletics Board unanimously approved Newton's recommendation Monday night, Curry officially became the 32nd coach of UK's football program and the successor to retiring coach Jerry Claiborne.

"In regards to Coach Curry, I know him to be a man of great integrity by whatever standard you use," Newton said. "Whether it be his peers... current players, former players. In his personal family life or his professional life."

When Newton set out to find Claiborne's successor, he said he was looking for "a Jerry Claiborne clone." And it appears as though he found one.

"Bill Curry is recognized by many to be at the very top of his profession," Newton said. "He has been credited for the dignity, class and integrity with which he conducts his football programs, both on and off the field."

While many people in college football look upon the UK football program as a step down from Alabama, Curry said he does not agree.

"This is anything but a step down. I come from an outstanding program to an outstanding program," said Curry, who had a 26-10 record at Alabama. "... Normally, people evaluate motives and opportunities based on how they would respond. What it means is that they have a different set of standards and values than I have."

Curry, 47, said that although he was not asked to leave Alabama by anyone in the administration, he said that it was in the Alabama players' "best interest" that he leave.

"It is necessary in our business — if you have a mission to teach young people what it means to win on and off the field — that everybody in the organization feel the same way and share the same principles and work in the same direction toward the same end," said Curry, who was named Southeastern Conference Coach of the Year by The Associated Press and The Nashville Banner.

Curry, who had turned Newton's offer down in early December, said he began seriously considering the UK position "when it became clear that the very people (the players) that I have served in my mission were having to deal with the degree of controversy from within, (and it) was not going to be resolved, then my position (concerning UK) changed."

Curry said his decision to come to UK was made when "it became clear to (my family) that this was an opportunity for us to continue what we believe in, which is to teach young people how it feels to be the best they can be in the classroom, on the field and in their personal life."

Since being named Alabama's coach in 1987 season, Curry has been hounded by fans who were upset that he was not a disciple of legendary Paul "Bear" Bryant. And the cries from Crimson Tide supporters reached their peak following Alabama's third straight loss to arch-rival Auburn in the final game of the regular season.

But Curry said that criticisms from "Bama fans did not affect him."

"If I personally had accepted what other people thought of me, then I would still be pumping gas in College Park, Ga.," said Curry, who was accompanied to the board meeting by his wife, Carolyn, and daughter, Kristen, 22.

After meeting with the Wildcat players Monday afternoon, Curry said that his opinion of Claiborne increased.

"We've already met with the Kentucky players, and I'm impressed. It's obvious to me who's been working with them — Jerry Claiborne," he said. "... I don't

A YEAR OF CHANGES

To say that 1989 was uneventful at UK would be like declaring that little happened behind the Iron Curtain last year. In the past year, UK lost its president and two athletic coaches, and its men's basketball program was hit with a three-year probation by the NCAA.

But not all news for UK last year was bad. While the prospects for increased funding from Frankfort were dimmed when the Kentucky Supreme Court declared that $300-$500 million had to be spent to restructure the state's elementary and secondary education system, private gifts to UK in fiscal year 1989 hit an all-time high.

In addition, faculty research continued to receive national honors, and the academic quality of the freshman class hit an all-time high with an average American College Test score of more than 22.

Yet despite the positive things that happened, following President David Roselle's resignation there was a feeling of desperation among many in the UK community that the worst was yet to come in 1990.

David Roselle Resigns

1 Citing the NCAA probe into the men's basketball program as preventing him from implementing his programs, UK President David Roselle announced Dec. 14 that he will become president of the University of Delaware.

Roselle, who was hired as UK's ninth president in March 1987, had been besieged by budgetary woes, low faculty salaries, a corrupt basketball program and constant harassment from Kentucky Gov. Wallace Wilkinson since coming to UK.

Although Roselle downplayed the poor relationship he had with Wilkinson, he acknowledged that it was difficult to make many changes without sufficient funding from the state.

A rally was held by more than 400 UK faculty, students, and staff and state political leaders in late November urging Roselle to stay at UK. During the rally, UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton, who was hired by Roselle, pleaded with the president not to leave: "Dr. Roselle... you are not only wanted but needed."

Roselle said he was touched by the outpouring of campus support, but said the key to keeping him from leaving UK would be a pledge from Frankfort that higher education would be adequately funded in the next biennium.

"In order for progress I need some help to do that. I need some financial help," Roselle said. "Unless I am making progress, unless I am being a good president I don't think the University is well served by my being here."

Roselle said his job also was difficult because he had to spend time lobbying state leaders when he rather would have been tending to administrative matters. "I don't do politics; I do education," he said bluntly. "And if I'm going to do education the politicians need to figure out how to get us some more money so that we can do it in an appropriate manner."

The joint legislative committee on appropriations and revenue promised Roselle that its members would fight for higher education's cause in the 1990 session, but Wilkinson remained silent on the issue, saying that Roselle's decision to leave UK was a personal one that did not involve him.

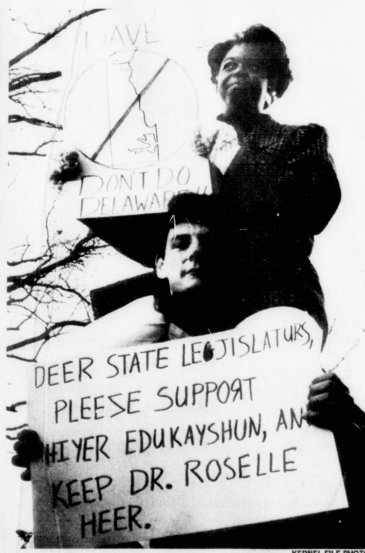

Many fear that Roselle's decision to leave will cause faculty members to begin looking elsewhere for employment. The bright future faculty thought Roselle could bring to UK was one of the few reasons they had for staying at the University.

At his press conference announcing the Delaware job, Roselle appeared tired and frustrated with the political battles of the

Inquest to be conducted into student's death

By TONIA WILY
Campus Editor

An inquest will be conducted into the death last year of UK student Thomas Michael Goeghegan under the administration of the new Fayette County Coroner, Dr. David Hull.

Goeghegan was killed when Steven Knight, 17, in a westbound automobile, struck Goeghegan, 22, as Goeghegan was crossing against the traffic light at the Euclid and Woodland avenues intersection on the night of Nov. 18.

The inquest, scheduled for Jan. 24, will determine if criminal charges should be brought against someone involved in the case, said Sgt. Paul Simms of the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Police Department.

"All we want to do is gather everyone involved and establish some facts," said Fayette County Deputy Coroner Charles Howell.

"Dr. Hull has decided that his office would like to have more of an in-depth investigation in order to alleviate family members' (concerns) that justice wasn't served in this particular instance," Simms said. "It gives everyone a chance to put their cards on the table."

Traces of cannabinoid metabolites were found in a urine test taken from Knight. Cannabinoid metabolites are a metabolic breakdown of tetrahydrocannabinol, an active ingredient in marijuana.

The investigation will determine if Knight was impaired at the time the accident occurred, Simms said.

"In this particular instance it doesn't show he was smoking marijuana that night because THC is stored in fatty tissue in the body and is broken down over a period of time," Simms said. "It can be stored up to 30 days."

No other traces of drugs or alcohol were found in Knight in a routine toxicology blood and alcohol test.

Autopsy results also found no traces of alcohol and drugs in Goeghegan.

If investigators find that Knight was impaired at the time of the accident, they would advise the Fayette District Court, which is in charge of juvenile court jurisdiction, Simms said.

Meriwether appointed to BOT by Wilkinson

Dr. Robert P. Meriwether was appointed by Gov. Wallace Wilkinson Friday to replace Larry Forgy on UK's Board of Trustees.

Wilkinson also reappointed trustee Billy B. Wilcoxson of Lexington to the board.

Meriwether is a Paducah neurosurgeon and said he contributed several thousand dollars to Wilkinson's 1987 general election gubernatorial campaign.

Wilkinson said in December that he would not reappoint Forgy to the board because Forgy accused the governor of trying to stack the board against UK President David Roselle.

Meriwether, who also has contributed several thousand dollars to UK, is a 1969 UK graduate and attended medical school at Tulane University. He also is on the UK Development Council.

Suspects in alleged rape to appear in front of jury

By ALLEN D. GREER
Staff Writer

Two 18-year-old men charged with raping a female UK student in a residence hall last semester will appear before a Fayette County grand jury Jan. 17 to determine if they should be indicted on charges of first-degree rape.

Jeffrey Alan Tomlin and Chad Eric Vannauker, both of Bowling Green, were arrested Nov. 17 after the 19-year-old woman filed a rape report with the UK Police Department. Police are still investigating a report of a third assailant, according to Ralph Derickson of UK.

The alleged rape occurred in Haggin Hall either late on Nov. 14 or early Nov. 15, according to UK. Tomlin and Vannauker, who pleas of not guilty to felony charges of first-degree rape during their Nov. 20 arraignment in Fayette District Court.

Tomlin was released Nov. 18 from the Fayette County Detention Center on a $10,000 full cash bond. Vannauker was released into the custody of a third party Nov. 20. District Court Judge Gary Payne set a pre-trial hearing date for Dec. 12, but the hearing was waived by attorneys for both defendants, and the case was automatically sent to the grand jury.

Tomlin's attorney, State Sen. Michael Moloney, and Vannauker's attorney, Lee Rowland, declined to discuss why they waived the preliminary hearing.

Tomlin is enrolled in UK classes this semester, according to the Reg-

Wildcats excited about playing under Curry following first meeting

By GREGORY A. HALL
Staff Writer

It didn't take long for Bill Curry to make an impression on UK's football team.

After Curry met with his new squad Monday afternoon, most UK players interviewed later that night were enthusiastic about their new coach.

"The players are the most important thing," Curry said at a press conference Monday night after being hired by the UK Athletics Association Board of Directors.

"Everything we do will be aimed at the players and we want them to know that. We want them to understand the way we do things and why."

And some of his players already have gotten that impression.

"He came across as a really intelligent man," junior linebacker Randy Holleran said. "He said that his phone number would be given to us when he got it."

Some players said that Curry's emphasis on discipline reminded them of former UK coach Jerry Claiborne. Others said that his enthusiasm reminded them of UK basketball coach Rick Pitino.

"I kind of knew what kind of guy he was 'cause he's kind of a protégé of Coach Claiborne's," junior cornerback Chris Tolbert said. "He told us that we have to follow Coach Claiborne's rules until he comes back for spring ball. It's like starting all over. Everybody's anxious to get started."

"He seems like a pretty strict disciplinarian," junior offensive guard Joel Mazella said. "There's just kind of a charisma about him. Everything's open right now."

Although Curry did not promise

UK fans Monday night that they would be in New Orleans next year, several UK players sounded like the Superdome will become the Wildcats' home.

"He told everybody on the football team to believe that they were gonna be the best football player in history at that position," Holleran said. "I think the team wanted to go out and practice today."

even know what we have to work with. But I know what the principles (of the team) are here and I have a great love and respect for everything that Newton and Coach Claiborne have done here."

And Claiborne also was quick to comment about Curry's decision to come to UK.

"I'm very happy that Bill accepted the head football position at the University of Kentucky," Claiborne said in a news release. "He will do an excellent job in every phase of the program — socially, academically, athletically and in the treatment of the players."

"Bill will step right in and keep the program moving in the right direction."

Curry said that he has not made a decision on who his new staff will be. He said some of his assistants at Alabama "said they would definitely come," but others had not made a decision.

"We will fill out our staff as time permits. I don't know what will happen. ... That's very much in a state of flux," he said.

Curry said he could not comment on whether any current UK assistants would be retained until after he meets with them.

As far as recruiting is concerned, Curry said he would begin "this weekend" after returning from San Francisco where a coach's meeting is taking place.

"We are the state university and our first priority will be to properly evaluate the in-state players and to recruit the ones we believe are good enough to achieve our goals, which will be to first win the SEC," he said. "Beyond that, we will recruit the surrounding areas. Then

Prospects bright for Kentucky reopening

By HUNTER HAYES
Assistant Arts Editor

Two years ago the Lexington arts community suffered a great setback when a fire in an adjacent restaurant damaged the Kentucky Theatre and Movies on Main.

The fire caused the theaters to close, but the theater may be in operation again soon because of a recent decision to purchase the building by the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government.

The red tape and litigation that resulted after the fire became much more of a hassle than any smoke and water damage done to the Kentucky.

The lawsuits over the theater stemmed from a disagreement between the owners, according to Urban County Councilwoman Pam Miller.

Miller, who has been active in the effort to reopen the Kentucky, said that the owners "couldn't decide who should do what — who should pay for the cost of renovating the building. The buildings were in very bad shape not only from the fire but from before that."

Once the litigation was settled "the city began negotiating with the owners and having an appraisal done and so forth to see how we

"For the past two years there has been nothing except for the first-run movies like 'Rambo III' that you see at these theater complexes."

Pam Miller,
Urban County Council Women

could acquire it and reopen it the way it was before," Miller said.

The Kentucky provided Lexington with a variety of films at inexpensive prices. Since the theater closed, the kind of film genres has been limited to commercial ones.

"For the past two years there has been nothing except for the first-run movies like 'Rambo III' that you see at these theater complexes — Southpark, Northpark and so on," Miller said. "What the Kentucky offered, and will offer again, is famous old films like Humphrey Bogart, foreign films like Ingmar Bergman and Fellini, art films that are lower budget and have a different audience."

"The other part that made the Kentucky attractive is that it's always been reasonably priced. It was always $2 and $2.25 while these other theaters were going up to $5 and $6 a film."

Since the Kentucky closed, all cinemas in Lexington have been owned by Loew's Cinemas. This week two new theaters owned by Cinemark Cinemas will open.

Cinemark officials said they may try to keep one screen at a theater available for movies similar to those that the Kentucky offered, but it is contingent upon the interest and support of the community.

Since the city bought the theater, prospects for the Kentucky reopening are the most encouraging since the fire, Miller said.

Lexington Mayor Scotty Baesler and "I am involved in talking to architects about different ways to use the office space above the theater."

"We'll have a proposal, I'd say, within 30 days. Then we'll want to lease the theater to a private group. Then they will have to continue renovating the theater and they will operate it. We don't want to have anything to do with operating the theater."

When the Kentucky closed, some private citizens attempted to purchase and operate it, but Miller said those plans fell through because the group was poorly organized.

The expense of renovating and reopening the theater prompted the city to buy it, Miller said.

"Frankly, we were convinced that there was no one in the private sector that could afford to buy the theater, renovate them and operate the Kentucky Theatre the way it used to be operated," Miller said. "Too much money would be involved to have such a use — they would have had to charge 10 times as much (for admission) to get their money out."

Concern from the theater's patrons and from historic preservationists also encouraged the city to buy the theater, Miller said.

Although the Kentucky appears to be headed toward reopening, the fate of Movies on Main is less certain. But even if Movies on Main does not reopen, the city plans to preserve the building it was in.

Once the Kentucky reopens it will become an integral part of the downtown arts scene, Miller said.

"We consider downtown to be an arts district already," she said. "It has the Opera House ... ArtsPlace, art galleries and the Kentucky Theatre will be a part of that whole thing so you can see art films, historic films — that kind of thing."

MICHAEL CLEVELAND/Kernal Staff

The Kentucky Theatre was considered one of the ten best movie houses in the country during the '20s. Before a devastating fire over two years ago, the Kentucky brought many off-beat, foreign and cult films to Lexington.

Anson Funderburgh and the Rockets keep the blues alive

Mass media introduce classic artists to youth

By HUNTER HAYES
Assistant Arts Editor

By the end of the 1980s there was a resurgence of roots-based music. One of the most popular forms of that style continues to be the father of it all — the blues.

But the blues is finding an increasing audience with younger generations with increased exposure on the radio and through other media such as MTV. Groups such as the Robert Cray Band, the Fabulous Thunderbirds and Stevie Ray Vaughan that at one time had only a cult following have enjoyed much success through mass exposure.

Although you will not see their latest videos on MTV or hear them frequently on the radio, another blues-based band that is turning more than a few heads is Anson Funderburgh and the Rockets.

Funderburgh said his band has been helped by the exposure other blues bands have enjoyed.

"There's been a time when you couldn't make a lot of money doing this kind of music," Funderburgh said. "It's kind of like when one (group) gets good exposure it pulls the whole chain along."

The Rockets, who are five-time winners (1988-89) in the prestigious W.C. Handy awards for blues groups, are gaining attention with the release of their fifth album, Rack 'Em Up.

Following the critical success of their previous album, Sins, was no simple task for the Texas-based group.

Showcasing the band's mixture of Funderburgh's Texas-style blues guitar with singer/harmonica player Sam Myers' talents, this album shows that this group is definitely in the same league as other Texas bands such as the Fabulous Thunderbirds.

The group is rounded out with bassist Mike Judge, pianist Matt McCabe and drummer Danny Cochran.

Though the Rockets are a relatively young group, Sam Myers is somewhat of a legend in his own right.

Myers was not only a drummer for Elmore James in the 1950s, but

"There's been a time when you couldn't make a lot of money doing this kind of music. It's kind of like when one (group) gets good exposure it pulls the whole chain along."

Anson Funderburgh

he also had a hit single with "My Love Is Here To Stay" in 1957.

"I met him in Jackson, Mississippi when a different version of the Rockets was playing in that town," Funderburgh said of his chance meeting with Myers. "I've heard of him forever — I was aware of him."

Funderburgh and Myers also released a version of "My Love Is Here To Stay" on the first album they played on together.

Playing the blues nightly has become a way of life for the 34-year-old guitarist. Although many young guitar players have a rapid-fire machine gun style, he is a sharpshooter with deadly accurate aim.

A professional performer for almost 20 years, Funderburgh has learned to master his style of playing as few players have.

In fact, no one plays a 12-bar blues shuffle the way Funderburgh

Although some people insist that the blues are dead, anyone wishing to write an obituary for the art form obviously has never heard of the Texas band Anson Funderburgh

Concert REVIEW

and the Rockets featuring Sam Myers.

Of the 150 people lucky enough to have been at Breeding's Monday night, they certainly know that the blues is alive and well in the capable hands of Funderburgh and Myers.

The group took the stage and began their first hourlong set not with a turbo-charged rocker, as their name might suggest, but with a swinging mid-tempo instrumental.

Veteran bluesman Myers, who has performed with Elmore James of "Dust My Blues" fame, joined the group for the second song and sparked the younger musicians with his experienced voice and soulful harmonica.

Funderburgh looks quite unassuming and harmless. Although many young guitar players have a rapid-fire machine gun style, he is a sharpshooter with deadly accurate aim.

A professional performer for almost 20 years, Funderburgh has learned to master his style of playing as few players have.

In fact, no one plays a 12-bar blues shuffle the way Funderburgh

does. He is able to entice his audience with seductively melodic lines before going in for the kill.

Myers, on the other hand, looks every bit of the blues master that he sounds like. His vocals give the Rockets that authenticity that many bands lack.

He is able to provide that not only by singing with experience but with great conviction as well. He knows how the blues should be sung and played, and he delivers each song with that knowledge firmly at hand.

One of the more surprising members of the group was keyboard player Matt McCabe of Boston. The only player not from the South or Southwest, he sounded as if he could play in any juke joint on the "chillin' circuit" or in a posh hotel lounge.

Playing with his back to the rest of the band, his textures blended well with Funderburgh's guitar.

The Rockets are rounded out by a rhythm section consisting of drummer Danny Cochran, the newest member of the group, and Mike Judge on bass. The rhythm section never failed to provide a steady, swinging groove throughout the evening.

The performance was divided into two sets, each an hour long, and a final encore.

The sets featured many songs from the band's latest album, Rack 'Em Up, including "I'll Keep On Trying," "All This Love," and the gem "I'm Your Professor."

past 2 1/2 years — another casualty of Kentucky politics.

Men's Basketball Given Probation

2 After a 13-month long investigation, the NCAA placed the UK men's basketball team on probation in early May for three years.

The probation banned the program from participating in the NCAA Tournament for two years and prohibited the team from being televised live for one year.

The charges levied against the program ranged from cash payments and free gifts to recruits to cheating on the American College Test.

The NCAA also banned sophomore Eric Manuel and freshman Chris Mills from NCAA play. Two other players, both sophomores, also left the team — forward LeRon Ellis to Syracuse University and guard Sean Sutton to Lexington Community College. The investigation also forced UK's entire coaching staff to quit.

The Wildcats also were stripped of their 1987-88 Southeastern Conference championship, and the NCAA ordered UK to erase three NCAA Tournament games from its record.

In announcing the sanctions, the NCAA said that things could have been worse for the winningest program in college basketball: UK could have been given the death penalty — banned from NCAA basketball — had it not been for the cooperation of UK President David Roselle and his staff.

UK's internal investigation into the program was cited by the NCAA as a model example for the way member schools should act during a probe. "You really don't know how blessed you are to have a president ... of your university who is brilliant, articulate and with as much courage and as strong a leader as David Roselle," NCAA

Executive Director Richard Schultz told the Lexington Rotary club in November.

Meanwhile, the 1988-89 season was a nightmare for Wildcat fans. UK had its first losing season in more than 60 years, posting an overall record of 13-19 and losing in the first round of the SEC tournament.

Faculty Gets Pay Raise

3 In an attempt to narrow the increasing gap between UK salaries and those at benchmark institutions, UK trustees voted at their July meeting to give faculty a seven percent raise, on average.

The University was able to pay for the raise by cutting 3 percent from each department's budget. But even with the raise, faculty's salaries remained more than $5,000 lower than those of their colleagues at benchmark schools.

Although the cuts did not eliminate any jobs, they forced departments to hold vacant positions open longer, cut back on supplies and not purchase some equipment.

Many faculty would say that raise was well-deserved. During the 1989 fiscal year, private gifts to the University set an all-time record, exceeding $30 million.

And according to Rex L. Bailey, who is in charge of the University's fund-raising, more money is out there waiting to be donated by alumni, businesses and endowments.

Bailey met with the deans of the Lexington campus colleges last fall to find new ways to raise money. The one drawback to private gifts, Bailey said, is that most of the money is earmarked for specific purposes and many times cannot be given to the programs that need it the most.

C.M. Newton Named Athletics Director

4 When Cliff Hagan was forced to resign last year, the University's main concern was to find someone dedicated to running a program that played by NCAA rules. Those qualities UK found in C.M. Newton.

Newton, who played basketball at UK under Adolph Rupp and coached at the University of Alabama and Vanderbilt University, was applauded by University officials for his high ethical standards.

Newton was instrumental in hiring men's basketball coach Rick Pitino, and when Jerry Claiborne resigned in November, Newton made it clear that he would have the final say in who the next football coach was — not boosters.

One of the more encouraging actions taken by Newton last year was the promotion his office did with non-income producing sports.

Under Hagan, the athletics program was criticized for being concerned only about winning basketball trophies.

But Newton has taken a no-nonsense approach that recognizes the importance of developing a well-rounded athletic program that also stresses integrity and success in the classroom.

Sutton Resigns; Pitino Named Coach

5 When Eddie Sutton got the UK coaching job he said that he would have crawled to UK to coach the Wildcats.

But before a live national television audience in March Sutton announced that he was quitting as head coach of the Wildcats.

During his four seasons, he compiled an 88-39 record.

Sutton was forced to resign by Roselle because of the beating that the University's image suffered during the NCAA investigation.

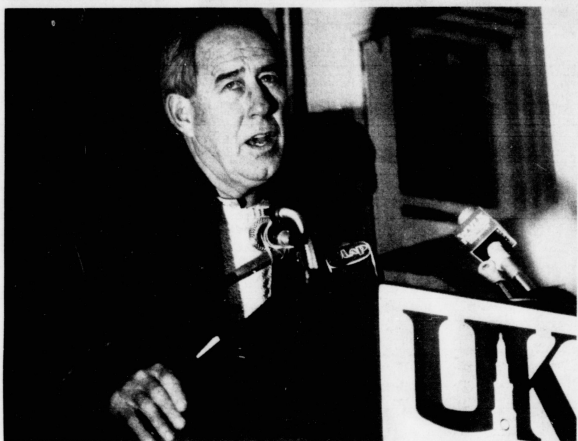

Sutton maintained his innocence throughout the NCAA investigation, and was never accused by the NCAA of breaking any rules, but he was criticized for not having better control over his program and coaches.

A little more than 2 1/2 months after Sutton quit, UK found his replacement in New York Knicks Coach Rick Pitino.

Pitino's decision to leave the Big Apple puzzled New York City sportswriters, who questioned why he would want to leave one of the best NBA teams to coach a college program that had just been placed on three-year probation by the NCAA.

Pitino made his mark in basketball while a head coach at Boston College and then Providence College, taking an underdog Providence team to the 1987 Final Four. But what interested Roselle the most in Pitino was his reputation of having high ethical standards and an emphasis on academics.

It was not long after coming to Lexington that Wildcat fans realized things would be different under Pitino, with a high-powered offense and pressure defense that had never been seen during the 58 previous seasons.

Pitino began the 1989-90 season with only two returning starters and a team depleted by NCAA sanctions, but by the last game of 1989, Pitino's Wildcats gave No. 8 University of Louisville a run for its money before coming up short in the end. Wildcat fans could only think of what the future holds once Pitino gets some All-Americans on his squad.

Wethington Named Interim President

6 After finishing as the runner-up to Roselle for the UK presidency in 1987, Charles Wethington was named interim president Dec. 28 by UK's Board of Trustees.

Wethington — who has been an administrator in UK's community college system for 22 years, eight as chancellor — was selected by a special committee over Chancellor for the Medical Center Peter Bossmworth.

Wethington was opposed by many UK faculty because of his close ties with Gov. Wallace Wilkinson. Wethington and Wilkinson are both Casey County natives and friends, and many faculty feared that Wethington would be more attentive to Wilkinson's political needs rather than UK's needs.

Following the meeting, many faculty who were in attendance said the appointment of Wethington gave the impression that he had been railroaded through by the governor.

But shortly after his appointment, Wethington met with leaders of UK faculty, who said they were impressed by his commitment to work with faculty members.

At the Dec. 28 meeting, the board defeated a motion by trustee Larry Forgy that would not have allowed the interim president to be a candidate for the permanent presidency.

Forgy claimed that allowing the interim president to be a candidate would discourage quality candidates from applying for the job. Although Wethington did not declare himself a candidate for the presidency, he did not take himself out of the picture.

Claiborne came to UK in 1982 to a program that had been rocked by scandal and probation under Fran Curci. After Curci was fired by the UK Athletics Association Board of Directors, Claiborne was hired, promising to establish a winning program and restore the program's credibility.

While his teams did not set many records on the gridiron, his 1988 team had the highest percent of players to graduate, better than the University of Notre Dame and Duke University.

Many expected UK to be invited to a postseason bowl last season, only to be disappointed by the Wildcats' 6-5 overall mark.

Claiborne's highlight of the season was when 17 of his players were selected to the SEC academic honor roll, the most players selected from a team.

UK Announces Strategic Plan

8 At the September Board of Trustees meeting, UK President David Roselle announced the University's strategic plan, what he called "a plan for a plan."

The purpose of the plan was to clearly set UK's goals and priorities as it entered the next decade.

The plan envisioned three overall goals: strengthen the University's commitment to scholarship and academic excellence; provide leadership to assist the state and nation in dealing with issues; and take care of and develop the University's existing resources.

The plan also better defined what the University's purpose is and how it should interact with its community.

More importantly, the strategic plan gave the University a program to present to lawmakers outlining the University's purpose and goals. During the 1988 session of the General Assembly, Wilkinson criticized the state's universities for not being clear in their missions.

Hemenway Proposes Campus Agenda

9 Chancellor for the Lexington Campus Robert Hemenway officially arrived July 1, and one of the first actions he took was to propose a 10-point plan for improving and uniting the Lexington Campus.

Hemenway, former chairman of UK's English department who came from the University of Oklahoma where he was dean of the College of Arts & Sciences, outlined a plan in September that established the Lexington Campus' priorities and where it ought to be heading.

High on the chancellor's list was for the University to articulate its values, cut through the red tape, conserve fiscal resources and prepare students to compete in the 21st century's global economy.

Hemenway also urged the University community to excel in specific areas, rather than viewing its mission with an "across-the-board mentality."

two sophomores announced their candidacies for president and vice president of UK's Student Government Association, but few expected the two to win by such large margins.

Lohman defeated his nearest opponent in the presidential race by almost 500 votes; Foster ran away with the vice presidency, receiving more than 1,100 votes and beat her closest opponent by more than 600 votes.

The two sophomores became the youngest students in more than 10 years to be elected to the top spots in SGA's executive branch.

Equally as surprising as Lohman's margin of victory was Kennedy James' second-place finish in the presidential race. James, who was a senator at large, was the first black candidate to finish strongly in the SGA presidential race.

IFC official Rizvi resigns from post amid controversy

By TOM SPALDING
Executive Editor

An Interfraternity Council officer resigned last month after he was caught trying to take a "substantial amount" of money from an IFC fundraising project, a source close to the situation said.

Sayed Amir "Saj" Rizvi, former IFC vice president at large and a UK Student Government Association senator at large, cited personal reasons for quitting those positions when he resigned in mid-December.

Mike Johnson, who will be leaving as IFC president, said that Rizvi resigned from IFC because of problems "stemming from improprieties" with IFC funds.

A source close to the situation said that Rizvi was given the option to either resign or face impeachment by the IFC. Rizvi, who said last month that he was going home to his native country of Kuwait, could not be reached for comment.

As of late yesterday, Rizvi, a 20-year-old junior, had not registered for spring semester classes. The last day for registration is Jan. 17.

Victor Hazard, assistant dean of students, would not say if charges had been filed or if any disciplinary action was taken against Rizvi.

"All I can say is (that) the Dean of Students Office is aware of the situation and we handled it," Hazard said. "Everything is confidential. There was a violation, we looked into it and there were indeed some infractions."

Hazard would not elaborate on what the infractions were or who they involved.

Rizvi, who was in charge of IFC's philanthropy projects, tried to take a "substantial amount" of money in connection with T-shirt sales from a three-on-three basketball tournament sponsored by the IFC this fall, according to the source.

The source said that two Dean of Students Office officials were performing a routine check of invoices from the sales when they discovered a discrepancy and that "some numbers didn't add up," the source said. The source did not specify how much money Rizvi tried to take.

Ron Lee, UK's fraternity adviser, said, "I can tell you with the whole rumor... the IFC did not lose any money."

Lee refused to comment further on the situation.

Steve Mott, president of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, said that IFC members were told by Johnson at an IFC meeting Monday only that Rizvi had resigned.

IFC members were told by Johnson "not to spread any rumors," Mott said. "I don't know what (Rizvi) has done."

Lee said the vice president at large normally has "very minimal" contact with IFC funds. Only the president, treasurer and fraternity adviser may acquire money by signing checks, Lee said.

Rizvi, a member of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity, resigned his seat as SGA senator at large Dec. 13, but SGA President Sean Lohman said that Rizvi was at risk of being purged by the Senate because he had missed several Senate meetings.

Rizvi's SGA seat probably will be filled by Chris Essid, Lohman said.

Sean Coleman, who takes over as IFC's new president Jan. 22, said that he wasn't aware of any improprieties involving Rizvi but "what is under the bridge is under the bridge."

"I'm not passive but it happened in another term of office... we're gonna use (the) strictest safeguards as ever would have been used," Coleman said.

Third time a charm for new Add-drop

By JONATHAN MILLER
Staff Writer

The third time around for decentralized Add-drop was a charm for the Registrar's Office.

The first two semesters decentralized Add-drop was used, students had to wait in lines several hours long and deal with the computer system breaking down.

"We have never had this much success with Add-drop," said Lisa Collins, registration coordinator. "The long lines at the end of the day were a piece of cake for us to get them in and out efficiently."

University Registrar Randall Dahl attributed the success of the system to the cooperation of students.

"We've been working (on Add-drop) for 15 months," Dahl said. "We're getting better at it, but I believe that the students are understanding how the system works."

For the first time, freshmen were allowed to go through Add-drop first and seniors had to wait until later in the day.

"We thought it would be fair for freshmen to go through the line first," Dahl said. "Freshmen tend to encounter more difficulties in their scheduling of classes."

But few freshmen took advantage of the early time.

"I'm shocked," Collins said. "I'm surprised that they (freshmen) didn't take advantage of this."

"I was afraid that I would have to wait in a line for three hours," said Andrea Rosenthal, an undecided freshman.

"The only time I had to wait was when the computers broke down," Rosenthal said, "but it only took five minutes until the computers were running again."

than his scheduled time in hope of getting through it faster.

"I thought there would be a huge line... but when I got here there weren't many freshmen in line," Huffman said.

Huffman said he didn't like the new order in which students went through Add-drop.

"I understand why they changed the order, but I still think that seniors should get a chance at classes first," he said.

More sophomores and juniors came than did freshmen, but no class showed more than seniors.

But even seniors found that they didn't have to wait as long as they had anticipated.

"I waited for 30 minutes," said Robert Bond, a mechanical engineering senior. "This was quicker than previous Add-drops that I've experienced."

Dormitory openings cause dip in revenue

By TONJA WILT
Campus Editor

An increase in the number of residence hall vacancies this semester will mean less money for resident programs and maintenance.

Although there are 200 places are unoccupied 50 above average, this semester, the situation will not cause a problem, according to Penny Cox, director of housing.

"We are right at 200 in a system that's 5,359 (spaces for) undergraduates," Cox said. "It's not a serious problem. You're never going to be at full capacity."

The University loses $773 — the cost of a space in a residence hall for one semester — on each vacancy. Residence hall fees are used for maintenance of the buildings, so with less money this year, some areas in the halls will be neglected, Cox said.

Those items that cannot be handled will be chosen from the bottom of a list of priorities for the buildings, she said.

"We have a tremendous list of things. We first cut off the lowest priorities, such as cosmetics like equipment, painting, and furniture," she said. "I don't believe 200 level will get into postponing safety."

The 10 vacancies in Jewell Hall on North Campus, which holds up to 106 students, have not caused any problems, said Amy Thompson, Jewell's hall director.

"It doesn't cause a problem, personally, I wish we were full to capacity because more people would be around," Thompson said.

With fewer residents less money is available for hall programs, Thompson said.

"We get a percentage per person in the building to use for programs," she said. "But you have less people to provide for so it even's out."

Angela Slone, a biology major, entered her freshman year without a roommate but will be assigned a roommate this semester.

"It was kinda weird. I walked in expecting to find someone there, but then I got used to it. It was a lot quieter to study," Slone said.

One of the reasons for the increased number of openings this semester is that this year's freshman class has 300 less students than last year's, Cox said.

Also, fewer students usually want to live in residence halls during the spring semester.

"The pool that you have to draw from are high school students. High school students don't graduate in December so this is not a demand," Cox said. "The only people you have to draw from are those who have been out of school for a while."

Kernel jobs change for spring semester

Staff reports

Tom Spalding is executive editor of the Kentucky Kernel this semester. Spalding, a journalism junior from Lexington, was sports editor of the 1988-89 Kernel and summer editor of the 1989 Kernel.

Spalding's duties as executive editor include covering higher education in the 1990 General Assembly, the UK Board of Trustees UK administration, and coordinating special projects.

Brian Jent, who was executive editor of last semester's Kernel, is now managing editor. As managing editor, Jent is in charge of the Kernel's front page and oversees nightly operations in the newsroom.

Hunter Hayes is assistant arts editor this semester, replacing Charles McCue, who left UK to attend the University of Louisville this semester.

Hayes, an English and journalism junior from Lexington, will add Arts Editor Kip Bowmar until the end of the month when Hayes will become arts editor.

As arts editor, Hayes will oversee the daily arts page, which includes coordinating coverage and laying out the page. Bowmar will resign from his position and serve as a senior staff writer effective Feb. 1.

Pitino to institute changes to break 5-game skid

ALAN HAWSE/Kentucky State

Sophomore guard Richie Farmer tries to keep his shot from being blocked. UK will be trying to snap a 5-game losing streak tonight.

By BARRY REEVES
Sports Editor

Rick Pitino does not consider himself a superstitious man, but he said that he is considering instituting a couple of changes for tonight's game against Florida.

Prior to tonight's 7:30 game against the Gators, Pitino plans to change his team's uniforms and loosen the rims at Rupp Arena.

"Those are the only two major decisions that I have to make this afternoon," Pitino said jokingly yesterday at his weekly news conference.

The Cats were 5-2 while wearing more traditional uniforms. But since they switched to a more modern uniform — shiny with long, baggy shorts — they are 0-5.

Based on those figures, Pitino said his team probably will not wear their new uniforms when they hit the Rupp Arena floor tonight.

At the beginning of the season UK senior guard Derrick Miller complained to Pitino that Rupp Arena's rims were too tight, but Pitino thought Miller was complaining because of his shooting slump.

Pitino said that he has changed his mind and has started to suspect the rims, too.

UK-Florida

Records: UK 5-7 (1-1), Florida 5-4 (1-1).
When: 7:30 p.m. tonight.
Where: Rupp Arena.
Radio: Live on WVLK-AM/FM with Caywood Ledford and Dave Baker.
Television: Delayed on WKYT with Ralph Hacker and Jim Master.

"After the Louisville game, he (Pitino) came up to me and said, 'Maybe you're right,' Miller said. '... I don't know what will happen. I don't know if he will or not. I'll just have to wait and see.'"

Pitino said that he does not completely agree with Miller, but he probably will have the rims loosened for tonight, even if the only benefit will be psychological.

"It's bothering Derrick, so we're probably going to try (loosening the rims)," Pitino said. "But those rims are awfully tight."

Miller said that he is not going to let the rims bother him during tonight's game.

"I've really just put it out of my mind," said Miller, who leads all

UK scorers with a 21.2 average. "I guess it really doesn't make that much difference because both teams have to play on the same goals."

Wildcat fans thought they had seen the last of Don DeVoe after he was pressured to resign as head coach of the University of Tennessee.

Guess what? He's back. Only this time, he's leading the scandalous Florida Gators as their interim head coach.

After Norm Sloan resigned from Florida in October amid controversy, DeVoe moved in as interim head of the Gator program.

DeVoe has guided Florida to a 5-4 record, 1-1 in the Southeastern Conference. DeVoe said he thinks that his players are finally getting used to his style of basketball.

"It's just a matter of time," DeVoe said. "... They are working very hard."

Returning from last year's Florida squad are 7-2 senior center Dwayne Schintzius (averaging 18.6 points and 9.2 rebounds per game), 6-7 junior forwards Livingston Chatman (13.1 points, 7.3 rebounds) and Dwayne Davis (12.8 point, 8.0 rebounds).

"This Florida front line is as good as there is," Miller said. "They are all good."

DeVoe said that he is not worried about the Wildcat defense collapsing inside to stop his team's front line.

"If people take away our inside game with Dwayne Schintzius, Livingston Chatman and Dwayne Davis ... we think we can hit the outside shot," he said.

Even with the scoring punch the Florida front line has, Pitino said that he is most concerned about the Gators' defense.

"They play tremendous pressure man-to-man defense," he said. "They really get after you and put pressure on the basketball. ... That's one thing you can count on a Don DeVoe team doing."

DeVoe said his team likes to "play at a game that is fairly deliberate," but he said that the Gators can adjust if the Wildcats force an up-tempo game.

"We can play at a lot of different speeds," he said. "Every good team has to be able to do that. ... And I think we can."

Miller said that the UK game plan will be to wear down the Gators, especially their big men.

"I've played against them all before and when you make their big guys work (defensively) on the

Bill Curry is the second jewel in Newton's athletics crown

When C.M. Newton was hired last April as UK's athletics director, everyone believed that he was the savior of the University's athletics program.

But Newton has surpassed even the highest expectations of Wildcat fans.

What he has accomplished is amazing. Simply amazing.

First he persuaded Rick Pitino to leave his post with the first-place New York Knicks to resurrect the men's basketball program.

And for an encore Newton talked University of Alabama football coach Bill Curry into leaving one of the most prestigious football programs in the country to coach UK's program.

This scenario is just the opposite of one that happened 38 years ago when Paul "Bear" Bryant left UK for the University of Alabama.

Bryant's decision to leave UK was seen as a good career move. Curry's decision is being looked upon by many as anything but a good career move.

Or is it?

His decision is the best in the long run for his family because nobody wants to be unappreciated, and Curry could not have been more unappreciated than he was at Alabama.

After finishing 10-1 with a share of the Southeastern Conference title last season, Crimson Tide fans were calling for Curry's head. Although the Tide was in the Sugar Bowl against the University of Miami, 'Bama fans were still livid with the Tide's loss to Auburn a month earlier.

Barry REEVES

That's ridiculous.

At UK, a 10-1 season and a Sugar Bowl bid will get Curry a lifetime contract, nominations for governor and rose petals tossed at his feet — even if he loses to Tennessee.

Curry said that when he and his wife, Carolyn, decided to visit UK, "We thought it would be nice, but we were made to feel so welcome and so needed. And I can't begin to tell you how good that felt."

Job security is another reason Curry decided to leave Alabama.

Although he was offered a 3-year contract extension by Alabama Athletics Director "Hootie" Ingram, Curry was worried that the fans might be able to dethrone him.

At UK, Curry will not have to worry about job security as long as his players get an education and he wins seven games a year. If he attains those two goals, he can stay at UK until retirement.

Curry was given a 5-year contract with UK, with a base salary of $105,000 plus radio and television shows and other outside incomes, which should take care of his needs.

But if Curry was interested only in money, he probably would not have left Alabama. He wanted stability and a chance to win. Few schools other than UK could offer that to a coach.

But what will UK receive, other than a big-name college coach?

•Integrity. Curry has been successful on and off the field at every stop in his career. In his first year at Alabama, he instituted academic programs that raised the football team's grade point average from a disgraceful 1.7 (on a 4.0 scale) to 2.1 and improved it steadily throughout his stay in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

•Stability. Curry has never seemed to be one that will just cut loose for no reason. He thinks things through and then makes a decision. He has drawn nothing but praise from former and current players and coaches.

Few people who know Bill Curry, not the fans who know of him simply through results on the scoreboard, have said a negative thing about him. That's very rare about anybody. And on that note,

KEEPING THEIR HOPES ON ICE

Cool Cats aim for varsity

By ROBERT NORMAN
Staff Writer

Most club sports want to become a varsity team, but Cool Cats manager Mark Shupe thinks that hockey has the best argument at UK.

More than 1,000 people attend most Cool Cats games at the Lexington Ice Rink, which makes hockey the third most popular UK sport.

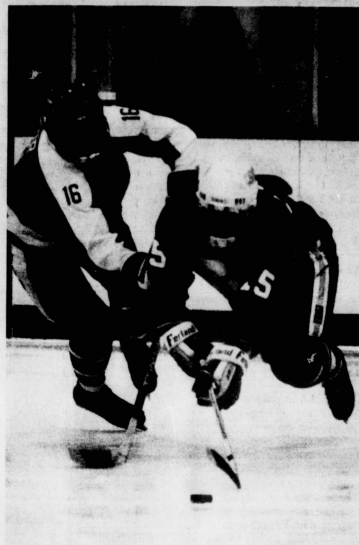

"The fact that we are a revenue-generator — that's what the school's incentive would be," Shupe said. "We make more money than all of the other club teams put together. It's going to take at least two to three years to be taken seriously (by the UK athletics department), though."

But for now, Shupe said the team must continue winning games, which hasn't been a problem for the team this season.

"What we need to do now is continue winning, because that brings out the fans and generates money," Shupe said. "And also, to be taken seriously, we need to begin conforming to the NCAA rules and regulations for varsity teams, and pay our own way."

The Cool Cats return from the Christmas break with a 12-1 overall record and a 6-0 mark in the Southern Collegiate Hockey Association.

The record has earned the 14th-

One of the reasons for the team's success this year is the addition of three top-notch freshmen — brothers Chad and Jeff Cooper, and Nick Pelligrone. "We've been growing through recruiting," Cool Cats President

NCAA unwilling to give up revenue

By SCOTT MCCARTNEY
Associated Press

DALLAS — The NCAA spluttered in its effort to reform big-time college sports Tuesday, voting to reveal each school's graduation rate for athletes but struggling with a plan to shorten Division I and II basketball seasons by three games.

The organization did approve compromise cuts in spring football practice, reducing practice days from 20 to 15, and limiting contact drill to 10 of those days.

But losing revenue from three basketball games was, at least initially, too much for the NCAA to sacrifice for library-time athletes.

Division I and II delegates voted to put off the basketball cuts until next year's convention. Two hours later, they voted to reconsider the cuts.

Division III schools broke rank with their larger cousins and reduced their season to 25 games on first consideration.

The NCAA Presidents Commission, fighting to keep its effort alive to shrink the pressures of big-time athletics, had proposed having spring football to 10 days and eliminating contact drills all together in the spring.

The basketball cuts were the cornerstone of a "watershed" package of moves aimed at relieving pressure on athletes and giving them more time for the library.

But opponents said the revenue lost from three fewer games — up to $250,000 at some schools — was not worth the academic gains.

"It's big money sorely needed," said Brad Hovious, athletic director at the University of Texas-El Paso. "Two or three basketball games can pay for three or four non-revenue sports."

"It is better in my opinion to take no action than to approve what seems to be a patch-quilt series of measures that really do not address the scope of the problem," said Allan Hauser, faculty representative from Appalachian State University.

The difficulty in winning approval for the cuts in athletic commitments was a blow to the Presidents Commission, which was formed in 1984 to spark reform.

The basketball cuts represent "a signal of great importance beyond this room ... that reforms are going forward," said Greg O'Brien, president of the University of New Orleans and a member of the Presidents Commission.

"This is the most important thing at this convention," pleaded O'Brien.

"The message (the NCAA should send) is less time in the athletics facility, more time in the library," added John Hogan, faculty representative from the Colorado School of Mines.

Delegates addressing the 84th annual NCAA convention said the time-cutting ideas were only a small start toward meaningful reform.

"We must give these kids more time away from football and basketball," said Penn State football coach Joe Paterno. "I am concerned that we don't walk away from this thinking that because we've eliminated a little spring practice that that's going to solve some of the problems we have."

The NCAA members voted overwhelmingly to make public each school's graduation rate for athletes beginning next year. With only a handful of dissenters, they also agreed that schools must give graduation rates to prospective athletes during recruiting.

The NCAA has been under pressure from Congress, which is considering legislation to force the disclosure of the rates.

The disclosure of the graduation rates was seen as putting more pressure on coaches to allow more time for study.

"We either take this action for ourselves or we'll have it done for us," said Texas Christian University chancellor Bill Tucker. "If it's done for us, it will be done to us."

Delegates did approve a resolution calling for recommendation to reduce time demands in sports other than football and basketball, with changes to be voted on at next year's convention.

The Presidents commission succeeded initially in its reform efforts by winning approval for Proposition 48, which set academic minimums for in-coming athletes, and the "death penalty" for repeat rules violators.

Curry says administration not behind him

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Bill Curry, who quit as Alabama's head football coach last week to take over the program at Kentucky, said one reason he left the Crimson Tide was that he was offered a new contract with less authority — not a contract extension.

In an interview with Atlanta Constitution columnist Mark Bradley published Tuesday, Curry also said that going to Alabama three years ago was not a mistake.

"Not at all. It was a marvelous experience," he said. "We met some great people there."

But, he said, "There's a misconception that I was offered a contract extension at Alabama. I was offered a new contract, one that did not resemble the first contract."

"It was an entirely new set of circumstances concerning the football coach's ability to govern his pro-

Hockey club hoping to become varsity

Keith Kocan said, "We shoot for four or five players a year, and if we get them we will continue to grow."

"It's like the weakest link thing. A team is only as good as its weakest link and the new players have really strengthened our weakest link."

Playing teams from the North also has helped the Cool Cats improve.

"Everybody wants to be the best they can be," junior Roy Henry said. "So we're playing tougher teams — teams from the North — that we wouldn't have dreamed of playing in the past."

Beating Northern teams are especially important, Henry said, because hockey is to the North what basketball is to Kentucky.

"I'm from Owensboro," Henry said. "And there are only three hockey rinks in the state. So, to become a big hockey team here would be like a dream come true."

One of the Cool Cats victories this season was a 4-3 win over the University of Dayton, who until last season was a varsity team.

"I accepted the financial part of it, which was diminished, and I could still hire who I wanted, but in order to be successful at this level, the coach has to call all the shots, and that part of it was vastly diminished," he said.

"What did that say about me? You'd have to ask (the Alabama administration) about that. But what it did not say was, 'We think you're the guy to lead us into the '90s,'" said Curry.

"People say, 'Oh, Bill's just too sensitive.' I wasn't worried about a few alumni on the outside. But the bottom line is that it's my mission to serve young people, and when it's clear that's been compromised it's time to move on."

"If my players and my family are being hampered by where I went to school 25 years ago or by what coach I did not play for, it becomes selfish of me to stay," he added.

Vandy drops Lady Kats from Top 25; team looks to LSU

By GREGORY A. HALL
Staff Writer

A quick 11-1 start placed the UK women's basketball team in The Associated Press' Top 25. But a 79-70 loss to Vanderbilt University Sunday dropped the Lady Kats from the latest poll, which was released yesterday.

And now the team faces a grueling Southeastern Conference schedule, which is loaded with several Top 25 schools.

"Three or four minutes into the (Vanderbilt) game we looked tired," UK coach Sharon Fanning said.

Fanning said that her youthful squad was frustrated by the physical play of Sunday's game.

"We just didn't connect," Fanning said. "We can't allow for our frustration to take away from our confidence. Our three freshmen are our back-ups inside. They've got to help us. They've got to make mental adjustments."

One of the keys to the Lady Commodores' win was that UK's leading scorer Kristi Cushenberry was held to eight points.

Senior Vanessa Foster-Sutton led UK with 17 points and 13 rebounds.

"I thought Vandy did a real good job with our press," Foster-Sutton said. "We just didn't have communication and defense."

"We had a problem, when we got down communicating," Fanning said.

Fanning said the success of the rest of the season will depend on the strength of UK's bench.

"It's hard to predict," Foster-Sutton said. "It just depends on how we react and how our young people react (to the pressure of the SEC)."

Down 24 points in the second half of the Vandy game, the Lady Kats rallied and got within striking distance for the rest of the game.

"Vanessa was probably the one who made most of the things happen in our second half comeback," Fanning said. "She's getting a lot of mileage out of her size. She's been a factor in our quickness from the beginning of the season. She is all over the place."

Foster-Sutton said that through her experience, she has learned how to adjust to SEC basketball.

"I'm used to it now," Foster-Sutton said. "I play a lot tougher because I can get away with some things that they would call against a (non-conference opponent). A lot of times you think you should have gotten the foul. You just get use to it and accept it."

Foster-Sutton said that being ranked in the AP poll helped the young team's morale.

"It means a lot to everybody, especially after everybody looked at Kentucky how young we are and didn't give us a chance," she said. "It gives us a lift and makes us work harder."

Fanning said that the ranking was an indication that things were going well for UK.

"We're doing what we should be doing," Fanning said. "I feel like we could have been 12-0. The ranking is great. I feel like we deserve to get back, if we play like we can play."

Foster-Sutton said that the Lady Kats will have to play together if they are to survive the SEC.

"I think we had a pretty good first half (of the season)," Foster-Sutton said. "It's going to take a lot of teamwork and leadership."

Foster-Sutton said that she and the other players who know the SEC would have to help the younger players "keep their heads up."

UK's next game is 7:30 tomorrow night at Memorial Coliseum against 16th-ranked Louisiana State University, which is 10-2 on the season.

"Our game plan doesn't change against LSU," Fanning said. "We're going to really look at timing and the number of substitutions. Their point guard (Dana Chatman) is one of the best point guards in the country."

LSU returns their two leading scorers — April Delley and Chatman — from last season. The Lady Kats lost last year's contest in Baton Rouge, La., 82-76.

Fanning said she feels that her team has an advantage in scheduling because their SEC schedule begins with "three of the lighter SEC opponents."

The Lady Kats do not play No. 3 Georgia, No. 5 Tennessee and No. 15 Auburn until the end of the season.

"This gives us a good idea, these first three games, on how our players are going to react," Fanning said.

he will be replacing a man (Jerry Chalmers) about whom the same can be said.

"Class. Attitudes like Curry's definitely rub off. His teams have acted and played just as he did when he was a player at Georgia Tech and in the NFL with the Packers and Colts. His teams may not have won every game on the scoreboard, but they were winners."

Just as Curry has pointed out, winners are people who give their best effort and never quit striving toward their goals. An 0-11 team can still be considered winners because of the way they play on the field and their achievements off the field.

"Quality. Despite what some Alabama fans believe, Curry is considered to be one of the premier coaches in the country. While his teams may not be flashy and run up the score just to impress the pollsters, they are good — always fundamentally sound and well-prepared for the game."

Curry's teams reflect him in another manner — they are as competitive as a pit bull; they never

Calloway not thrilled about No. 1

Associated Press

Rick Calloway has been there before, so he's not very excited about being No. 1 right now.

Kansas (16-0) was voted No. 1 in The Associated Press college basketball poll released Monday, the first time at No. 1 since the Jayhawks fielded a lineup with Wilt Chamberlain in 1956-57.

Calloway, who played for Indiana's 1987 national champions, said he doesn't think the Jayhawks deserve the lofty rating.

"I think Georgetown should be No. 1," he said Monday night after Kansas overcame a 13-point deficit in the second half to beat Nebraska 98-93.

"They can have it. In a couple of years, half of their team will be in the NBA. They deserve it," Calloway said.

Medicine Center officials.

"Pitino said that the situation of Lawrence Funderburke, an Indiana freshman, has not changed. (Funderburke) called C.M. (Newton) to see if we would be interested if he got his release from Indiana," Pitino said. "But C.M. called Indiana and they said that Knight would not give him his release under any circumstances. And that was the end."

Todd Bearup transfers to walk-on UK team

Staff reports

Todd Bearup, a 6-5, 210-pound sophomore basketball player at Utah State University, announced yesterday that he will transfer to UK and walk on to the basketball team. Bearup is the younger brother of former Wildcat Bret Bearup, who played for UK from 1980-1985.

Bearup, 22, is a 1986 graduate of Laurel County High School, where he was an all-state selection his senior year, averaging 19-points per game.

He played basketball his freshman year at Utah State under Rod Tueller before traveling to Seoul, South Korea, for a 2-year church mission.

During his freshman year at Utah State, Bearup played in 19 games, and averaged 7.2 minutes per game. He was 15-37 from the field (40.5 percent), 8-22 from the free throw line (36 percent) and had 39 rebounds (2.1 average) and 37 points

(1.9 average).

Bearup participated in only one game this season, Utah State's season-opener against Boise State, but he did not score.

Under NCAA transfer rules, Bearup will be eligible to play for UK after 1990 fall semester. He will have 2 1/2 years of eligibility left once activated. Bearup may practice with the team after he enrolls as a full-time UK student.

After he enrolls as a full-time student, UK coach Rick Pitino said Bearup will be allowed to practice with the team after he passes a routine physical examination, which is scheduled for Friday.

"We're happy to welcome Todd to our team as a walk-on," Pitino said. "Although I have not seen him play, anyone who earns a scholarship at a Utah State obviously is talented."

Back to the same ol' grind

Like birds heading south for the winter, UK students flocked back to campus this week to begin yet another semester of classes and usher in a new decade.

A few things have changed. UK has an interim president (Charles Wethington), a new football coach (Bill Curry), and lots of vacancies in the residence halls.

A few things haven't changed, however. You still have to hunt for a parking spot, and you still have to wait in line to get in your classes. Welcome home.

'It's like a new era'

Campus has high expectations for Wildcat football under Curry

By JULIE ESSELMAN
Special Projects Writer

The UK community is welcoming new UK football coach Bill Curry with open arms — and already expectations of a trip to a bowl game within a few years.

Most students and faculty interviewed said that Curry was the right person to carry on former coach Jerry Claiborne's tradition of integrity and academic commitment while lifting the football program to new heights on the athletic field. "I think he's probably the best choice UK could make," said Dustin Graham, a computer science freshman. "He had a good season (at the University of Alabama). I like the way he handled his players. He's just got the look that says he's a good coach."

"It's great," said Jamie Hobgood, an undecided sophomore and member of the women's basketball team. "He had a really good record at Alabama. I think he'll be able to come here and do the same. I think he sort of follows the characteristics of Claiborne."

UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton offered Curry the coaching position last Friday, and Curry was officially named the new coach

Monday night by the UK Athletics Board. He is the second coach Newton has hired since coming to UK, with men's basketball coach Rick Pitino coming to UK last June.

"Now we have Pitino and now we have Curry," Hobgood said.

BOND

"He's carrying on the Claiborne tradition of academic quality."

"It's like a new era."

Most students said they think that the Curry era will include a trip to a bowl game within the next few years.

"I think it's an excellent choice," said Brian Underwood, a chemical engineering freshman. "From what I hear, he's a real disciplinarian. He did an excellent job at Alabama. I think we're definitely going to a bowl."

"I think it's awesome. He wants everyone to be well thought of," said Papu Narayanappa, a biology sophomore. "Plus, I think we'll get to a bowl game in two or three years."

"His success at Alabama is why I'm happy he's coming. I have high expectations. I'm looking forward to a winning season," said

COLEMAN

"I don't think we should get down on him if he doesn't get a winning season right away."

Marian Jameson, a first-year law student.

But others said that it is unrealistic to expect too much too soon.

"I think he'll bring a different approach, a different intensity," said Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs James Kuder. However, he added, "I don't think anyone would expect him to take us to a bowl game right away."

"I think at this particular time Bill Curry was an excellent choice for the job," said Eric Coleman, a mechanical engineering sophomore.

"I don't think we should get down on him if he doesn't get a winning season right away."

Several people said they think Curry will build a strong program because of his ability to recruit good players.

GRAHAM

"I think he's probably the best choice UK could make."

"He'll be a much better recruiter than Jerry Claiborne because of the reputation he's built up at Alabama," said Allen Roberts, a psychology junior. "A lot of players will want to play for Bill Curry. Kentucky's just hungry for some wins, and he's the guy who will get them."

"I think he could do a good job here too," said Tammy Dowdell, an undeclared freshman and Lady Kat basketball player. "I think they'll go to a bowl pretty soon. I think a lot of football players will want to come and play for him because he has a reputation as a good coach."

"I think he's done a very good job at Alabama. He seems like a very personable guy and to have a good rapport with his team," said John Shawcross, an English profesrying on the Claiborne tradition of academic quality."

Although Curry led his Alabama team to a 10-2 overall record and a Sugar Bowl victory last season, many Alabama fans were upset with him because of his team's loss to rival Auburn. Some UK students said they think Curry will be better accepted in Kentucky and fit in well with the UK program.

"He will be (accepted) because we want him here," said graduate student Thomas Reed. "He's wanted here and needed. They'll treat him right. They'll treat him in ways he never dreamed of being treated."

"I think he'll be accepted here," Kuder said. "He's a proven winner."

"Here we don't have that kind of pressure, so I think it will be different," Jameson said.

And the prospects of Curry leading UK to new competitive heights might bring more fans to Commonwealth Stadium next season, some students said.

"I think he'll recruit some good players and make you want to watch," said Scott Bower, an undecided freshman.

"I think definitely next year I'll go to more games," said Alyssa Middleton, a communications sophomore.

UK, Wethington must show search will be truly open

Charles Wethington is a very able administrator who is devoted to the success of UK. However, the decision by the University's Board of Trustees on Dec. 28 to make him interim president was a bad move.

Wethington may not be a noted scholar as former UK President David Roselle was, but his work with the UK community college system illustrates his competence as an administrator.

Wethington has been an official in the community college system for 22 years, the last eight as the chancellor. During the 1980s, community college growth increased almost 100 percent, and the academic quality of the community colleges was considered to be among the nation's best.

But Wethington's ties to Gov. Wallace Wilkinson create too much suspicion. Too many people associate Wethington with Wilkinson and view him as a puppet of the Governor's Mansion.

None of Wethington's actions thus far have indicated that he looks to Frankfort for making decisions, and we hope that while interim president he continues to act in the best interest for the University, not Wilkinson's political aspirations.

One of the arguments advanced for appointing Wethington interim president was that he has strong ties to Frankfort. While Wethington may know the right people in Frankfort to secure more money for the University and higher education than Roselle was able to get, if his appointment causes faculty to leave, who will be left to give the money to? Faculty and student leaders voiced strong opposition to Wethington, and by disregarding those interests, trustees insulted the most important constituents of the University.

The most disturbing action by UK's trustees at their Dec. 28 meeting was allowing the interim president to be a candidate for the presidency. Although the board publicly pledged to conduct an honest and open search for a permanent replacement for Roselle, once again they will have to deal with perception.

It must be difficult for Wethington to preside over a University that he has devoted almost half of his life to and have so many people question his loyalty, therefore the greatest sacrifice Wethington can make for the University is to not run for the presidency.

As Roselle was fond of reminding people while at UK, no one person is more important than the integrity of the University.

Kernel Checklist

A weekly service of the Viewpoint Page to keep its readers abreast of the hot items in the universe.

✓Right Man, Wrong Job. David Roselle. At a press conference announcing his decision to be president of the University of Delaware, David Roselle told the press corps that the 13-month NCAA probe into the UK men's basketball program prevented him from doing what he came to Lexington to do: run a university. Of course having to deal with Gov. Bubber's politics and whims didn't make things any easier for Roselle. Good luck at UD, Dr. Dave. Hope you have found a state that considers education to be important.

✓Newton's Coups. C.M. Newton. In less than one year as UK's athletics director, C.M. Newton has lured two of the biggest athletic names to UK — Rick Pitino and Bill Curry. Newton's reputation as being dedicated to an athletics program with integrity is one of the reasons cited for his ability to attract top caliber coaches. By the way, C.M., the University is looking for a new president.

✓So Much Time, So Little To Do. 1990 General Assembly. It's an even year, so it must be time for another exciting meeting of the General Assembly. Included on the agenda of this year's meeting is higher education, prison reform, health care, road improvements, and restructuring the state's elementary and secondary education system. With only 90 days to make up for the lack of work done in the 1988 session in addition to the number of tasks that need to be tended to this year, perhaps Frankfort will realize that the state would run a bit smoother if lawmakers met once a year.

Batter up

Lohman can mold SGA into better or worse organization

The 1990 session of Kentucky's General Assembly may not have much in terms of financial aid for higher education, but for UK Student Government Association President Sean Lohman, the session is rich with political opportunities.

Lohman, only a junior, is the youngest person to lead UK's student government. Although his chief concern right now is getting the state to give higher education more money, a successful lobbying effort would ensure his re-election later this semester.

If Lohman were re-elected president, he would be the first two-term president in more than 10 years.

By January, the pre-executive branch elections usually are in full swing; steering committees are in place and running rates are lined up.

This year, however, the talk about who will be president of UK's student government next year is virtually non-existent. Lohman likely will be unopposed this spring, and the big election may be for SGA vice president and the top senator-at-large spots.

No scientific polls have been conducted on Lohman's popularity; most of his political strength is drawn from the turmoil that surrounded the University and higher education last semester.

Lohman got off to a seemingly bad start last semester by incorrectly accusing the state's university presidents of covertly pushing for a steep tuition hike, but instead of being criticized for it he was complimented for being so concerned about students.

C.A. Duane BONIFER

Many of the programs and activities Lohman implemented last semester went unnoticed by students. Normally was the theme of SGA until UK President David Roselle became a finalist for the presidency of the University of Delaware.

Within a few days after meeting with Roselle, Lohman joined with other student leaders to organize a rally to encourage Roselle to remain at UK.

Although the rally did not achieve its ultimate goal, it gave Lohman plenty of media exposure. In addition to being interviewed by the state's major newspapers, Lohman appeared on all three Lexington television stations.

After the Roselle rally, Lohman's name was very familiar to many UK students and he was identified as the student leader most concerned with student issues.

Following the rally, Lohman should have called a press conference to keep not only the Roselle issue alive, but to establish himself as the student spokesman in Kentucky for higher education.

Lohman has been criticized for blowing with the wind on issues rather than following his heart, but his actions at the Dec. 28 UK Board of Trustees meeting indicate that he is ready to oppose the status quo.

Lohman was one of only five trustees who voted against appointing Wethington interim president, and he also opposed allowing the interim president to become president.

While it did not take a lot to figure out what was the right course of action at that meeting, it took some political courage to do what was right.

Lohman's other opportunity to establish himself as a strong student leader is when the University begins to conduct national search for a new president.

Many feel that Wethington has been railroaded into the interim position, and he likely will not have serious opposition, but Lohman can help give the search what chance it has of being fair by yelling and screaming if Gov. Wallace Wilkinson or his cronies stick their noses in the issue.

Assuming that he is not plagued by any scandals, there are several advantages to having an SGA president serve two terms. While having a student run SGA for two years can lead to stagnation and the establishment of a status quo that is afraid of changing, it also can benefit SGA.

It takes most SGA presidents a few months to get used to their job, and if they do not get things accomplished by the end of the fall semester, they are a lame duck as presidential politics sets in.

By discouraging anyone from running against him, Lohman can carry on with business as usual this semester and not have to concern himself with political loyalties. Lohman also can hand-pick his successor to ensure that things run smoothly the following year, provided that office politics are kept to a minimum.

More importantly, however, is that Lohman could do something for SGA that it has sorely needed for a long time and emphasize student services.

Too often, SGA has attracted aspiring governors, mayors and legislators who are more concerned with padding their political resumes than they are with students' needs.

By de-emphasizing politics, Lohman can make SGA more attentive to students' needs, which would be closer to what a student government ought to be doing in the first place.

Lohman's supporters spoke of him last spring as the candidate with the most potential to do the best things for student government. This semester Lohman has the chance to prove them (in)correct.

Master Student Program encourages better study habits

Dear Counselor: Last semester my grades were C's and B's. Even though these grades are "average," I feel I am a better student than my grades show. I am determined to do great this semester in all my classes. Do you have any suggestions on how I can get off to a good start? I'm especially interested in ways to manage my time better and to study more efficiently. What can I do to max-out this semester?

Marty, undecided sophomore.

Dear Marty: You seem determined and motivated to succeed this semester. DON'T LOSE THIS ATTITUDE — it is a key component of your success.

There are basically three reasons why students fail to achieve academic success.

✓Not forming effective and consistent study habits.

✓Not utilizing efficient learning skills and strategies.

✓Not maintaining a proper attitude toward their own education.

In order to maximize your chances for academic success, you should concentrate on improving three major areas:

STUDY HABITS

The first area to examine is that of developing consistent study habits. Sometimes forming new habits (or breaking old ones!) is not an easy process. We usually go through an "adjustment" period (generally two to three weeks) to adapt to the change in behavior.

Be aware of negative self-talk during this period (e.g., "I've never done well in this subject," "I'm not good with math," and "It won't work").

Also, be careful about judging the effectiveness of the new habit until it becomes more natural and comfortable. It has been discovered that students who develop consistent study habits do better in school. Let's look at a few new habits that might aid you in achieving your goals.

✓Formulate and write down your specific (and realistic) academic goals for the semester. Review these goals daily and ask yourself the question: What can I do today to help me achieve these goals?

✓Plan your use of time for the semester. Use a calendar to record important dates such as tests and reports. Utilize a weekly and daily schedule to plan specific study times and reviews. The Counseling and Testing Center has blank weekly schedules — stop by and pick some up.

✓Attend all classes, sit near the front of the classroom, and participate in class discussions.

✓Schedule your study time in shorter, frequent, regular sessions distributed over a longer period of time. Runners don't "cram" in training the day before the race; don't cram your mind the day before the test.

✓Use an effective personal reward system to motivate yourself to achieve goals. Small rewards such as taking a walk, seeing a movie, or even eating some ice cream (only one dip!) can make study sessions more enjoyable. Be careful — don't use something you were already planning to do and be sure to complete the task before rewarding yourself. Be honest!

STUDY SKILLS
Successful students also seek to improve their learning efficiency by developing specific study skills — areas such as reading, note taking, test taking and memory skills.

Most of us throughout our educational careers are told many times to "study" and to "study harder," but are never told specifically how! The purpose of the Learning Skills Program in the Counseling and Testing Center is to help students learn how to study smarter.

The program offers individual sessions with a learning skills counselor or you may want to find out more about The Master Student Program. Stop in the Counseling and Testing Center to help students learn how to study smarter.

STUDY ATTITUDE
A final component to consider is cultivating the proper study attitude. Your motivation and attitude

are directly related to your success. How do you view school? What drives you to pursue this academic experience? Where do you see yourself five years from now? Here are a few suggestions to consider regarding your attitude.

✓Formulate your goals and review them daily. This is the "fire" that can get you through the rough times.

✓Learn to enjoy your studying. If you don't, you are making it harder on yourself!

✓Look at problems as opportunities. Be optimistic about outcomes.

✓Set internal standards rather than compete with others.

Focus on the rewards of success rather than the penalties of failure.

Marty, you have taken the first step toward making the most of this semester — you want to be successful. Now it is up to you to develop effective study habits, skills and attitudes to help achieve your academic goals. Start now to use these strategies and you will be amazed by the results.

Students who wish to address these issues can come to the UK Counseling and Testing Center, 301 Frazee Hall or call, 257-8701. If you have a problem you would like to address, write: "Counselor's Corner"; 301 Frazee Hall; UK; Lexington, Ky. 40506-0031.

Curry accepts 5-year offer from UK

By BARRY REEVES
Sports Editor

When it comes to making decisions concerning his life, Bill Curry learned something from UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton: "Be quick, but don't hurry."

After mulling-over Newton's offer to become the new UK football coach for almost a week, the University of Alabama coach decided it was time for a change.

And when the UK Athletics Board unanimously approved Newton's recommendation Monday night, Curry officially became the 32nd coach of UK's football program and the successor to retiring coach Jerry Claiborne.

"In regards to Coach Curry, I know him to be a man of great integrity by whatever standard you use," Newton said. "Whether it be his peers ... current players, former players. In his personal family life or his professional life."

When Newton set out to find Claiborne's successor, he said he was looking for "a Jerry Claiborne clone." And it appears as though he found one.

"Bill Curry is recognized by many to be at the very top of his profession," Newton said. "He has been credited for the dignity, class and integrity with which he conducts his football programs, both on and off the field."

While many people in college football look upon the UK football program as a step down from Alabama, Curry said he does not agree.

"This is anything but a step down. I come from an outstanding program to an outstanding program," said Curry, who had a 26-10 record at Alabama. "... Normally, people evaluate motives and opportunities based on how they would respond. What it means is that they have a different set of standards and values than I have."

Curry, 47, said that although he was not asked to leave Alabama by anyone in the administration, he said that it was in the Alabama players' "best interest" that he leave.

"It is necessary in our business — if you have a mission to teach young people what it means to win on and off the field — that everybody in the organization feel the same way and share the same principles and work in the same direction toward the same end," said Curry, who was named Southeastern Conference Coach of the Year by The Associated Press and The Nashville Banner.

Curry, who had turned Newton's offer down in early December, said he began seriously considering the UK position "when it became clear that the very people (the players) that I have served in my mission were having to deal with the degree of controversy from within, (and it) was not going to be resolved, then my position (concerning UK) changed."

Curry said his decision to come to UK was made when "it became clear to (my family) that this was an opportunity for us to continue what we believe in, which is to teach young people how it feels to be the best they can be in the classroom, on the field and in their personal life."

Since being named Alabama's coach in 1987 season, Curry has been hounded by fans who were upset that he was not a disciple of legendary Paul "Bear" Bryant. And the cries from Crimson Tide supporters reached their peak following Alabama's third straight loss to arch-rival Auburn in the final game of the regular season.

But Curry said that criticisms from "Bama fans did not affect him."

"If I personally had accepted what other people thought of me, then I would still be pumping gas in College Park, Ga.," said Curry, who was accompanied to the board meeting by his wife, Carolyn, and daughter, Kristen, 22.

After meeting with the Wildcat players Monday afternoon, Curry said that his opinion of Claiborne increased.

"We've already met with the Kentucky players, and I'm im-

A YEAR OF CHANGES

To say that 1989 was uneventful at UK would be like declaring that little happened behind the Iron Curtain last year. In the past year, UK lost its president and two athletic coaches, and its men's basketball program was hit with a three-year probation by the NCAA.

But not all news for UK last year was bad. While the prospects for increased funding from Frankfort were dimmed when the Kentucky Supreme Court declared that $300-$500 million had to be spent to restructure the state's elementary and secondary education system, private gifts to UK in fiscal year 1989 hit an all-time high.

In addition, faculty research continued to receive national honors, and the academic quality of the freshman class hit an all-time high with an average American College Test score of more than 22.

Yet despite the positive things that happened, following President David Roselle's resignation there was a feeling of desperation among many in the UK community that the worst was yet to come in 1990.

David Roselle Resigns

Citing the NCAA probe into the men's basketball program as preventing him from implementing his programs, UK President David Roselle announced Dec. 14 that he will become president of the University of Delaware.

Roselle, who was hired as UK's ninth president in March 1987, had been besieged by budgetary woes, low faculty salaries, a corrupt basketball program and constant harassment from Kentucky Gov. Wallace Wilkinson since coming to UK.

Although Roselle downplayed the poor relationship he had with Wilkinson, he acknowledged that it was difficult to make many changes without sufficient funding from the state.

A rally was held by more than 400 UK faculty, students, and staff and state political leaders in late November urging Roselle to stay at UK. During the rally, UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton, who was hired by Roselle, pleaded with

Roselle said he was touched by the outpouring of campus support, but said the key to keeping him from leaving UK would be a pledge from Frankfort that higher education would be adequately funded in the next biennium.

"In order for progress I need some help to do that. I need some financial help," Roselle said. "Unless I am making progress, unless I am being a good president I don't think the University is well served by my being here."

Roselle said his job also was difficult because he had to spend time lobbying state leaders when he rather would have been tending to administrative matters. "I don't do politics; I do education," he said bluntly. "And if I'm going to do education the politicians need to figure out how to get us some more money so that we can do it in an appropriate manner."

The joint legislative committee on appropriations and revenue promised Roselle that its members would fight for higher education's cause in the 1990 session, but Wilkinson remained silent on the issue, saying that Roselle's decision to leave UK was a personal one that did not involve him.

Many fear that Roselle's decision to leave will cause faculty members to begin looking elsewhere for employment. The bright future faculty thought Roselle could bring to UK was one of the few reasons they had for staying at the University.

At his press conference announcing the Delaware job, Roselle appeared tired and frustrated with the political battles of the

Inquest to be conducted into student's death

By TONJA WIL
Campus Editor

An inquest will be conducted into the death last year of UK student Thomas Michael Goeghegan under the administration of the new Fayette County Coroner, Dr. David Hull.

Goeghegan was killed when Steven Knight, 17, in a westbound automobile, struck Goeghegan, 22, as Goeghegan was crossing against the traffic light at the Euclid and Woodland avenues intersection on the night of Nov. 18.

The inquest, scheduled for Jan. 24, will determine if criminal charges should be brought against someone involved in the case, said Sgt. Paul Simms of the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Police Department.

"All we want to do is gather everyone involved and establish some facts," said Fayette County Deputy Coroner Charles Howell.

"Dr. Hull has decided that his office would like to have more of an in-depth investigation in order to alleviate family members' (concerns) that justice wasn't served in this particular instance," Simms said. "It gives everyone a chance to put their cards on the table."

Traces of cannabinoid metabolites were found in a urine test taken from Knight. Cannabinoid metabolites are a metabolic breakdown of tetrahydrocannabinol, an active ingredient in marijuana.

The investigation will determine if Knight was impaired at the time the accident occurred, Simms said.

"In this particular instance it doesn't show he was smoking marijuana that night because THC is stored in fatty tissue in the body and is broken down over a period of time," Simms said. "It can be stored up to 30 days."

No other traces of drugs or alcohol were found in Knight in a routine toxicology blood and alcohol test.

Autopsy results also found no traces of alcohol and drugs in Goeghegan.

If investigators find that Knight was impaired at the time of the accident, they would advise the Fayette District Court, which is in charge of juvenile court jurisdiction, Simms said.

Meriwether appointed to BOT by Wilkinson

Dr. Robert P. Meriwether was appointed by Gov. Wallace Wilkinson Friday to replace Larry Forgy on UK's Board of Trustees.

Wilkinson also reappointed trustee Billy B. Wilcoxson of Lexington to the board.

Meriwether is a Paducah neurosurgeon and said he contributed several thousand dollars to Wilkinson's 1987 general election gubernatorial campaign.

Wilkinson said in December that he would not reappoint Forgy to the board because Forgy accused the governor of trying to stack the board against UK President David Roselle.

Meriwether, who also has contributed several thousand dollars to UK, is a 1969 UK graduate and attended medical school at Tulane University. He also is on the UK Development Council.

Suspects in alleged rape to appear in front of jury

By ALLEN D. GREER
Staff Writer

Two 18-year-old men charged with raping a female UK student in a residence hall last semester will appear before a Fayette County grand jury Jan. 17 to determine if they should be indicted on charges of first-degree rape.

Jeffrey Alan Tomlin and Chad Eric Vannauker, both of Bowling Green, were arrested Nov. 17 after the 19-year-old woman filed a rape report with the UK Police Department. Police are still investigating a report of a third assailant, according to Ralph Derickson of UK.

The alleged rape occurred in Haggin Hall either late on Nov. 14 or early Nov. 15, according to UK.

Tomlin and Vannauker, who pleads of not guilty to felony charges of first-degree rape during their Nov. 20 arraignment in Fayette District Court.

Tomlin was released Nov. 18 from the Fayette County Detention Center on a $10,000 full cash bond. Vannauker was released into the custody of a third party Nov. 20. District Court Judge Gary Payne set a pre-trial hearing date for Dec. 12, but the hearing was waived by attorneys for both defendants, and the case was automatically sent to the grand jury.

Tomlin's attorney, State Sen. Michael Moloney, and Vannauker's attorney, Lee Rowland, declined to discuss why they waived the preliminary hearing.

Tomlin is enrolled in UK classes this semester, according to the Reg-

Wildcats excited about playing under Curry following first meeting

By GREGORY A. HALL
Staff Writer

It didn't take long for Bill Curry to make an impression on UK's football team.

After Curry met with his new squad Monday afternoon, most UK players interviewed later that night were enthusiastic about their new coach.

"The players are the most important thing," Curry said at a press conference Monday night after being hired by the UK Athletics Association Board of Directors.

"Everything we do will be aimed at the players and we want them to know that. We want them to understand the way we do things and why."

And some of his players already have gotten that impression.

"He came across as a really intelligent man," junior linebacker Randy Holleran said. "He said that his phone number would be given to us when he got it."

Some players said that Curry's emphasis on discipline reminded them of former UK coach Jerry Claiborne. Others said that his enthusiasm reminded them of UK basketball coach Rick Pitino.

"I kind of knew what kind of guy he was 'cause he's kind of a protege of Coach Claiborne," junior cornerback Chris Tolbert said. "He told us that we have to follow Coach Claiborne's rules until he comes back for spring ball. It's like starting all over. Everybody's anxious to get started."

"He seems like a pretty strict disciplinarian," junior offensive guard Joel Mazella said. "There's just kind of a charisma about him. Everything's open right now."

Although Curry did not promise

UK fans Monday night that they would be in New Orleans next year, several UK players sounded like the Superdome will become the Wildcats' home.

"He told everybody on the football team to believe that they were gonna be the best football player in history at that position," Holleran said. "I think the team wanted to go out and practice today."

At his press conference, Curry

"I kind of knew what kind of guy he was 'cause he's kind of a protege of Coach Claiborne."

Chris Tolbert,
UK cornerback said that he will encourage his players to set their priorities.

"Each young person will be taught to think for himself in the area of his personal faith, his family, his education and his football team," Curry said. "Those will be the priorities and will be kept in that order."

"He's been saying that he wants us to have a good outlook and to be champions on and off of the field," Tolbert said.

Players also said they were impressed with Curry's ability to communicate.

"He's very smart when he talks," quarterback Freddie Maggard said. "He doesn't beat around the bush. I really respect that in a man and in a coach."

Players said that Curry did not tell them what changes would be made on the field next fall.

"He came in and let us know what he expected of us during the winter workouts," said junior flanker Steve Phillips. "Hopefully we can get a lot of good publicity for the football team."

even know what we have to work with. But I know what the principles (of the team) are here and I have a great love and respect for everything that Newton and Coach Claiborne have done here."

And Claiborne also was quick to comment about Curry's decision to come to UK.

"I'm very happy that Bill accepted the head football position at the University of Kentucky," Claiborne said in a news release. "He will do an excellent job in every phase of the program — socially, academically, athletically and in the treatment of the players."

"Bill will step right in and keep the program moving in the right direction."

Curry said that he has not made a decision on who his new staff will be. He said some of his assistants at Alabama "said they would definitely come," but others had not made a decision.

"We will fill out our staff as time permits. I don't know what will happen... That's very much in a state of flux," he said.

Curry said he could not comment on whether any current UK assistants would be retained until after he

As far as recruiting is concerned, Curry said he would begin "this weekend" after returning from San Francisco where a coach's meeting is taking place.

Prospects bright for Kentucky reopening

By HUNTER HAYES
Assistant Arts Editor

Two years ago the Lexington arts community suffered a great setback when a fire in an adjacent restaurant damaged the Kentucky Theatre and Movies on Main.

The fire caused the theaters to close, but the theater may be in operation again soon because of a recent decision to purchase the building by the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government.

The red tape and litigation that resulted after the fire became much more of a hassle than any smoke and water damage done to the Kentucky.

The lawsuits over the theater stemmed from a disagreement between the owners, according to Urban County Councilwoman Pam Miller.

Miller, who has been active in the effort to reopen the Kentucky, said that the owners "couldn't decide who should do what — who should pay for the cost of renovating the building. The buildings were in very bad shape not only from the fire but from before that."

Once the litigation was settled "the city began negotiating with the owners and having an appraisal done and so forth to see how we

Pam Miller,
Urban County Council Women

could acquire it and reopen it the way it was before," Miller said.

The Kentucky provided Lexington with a variety of films at inexpensive prices. Since the theater closed, the kind of film genres has been limited to commercial ones.

"For the past two years there has been nothing except for the first-run movies like 'Rambo III' that you see at these theater complexes — Southpark, Northpark and so on," Miller said. "What the Kentucky offered, and will offer again, is famous old films like Humphrey Bogart, foreign films like Ingmar Bergman and Fellini, art films that are lower budget and have a different audience."

"The other part that made the Kentucky attractive is that it's always been reasonably priced. It was always $2 and $2.25 while these other theaters were going up to $5 and $6 a film."

Since the Kentucky closed, all cinemas in Lexington have been owned by Loew's Cinemas. This week two new theaters owned by Cinemark Cinemas will open.

Cinemark officials said they may try to keep one screen at a theater available for movies similar to those that the Kentucky offered, but it is contingent upon the interest and support of the community.

Since the city bought the theater, prospects for the Kentucky reopening are the most encouraging since the fire, Miller said.

Lexington Mayor Scotty Baesler and "I am involved in talking to architects about different ways to use the office space above the theater."

"We'll have a proposal, I'd say, within 30 days. Then we'll want to lease the theater to a private group. Then they will have to continue renovating the theater and they will operate it. We don't want to have anything to do with operating the theater."

When the Kentucky closed, some private citizens attempted to purchase and operate it, but Miller said those plans fell through because the group was poorly organized.

The expense of renovating and reopening the theater prompted the city to buy it, Miller said.

"Frankly, we were convinced that there was no one in the private sector that could afford to buy the theaters, renovate them and operate the Kentucky Theatre the way it used to be operated," Miller said. "Too much money would be involved to have such a use — they would have had to charge 10 times as much (for admission) to get their money out."

Concern from the theater's patrons and from historic preservationists also encouraged the city to buy the theater, Miller said.

Although the Kentucky appears to be headed toward reopening, the fate of Movies on Main is less certain. But even if Movies on Main does not reopen, the city plans to preserve the building it was in.

Once the Kentucky reopens it will become an integral part of the downtown arts scene, Miller said.

"We consider downtown to be an arts district already," she said. "It has the Opera House ... ArtsPlace, art galleries and the Kentucky Theatre will be a part of that whole thing so you can see art films, historic films — that kind of thing."

MICHAEL CLEVELAND/Kentucky Staff

The Kentucky Theatre was considered one of the ten best movie houses in the country during the '20s. Before a devastating fire over two years ago, the Kentucky brought many off-beat, foreign and cult films to Lexington.

Anson Funderburgh and the Rockets keep the blues alive

Mass media introduce classic artists to youth

By HUNTER HAYES
Assistant Arts Editor

By the end of the 1980s there was a resurgence of roots-based music. One of the most popular forms of that style continues to be the father of it all — the blues.

But the blues is finding an increasing audience with younger generations with increased exposure on the radio and through other media such as MTV. Groups such as the Robert Cray Band, the Fabulous Thunderbirds and Stevie Ray Vaughan that at one time had only a cult following have enjoyed much success through mass exposure.

Although you will not see their latest videos on MTV or hear them frequently on the radio, another blues-based band that is turning more than a few heads is Anson Funderburgh and the Rockets.

Funderburgh said his band has been helped by the exposure other blues bands have enjoyed.

"There's been a time when you couldn't make a lot of money doing this kind of music," Funderburgh said. "It's kind of like when one (group) gets good exposure it pulls the whole chain along."

The Rockets, who are five-time winners (1988-89) in the prestigious W.C. Handy awards for blues groups, are gaining attention with the release of their fifth album, Rack 'Em Up.

Following the critical success of their previous album, Sins, was no simple task for the Texas-based group.

Showcasing the band's mixture of Funderburgh's Texas-style blues guitar with singer/harmonica player Sam Myers' talents, this album shows that this group is definitely in the same league as other Texas bands such as the Fabulous Thunderbirds.

The group is rounded out with bassist Mike Judge, pianist Matt McCabe and drummer Danny Cochran.

Though the Rockets are a relatively young group, Sam Myers is somewhat of a legend in his own right.

Myers was not only a drummer for Elmore James in the 1950s, but

Anson Funderburgh

he also had a hit single with "My Love Is Here To Stay" in 1957.

"I met him in Jackson, Mississippi when a different version of the Rockets was playing in that town," Funderburgh said of his chance meeting with Myers. "I've heard of him forever — I was aware of him."

Funderburgh and Myers also released a version of "My Love Is Here To Stay" on the first album they played on together.

Playing the blues nightly has become a way of life for the 34-year-old guitarist. Funderburgh began playing professionally when he was 15 years old, and he continues to spend most of his time on the road.

"We work a lot," Funderburgh said. "We work maybe 270 days a year. We're probably on the road about 220 days."

Citing his influences as B.B. King, Freddie King, Robert T. Lockwood and Otis Rush, Funderburgh said he feels that the success of the younger bands helps new generations of music fans discover the original artists.

"It does help," Funderburgh said. "And people doing their songs helps. Like Stevie (Ray Vaughan) does a bunch of Old Guitar Slim stuff and Howlin' Wolf. Younger people probably wouldn't figure out who Chester Burnett was if it wasn't for stuff like that."

Funderburgh and his group will continue to serve as ambassadors for the blues by performing and recording just as they do now.

Funderburgh said his group's plans are simply "trying to play the music that we love to play, trying to get as many people to listen to it as we possibly can."

MICHAEL CLEVELAND/KRHM

Anson Funderburgh gets into a guitar riff during a Monday night concert at Breeding's.

By HUNTER HAYES
Assistant Arts Editor

Although some people insist that the blues are dead, anyone wishing to write an obituary for the art form obviously has never heard of the Texas band Anson Funderburgh

Concert REVIEW

and the Rockets featuring Sam Myers.

Of the 150 people lucky enough to have been at Breeding's Monday night, they certainly know that the blues is alive and well in the capable hands of Funderburgh and Myers.

The group took the stage and began their first hourlong set not with a turbo-charged rocker, as their name might suggest, but with a swinging mid-tempo instrumental.

Veteran bluesman Myers, who has performed with Elmore James of "Dust My Blues" fame, joined the group for the second song and sparked the younger musicians with his experienced voice and soulful harmonica.

Funderburgh looks quite unassuming and harmless. Although many young guitar players have a rapid-fire machine gun style, he is a sharpshooter with deadly accurate aim.

A professional performer for almost 20 years, Funderburgh has learned to master his style of playing as few players have.

In fact, no one plays a 12-bar blues shuffle the way Funderburgh

does. He is able to entice his audience with seductively melodic lines before going in for the kill.

Myers, on the other hand, looks every bit of the blues master that he sounds like. His vocals give the Rockets that authenticity that many bands lack.

He is able to provide that not only by singing with experience but with great conviction as well. He knows how the blues should be sung and played, and he delivers each song with that knowledge firmly at hand.

One of the more surprising members of the group was keyboard player Matt McCabe of Boston. The only player not from the South or Southwest, he sounded as if he could play in any juke joint on the "chitlin' circuit" or in a posh hotel lounge.

Playing with his back to the rest of the band, his textures blended well with Funderburgh's guitar.

The Rockets are rounded out by a rhythm section consisting of drummer Danny Cochran, the newest member of the group, and Mike Judge on bass. The rhythm section never failed to provide a steady, swinging groove throughout the evening.

The performance was divided into two sets, each an hour long, and a final encore.

The sets featured many songs from the band's latest album, Rack 'Em Up, including "I'll Keep On Trying," "All This Love," and the gem "I'm Your Professor."

The Rockets ended their second set with a version of "Sweet Home Chicago" that brought many couples to the dance floor in front of the band.

The charges levied against the program ranged from cash payments and free gifts to recruits to cheating on the American College Test.

The NCAA also banned sophomore Eric Manuel and freshman Chris Mills from NCAA play. Two other players, both sophomores, also left the team — forward LeRon Ellis to Syracuse University and guard Sean Sutton to Lexington Community College. The investigation also forced UK's entire coaching staff to quit.

The Wildcats also were stripped of their 1987-88 Southeastern Conference championship, and the NCAA ordered UK to erase three NCAA Tournament games from its record.

In announcing the sanctions, the NCAA said that things could have been worse for the winningest program in college basketball: UK could have been given the death penalty — banned from NCAA basketball — had it not been for the cooperation of UK President David Roselle and his staff.

UK's internal investigation into the program was cited by the NCAA as a model example for the way member schools should act during a probe. "You really don't know how blessed you are to have a president ... of your university who is brilliant, articulate and with as much courage and as strong a leader as David Roselle," NCAA

Executive Director Richard Schultz told the Lexington Rotary club in November.

Meanwhile, the 1988-89 season was a nightmare for Wildcat fans. UK had its first losing season in more than 60 years, posting an overall record of 13-19 and losing in the first round of the SEC tournament.

Faculty Gets Pay Raise

3 In an attempt to narrow the increasing gap between UK salaries and those at benchmark institutions, UK trustees voted at their July meeting to give faculty a seven percent raise, on average.

The University was able to pay for the raise by cutting 3 percent from each department's budget. But even with the raise, faculty's salaries remained more than $5,000 lower than those of their colleagues at benchmark schools.

Although the cuts did not eliminate any jobs, they forced departments to hold vacant positions open longer, cut back on supplies and not purchase some equipment.

Many faculty would say that raise was well-deserved. During the 1989 fiscal year, private gifts to the University set an all-time record, exceeding $30 million.

And according to Rex L. Bailey, who is in charge of the University's fund-raising, more money is out there waiting to be donated by alumni, businesses and endowments.

Bailey met with the deans of the Lexington campus colleges last fall to find new ways to raise money. The one drawback to private gifts, Bailey said, is that most of the money is earmarked for specific purposes and many times cannot be given to the programs that need it the most.

C.M. Newton Named Athletics Director

4 When Cliff Hagan was forced to resign last year, the University's main concern was to find someone dedicated to running a program that played by NCAA rules. Those qualities UK found in C.M. Newton.

Newton, who played basketball at UK under Adolph Rupp and coached at the University of Alabama and Vanderbilt University, was applauded by University officials for his high ethical standards.

Newton was instrumental in hiring men's basketball coach Rick Pitino, and when Jerry Claiborne resigned in November, Newton made it clear that he would have the final say in who the next football coach was — not boosters.

One of the more encouraging actions taken by Newton last year was the promotion his office did with non-income producing sports.

Under Hagan, the athletics program was criticized for being concerned only about winning basketball trophies.

But Newton has taken a no-nonsense approach that recognizes the importance of developing a well-rounded athletic program that also stresses integrity and success in the classroom.

Sutton Resigns; Pitino Named Coach

5 When Eddie Sutton got the UK coaching job he said that he would have crawled to UK to coach the Wildcats.

But before a live national television audience in March Sutton announced that he was quitting as head coach of the Wildcats.

During his four seasons, he compiled an 88-39 record.

Sutton was forced to resign by Roselle because of the beating that the University's image suffered during the NCAA investigation.

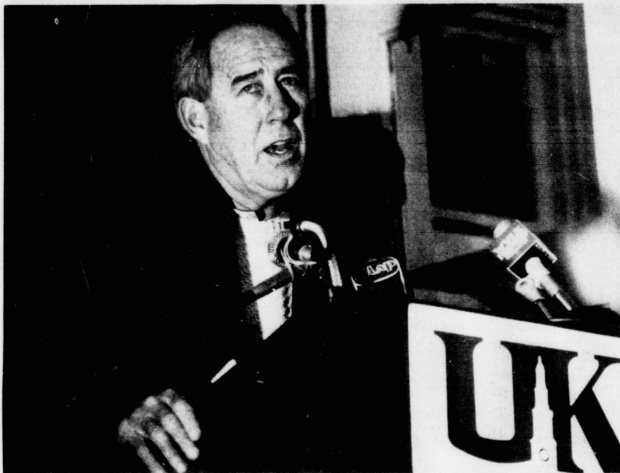

Sutton maintained his innocence throughout the NCAA investigation, and was never accused by the NCAA of breaking any rules, but he was criticized for not having better control over his program and coaches.

A little more than 2 1/2 months after Sutton quit, UK found his replacement in New York Knicks Coach Rick Pitino.

Pitino's decision to leave the Big Apple puzzled New York City sportswriters, who questioned why he would want to leave one of the best NBA teams to coach a college program that had just been placed on three-year probation by the NCAA.

Pitino made his mark in basketball while a head coach at Boston College and then Providence College, taking an underdog Providence team to the 1987 Final Four. But what interested Roselle the most in Pitino was his reputation of having high ethical standards and an emphasis on academics.

It was not long after coming to Lexington that Wildcat fans realized things would be different under Pitino, with a high-powered offense and pressure defense that had never been seen during the 58 previous seasons.

Pitino began the 1989-90 season with only two returning starters and a team depleted by NCAA sanctions, but by the last game of 1989, Pitino's Wildcats gave No. 8 University of Louisville a run for its money before coming up short in the end. Wildcat fans could only think of what the future holds once Pitino gets some All-Americans on his squad.

Wethington Named Interim President

6 After finishing as the runner-up to Roselle for the UK presidency in 1987, Charles Wethington was named interim president Dec. 28 by UK's Board of Trustees.

Wethington — who has been an administrator in UK's community college system for 22 years, eight as chancellor — was selected by a special committee over Chancellor for the Medical Center Peter Bosomworth.

Wethington was opposed by many UK faculty because of his close ties with Gov. Wallace Wilkinson. Wethington and Wilkinson are both Casey County natives and friends, and many faculty feared that Wethington would be more attentive to Wilkinson's political needs rather than UK's needs.

Rick Pitino quit his job as head coach of the New York Knicks to rebuild the UK men's basketball program.

the appointment of Wethington gave the impression that he had been railroaded through by the governor.

But shortly after his appointment, Wethington met with leaders of UK faculty, who said they were impressed by his commitment to work with faculty members.

At the Dec. 28 meeting, the board defeated a motion by trustee Larry Forgy that would not have allowed the interim president to be a candidate for the permanent presidency.

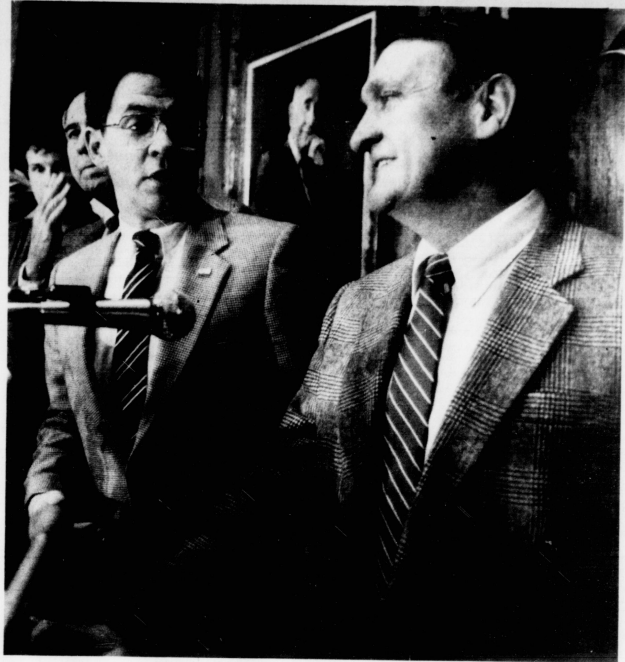

Forgy claimed that allowing the interim president to be a candidate would discourage quality candidates from applying for the job. Although Wethington did not declare himself a candidate for the presidency, he did not take himself out of the picture.

Claiborne came to UK in 1982 to a program that had been rocked by scandal and probation under Fran Curci. After Curci was fired by the UK Athletics Association Board of Directors, Claiborne was hired, promising to establish a winning program and restore the program's credibility.

While his teams did not set many records on the gridiron, his 1988 team had the highest percent of players to graduate, better than the University of Notre Dame and Duke University.

Many expected UK to be invited to a postseason bowl last season, only to be disappointed by the Wildcats' 6-5 overall mark.

Claiborne's highlight of the season was when 17 of his players were selected to the SEC academic honor roll, the most players selected from a team.

UK Announces Strategic Plan

plan, what he called "a plan for a plan."

The purpose of the plan was to clearly set UK's goals and priorities as it entered the next decade.

The plan envisioned three overall goals: strengthen the University's commitment to scholarship and academic excellence; provide leadership to assist the state and nation in dealing with issues; and take care of and develop the University's existing resources.

The plan also better defined what the University's purpose is and how it should interact with its community.

More importantly, the strategic plan gave the University a program to present to lawmakers outlining the University's purpose and goals. During the 1988 session of the General Assembly, Wilkinson criticized the state's universities for not being clear in their missions.

Hemenway Proposes Campus Agenda

9 Chancellor for the Lexington Campus Robert Hemenway officially arrived July 1, and one of the first actions he took was to propose a 10-point plan for improving and uniting the Lexington Campus.

Hemenway, former chairman of UK's English department who came from the University of Oklahoma where he was dean of the College of Arts & Sciences, outlined a plan in September that established the Lexington Campus' priorities and where it ought to be heading.

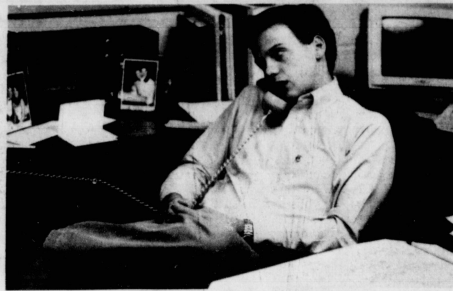

High on the chancellor's list was for the University to articulate its values, cut through the red tape, conserve fiscal resources and prepare students to compete in the 21st century's global economy.

Hemenway also urged the University community to excel in specific areas, rather than viewing its mission with an "across-the-board mentality."

Sophomores Win SGA Election

two sophomores announced their candidacies for president and vice president of UK's Student Government Association, but few expected the two to win by such large margins.

Lohman defeated his nearest opponent in the presidential race by almost 500 votes; Foster ran away with the vice presidency, receiving more than 1,100 votes and beat her closest opponent by more than 600 votes.

Equally as surprising as Lohman's margin of victory was Kennedy James' second-place finish in the presidential race. James, who was a senator at large, was the first black candidate to finish strongly in the SGA presidential race.

IFC official Rizvi resigns from post amid controversy

By TOM SPALDING
Executive Editor

An Interfraternity Council officer resigned last month after he was caught trying to take a "substantial amount" of money from an IFC fundraising project, a source close to the situation said.

Sayed Amir "Saj" Rizvi, former IFC vice president at large and a UK Student Government Association senator at large, cited personal reasons for quitting those positions when he resigned in mid-December.

Mike Johnson, who will be leaving as IFC president, said that Rizvi resigned from IFC because of problems "stemming from improprieties" with IFC funds.

A source close to the situation said that Rizvi was given the option to either resign or face impeachment by the IFC. Rizvi, who said last month that he was going home to his native country of Kuwait, could not be reached for comment.

As of late yesterday, Rizvi, a 20-year-old junior, had not registered for spring semester classes. The last day for registration is Jan. 17.

Victor Hazard, assistant dean of students, would not say if charges had been filed or if any disciplinary action was taken against Rizvi.

"All I can say is (that) the Dean of Students Office is aware of the situation and we handled it," Hazard said. "Everything is confidential. There was a violation, we looked into it and there were indeed some infractions."

Hazard would not elaborate on what the infractions were or who they involved.

Rizvi, who was in charge of IFC's philanthropy projects, tried to take a "substantial amount" of money in connection with T-shirt sales from a three-on-three basketball tournament sponsored by the IFC this fall, according to the source.

The source said that two Dean of Students Office officials were performing a routine check of invoices from the sales when they discovered a discrepancy and that "some numbers didn't add up," the source said. The source did not specify how much money Rizvi tried to take.

Lee refused to comment further on the situation.

Steve Mott, president of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, said that IFC members were told by Johnson at an IFC meeting Monday only that Rizvi had resigned.

IFC members were told by Johnson "not to spread any rumors," Mott said. "I don't know what (Rizvi) has done."

Lee said the vice president at large normally has "very minimal" contact with IFC funds. Only the president, treasurer and fraternity adviser may acquire money by signing checks, Lee said.

Rizvi, a member of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity, resigned his seat as SGA senator at large Dec. 13, but SGA President Sean Lohman said that Rizvi was at risk of being purged by the Senate because he had missed several Senate meetings.

Rizvi's SGA seat probably will be filled by Chris Essid, Lohman said.

Sean Coleman, who takes over as IFC's new president Jan. 22, said that he wasn't aware of any improprieties involving Rizvi but "what is under the bridge is under the bridge."

"I'm not passive but it happened in another term of office... we're gonna use (the) strictest safeguards as ever would have been used," Coleman said.

Third time a charm for new Add-drop

By JONATHAN MILLER
Staff Writer

The third time around for decentralized Add-drop was a charm for the Registrar's Office.

The first two semesters decentralized Add-drop was used, students had to wait in lines several hours long and deal with the computer system breaking down.

"We have never had this much success with Add-drop," said Lisa Collins, registration coordinator. "The long lines at the end of the day were a piece of cake for us to get them in and out efficiently."

University Registrar Randall Dahl attributed the success of the system to the cooperation of students.

"We've been working (on Add-drop) for 15 months," Dahl said. "We're getting better at it, but I believe that the students are understanding how the system works."

For the first time, freshmen were allowed to go through Add-drop first and seniors had to wait until later in the day.

"We thought it would be fair for freshmen to go through the line first," Dahl said. "Freshmen tend to encounter more difficulties in their scheduling of classes."

But few freshmen took advantage of the early time.

system.

"I was afraid that I would have to wait in a line for three hours," said Andra Rosenthal, an undecided freshman.

"The only time I had to wait was when the computers broke down," Rosenthal said, "but it only took five minutes until the computers were running again."

than his scheduled time in hope of getting through it faster.

"I thought there would be a huge line... but when I got here there weren't many freshmen in line," Huffman said.

Huffman said he didn't like the new order in which students went through Add-drop.

"I understand why they changed the order, but I still think that seniors should get a chance at classes first," he said.

More sophomores and juniors came than did freshmen, but no class showed more than seniors.

But even seniors found that they didn't have to wait as long as they had anticipated.

"I waited for 30 minutes," said Robert Bond, a mechanical engineering senior. "This was quicker than previous Add-drops that I've experienced."

Pitino to institute changes to break 5-game skid

By BARRY REEVES
Sports Editor

Rick Pitino does not consider himself a superstitious man, but he said that he is considering instituting a couple of changes for tonight's game against Florida.

Prior to tonight's 7:30 game against the Gators, Pitino plans to change his team's uniforms and loosen the rims at Rupp Arena.

"Those are the only two major decisions that I have to make this afternoon," Pitino said jokingly yesterday at his weekly news conference.

The Cats were 5-2 while wearing more traditional uniforms. But since they switched to a more modern uniform — shiny with long, baggy shorts — they are 0-5.

Based on those figures, Pitino said his team probably will not wear their new uniforms when they hit the Rupp Arena floor tonight.

At the beginning of the season UK senior guard Derrick Miller complained to Pitino that Rupp Arena's rims were too tight, but Pitino thought Miller was complaining because of his shooting slump.

Pitino said that he has changed his mind and has started to suspect the rims, too.

UK-Florida

Records: UK 5-7 (1-1), Florida 5-4 (1-1).
When: 7:30 p.m. tonight.
Where: Rupp Arena.
Radio: Live on WVUK-AM/FM with Caywood Ledford and Dave Baker.
Television: Delayed on WKYT with Ralph Hacker and Jim Master.

"After the Louisville game, he (Pitino) came up to me and said, 'Maybe you're right,'" Miller said. "... I don't know what will happen. I don't know if he will or not. I'll just have to wait and see."

Pitino said that he does not completely agree with Miller, but he probably will have the rims loosened for tonight, even if the only benefit will be psychological.

"It's bothering Derrick, so we're probably going to try (loosening the rims)," Pitino said. "But those rims are awfully tight."

Miller said that he is not going to let the rims bother him during tonight's game.

"I've really just put it out of my mind," said Miller, who leads all

UK scorers with a 21.2 average. "I guess it really doesn't make that much difference because both teams have to play on the same goals."

Wildcat fans thought they had seen the last of Don DeVoe after he was pressured to resign as head coach of the University of Tennessee.

Guess what? He's back. Only this time, he's leading the scandalous Florida Gators as their interim head coach.

After Norm Sloan resigned from Florida in October amid controversy, DeVoe moved in as interim head of the Gator program.

DeVoe has guided Florida to a 5-4 record, 1-1 in the Southeastern Conference. DeVoe said he thinks that his players are finally getting used to his style of basketball.

"It's just a matter of time," DeVoe said. "... They are working very hard."

Returning from last year's Florida squad are 7-2 senior center Dwayne Schintzius (averaging 18.6 points and 9.2 rebounds per game), 6-7 junior forwards Livingston Chatman (13.1 points, 7.3 rebounds) and Dwayne Davis (12.8 point, 8.0 rebounds).

"This Florida front line is as good as there is," Miller said. "They are all good."

DeVoe said that he is not worried about the Wildcat defense collapsing inside to stop his team's front line.

"If people take away our inside game with Dwayne Schintzius, Livingston Chatman and Dwayne Davis... we think we can hit the outside shot," he said.

Even with the scoring punch the Florida front line has, Pitino said that he is most concerned about the Gators' defense.

DeVoe said his team likes to "play a game that is fairly deliberate," but he said that the Gators can adjust if the Wildcats force an up-tempo game.

"We can play at a lot of different speeds," he said. "Every good team has to be able to do that. ... And I think we can."

Miller said that the UK game plan will be to wear down the Gators, especially their big men.

"I've played against them all before and when you make their big guys work (defensively) on the pe-

Bill Curry is the second jewel in Newton's athletics crown

When C.M. Newton was hired last April as UK's athletics director, everyone believed that he was the savior of the University's athletics program.

But Newton has surpassed even the highest expectations of Wildcat fans.

What he has accomplished is amazing. Simply amazing.

First he persuaded Rick Pitino to leave his post with the first-place New York Knicks to resurrect the men's basketball program.

And for an encore Newton talked University of Alabama football coach Bill Curry into leaving one of the most prestigious football programs in the country to coach UK's program.

This scenario is just the opposite of one that happened 38 years ago when Paul "Bear" Bryant left UK for the University of Alabama. Bryant's decision to leave UK was seen as a good career move. Curry's decision is being looked upon by many as anything but a good career move.

Or is it? His decision is the best in the long run for his family because nobody wants to be unappreciated, and Curry could not have been more unappreciated than he was at Alabama.

After finishing 10-1 with a share of the Southeastern Conference title last season, Crimson Tide fans were calling for Curry's head. Although the Tide was in the Sugar Bowl against the University of Miami, "Bama fans were still livid with the Tide's loss to Auburn a month earlier.

Barry REEVES

That's ridiculous.

At UK, a big-name college coach? At UK, a big-name college coach? At UK, a big-name college coach?

Curry said that when he and his wife, Carolyn, decided to visit UK, "We thought it would be nice, but we were made to feel so welcome and so needed. And I can't begin to tell you how good that felt."

Job security is another reason Curry decided to leave Alabama. Although he was offered a 3-year contract extension by Alabama Athletics Director "Hootie" Ingram, Curry was worried that the fans might be able to dethrone him.

At UK, Curry will not have to worry about job security as long as his players get an education and he wins seven games a year. If he attains those two goals, he can stay at UK until retirement.

Curry was given a 5-year contract with UK, with a base salary of $105,000 plus radio and television shows and other outside incomes, which should take care of his needs.

But if Curry was interested only in money, he probably would not have left Alabama. He wanted stability and a chance to win. Few schools other than UK could offer that to a coach.

But what will UK receive, other than a big-name college coach?

•Integrity. Curry has been successful on and off the field at every stop in his career. In his first year at Alabama, he instituted academic programs that raised the football team's grade point average from a disgraceful 1.7 (on a 4.0 scale) to 2.1 and improved it steadily throughout his stay in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

•Stability. Curry has never seemed to be one that will just cut loose for no reason. He thinks things through and then makes a decision. He has drawn nothing but praise from former and current players and coaches.

Few people who know Bill Curry, not the fans who know of him simply through results on the scoreboard, have said a negative thing about him. That's very rare about anybody. And on that note,

KEEPING THEIR HOPES ON ICE

By ROBERT NORMAN
Staff Writer

Most club sports want to become a varsity team, but Cool Cats manager Mark Shupe thinks that hockey has the best argument at UK.

More than 1,000 people attend most Cool Cats games at the Lexington Ice Rink, which makes hockey the third most popular UK sport.

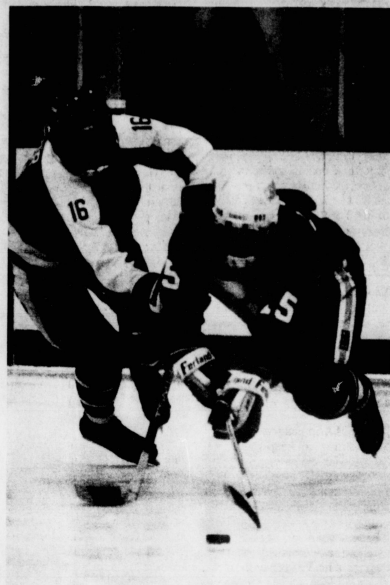

"The fact that we are a revenue-generator — that's what the school's incentive would be," Shupe said. "We make more money than all of the other club teams put together. It's going to take at least two to three years to be taken seriously (by the UK athletics department), though."

But for now, Shupe said the team must continue winning games, which hasn't been a problem for the team this season.

"What we need to do now is continue winning, because that brings out the fans and generates money," Shupe said. "And also, to be taken seriously, we need to begin conforming to the NCAA rules and regulations for varsity teams, and pay our own way."

NCAA unwilling to give up revenue

By SCOTT MCCARTNEY
Associated Press

DALLAS — The NCAA splintered in its effort to reform big-time college sports Tuesday, voting to reveal each school's graduation rate for athletes but struggling with a plan to shorten Division I and II basketball seasons by three games.

The organization did approve compromise cuts in spring football practice, reducing practice days from 20 to 15, and limiting contact drill to 10 of those days.

But losing revenue from three basketball games was, at least initially, too much for the NCAA to sacrifice for library-time athletes.

Division I and II delegates voted to put off the basketball cuts until next year's convention. Two hours later, they voted to reconsider the cuts.

Division III schools broke rank with their larger cousins and reduced their season to 25 games on first consideration.

The NCAA Presidents Commission, fighting to keep its effort alive to shrink the pressures of big-time athletics, had proposed having spring football to 10 days and eliminating contact drills all together in the spring.

The basketball cuts were the cornerstone of a "watershed" package of moves aimed at relieving pressure on athletes and giving them more time for the library.

But opponents said the revenue lost from three fewer games — up to $250,000 at some schools — was not worth the academic gains.

"It's big money sorely needed," said Brad Hovious, athletic director at the University of Texas-El Paso. "Two or three basketball games can pay for three or four non-revenue sports."

"It is better in my opinion to take no action than to approve what seems to be a patch-quilt series of measures that really do not address the scope of the problem," said Alan Hauser, faculty representative from Appalachian State University.

The difficulty in winning approval for the cuts in athletic commitments was a blow to the Presidents Commission, which was formed in 1984 to spark reform.

The basketball cuts represent "a signal of great importance beyond this room ... that reforms are going forward," said Greg O'Brien, president of the University of New Orleans and a member of the Presidents Commission.

"This is the most important thing at this convention," pleaded O'Brien.

"The message (the NCAA should send) is less time in the athletics facility, more time in the library," added John Hogan, faculty representative from the Colorado School of Mines.

Delegates addressing the 84th annual NCAA convention said the time-cutting ideas were only a small start toward meaningful reform.

"We must give these kids more time away from football and basketball," said Penn State football coach Joe Paterno. "I am concerned that we don't walk away from this thinking that because we've eliminated a little spring practice that that's going to solve some of the problems we have."

The NCAA members voted overwhelmingly to make public each school's graduation rate for athletes beginning next year. With only a handful of dissenters, they also agreed that schools must give graduation rates to prospective athletes during recruiting.

The NCAA has been under pressure from Congress, which is considering legislation to force the release of the rates.

The disclosure of the graduation rates was seen as putting more pressure on coaches to allow more time for study.

"We either take this action for ourselves or we'll have it done for us," said Texas Christian University chancellor Bill Tucker. "If it's done for us, it will be done to us."

Delegates did approve a resolution calling for recommendation to reduce time demands in sports other than football and basketball, with changes to be voted on at next year's convention.

The Presidents commission succeeded initially in its reform efforts by winning approval for Proposition 48, which set academic minimums for in-coming athletes, and the "death penalty" for repeat rules violators.

Keith Kocan said. "We shoot for four or five players a year, and if we get them we will continue to grow."

"It's like the weakest link thing. A team is only as good as its weakest link and the new players have really strengthened our weakest link."

Playing teams from the North also has helped the Cool Cats improve.

"Everybody wants to be the best they can be," junior Roy Henry said. "So we're playing tougher teams — teams from the North — that we wouldn't have dreamed of playing in the past."

Beating Northern teams are especially important, Henry said, because hockey is to the North what basketball is to Kentucky.

"I'm from Owensboro," Henry said. "And there are only three hockey rinks in the state. So, to become a big hockey team here would be like a dream come true."

One of the Cool Cats victories this season was a 4-3 win over the University of Dayton, who until last season was a varsity team.

Curry says administration not behind him

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Bill Curry, who quit as Alabama's head football coach last week to take over the program at Kentucky, said one reason he left the Crimson Tide was that he was offered a new contract with less authority — not a contract extension.

In an interview with Atlanta Constitution columnist Mark Bradley published Tuesday, Curry also said that going to Alabama three years ago was not a mistake.

"Not at all. It was a marvelous experience," he said. "We met some great people there."

"It was an entirely new set of circumstances concerning the football coach's ability to govern his program.

"I accepted the financial part of it, which was diminished, and I could still hire who I wanted, but in order to be successful at this level, the coach has to call all the shots, and that part of it was vastly diminished," he said.

"What did that say about me? You'd have to ask (the Alabama administration) about that. But what it did not say was, 'We think you're the guy to lead us into the '90s,'" said Curry.

"People say, 'Oh, Bill's just too sensitive.' I wasn't worried about a few alumni on the outside. But the bottom line is that it's my mission to serve young people, and when it's clear that's been compromised it's time to move on."

"If my players and my family are being hampered by where I went to school 25 years ago or by what coach I did not play for, it becomes selfish of me to stay," he added.

Vandy drops Lady Kats from Top 25; team looks to LSU

By GREGORY A. HALL
Staff Writer

A quick 11-1 start placed the UK women's basketball team in The Associated Press' Top 25. But a 79-70 loss to Vanderbilt University Sunday dropped the Lady Kats from the latest poll, which was released yesterday.

And now the team faces a grueling Southeastern Conference schedule, which is loaded with several Top 25 schools.

"Three or four minutes into the (Vanderbilt) game we looked tired," UK coach Sharon Fanning said.

Fanning said that her youthful squad was frustrated by the physical play of Sunday's game.

"We just didn't connect," Fanning said. "We can't allow for our frustration to take away from our confidence. Our three freshmen are our back-ups inside. They've got to help us. They've got to make mental adjustments."

One of the keys to the Lady Commodores' win was that UK's leading scorer Kristi Cushenberry was held to eight points.

Senior forward Vanessa Foster-Sutton led UK with 17 points and 13 rebounds.

"I thought Vandy did a real good job with our press," Foster-Sutton said. "We just didn't have communication and defense."

"We had a problem, when we got down communicating," Fanning said.

Fanning said the success of the rest of the season will depend on the strength of UK's bench.

"It's hard to predict," Foster-Sutton said. "It just depends on how we react and how our young people react (to the pressure of the SEC)."

Down 24 points in the second half of the Vandy game, the Lady Kats rallied and got within striking distance for the rest of the game.

"Vanessa was probably the one who made most of the things happen in our second half comeback," Fanning said. "She's getting a lot of mileage out of her size. She's been a factor in our quickness from the beginning of the season. She is all over the place."

Foster-Sutton said that through her experience, she has learned how to adjust to SEC basketball.

"I'm used to it now," Foster-Sutton said. "I play a lot tougher because I can get away with some things that they would call against a (non-conference opponent). A lot of times you think you should have gotten the foul. You just get use to it and accept it."

Foster-Sutton said that being ranked in the AP poll helped the young team's morale.

"It means a lot to everybody, especially after everybody looked at Kentucky how young we are and didn't give us a chance," she said. "It gives us a lift and makes us work harder."

Fanning said that the ranking was an indication that things were going well for UK.

"We're doing what we should be doing," Fanning said. "I feel like we could have been 12-0. The ranking is great. I feel like we deserve to get back, if we play like we can play."

Foster-Sutton said that the Lady Kats will have to play together if they are to survive the SEC.

"I think we had a pretty good first half (of the season)," Foster-Sutton said. "It's going to take a lot of teamwork and leadership."

Foster-Sutton said that she and the other players who know the SEC would have to help the younger players "keep their heads up."

UK's next game is 7:30 tomorrow night at Memorial Coliseum against 16th-ranked Louisiana State University, which is 10-2 on the season.

"Our game plan doesn't change against LSU," Fanning said. "We're going to really look at timing and the number of substitutions. Their point guard (Dana Chatman) is one of the best point guards in the country."

LSU returns their two leading scorers — April Delley and Chatman — from last season. The Lady Kats lost last year's contest in Baton Rouge, La., 82-76.

Fanning said she feels that her team has an advantage in scheduling because their SEC schedule begins with "three of the lighter SEC opponents."

The Lady Kats do not play No. 3 Georgia, No. 5 Tennessee and No. 15 Auburn until the end of the season.

"This gives us a good idea, these first three games, on how our players are going to react," Fanning said.

he will be replacing a man (Jerry Claiborne) about whom the same can be said.

•Class. Attitudes like Curry's definitely rub off. His teams have acted and played just as he did when he was a player at Georgia Tech and in the NFL with the Packers and Colts. His teams may not have won every game on the scoreboard, but they were winners.

Just as Curry has pointed out, winners are people who give their best effort and never quit striving toward their goals. An 0-11 team can still be considered winners because of the way they play on the field and their achievements off the field.

•Quality. Despite what some Alabama fans believe, Curry is considered to be one of the premier coaches in the country. While his teams may not be flashy and run up the score just to impress the pollsters, they are good — always fundamentally sound and well-prepared for the game.

Curry's teams reflect him in another manner — they are as competitive as a pit bull; they never

Calloway not thrilled about No. 1

Associated Press

Rick Calloway has been there before, so he's not very excited about being No. 1 right now.

Kansas (16-0) was voted No. 1 in The Associated Press college basketball poll released Monday, the first time at No. 1 since the Jayhawks fielded a lineup with Wilt Chamberlain in 1956-57.

Calloway, who played for Indiana's 1987 national champions, said he doesn't think the Jayhawks deserve the lofty rating.

"I think Georgetown should be No. 1," he said Monday night after Kansas overcame a 13-point deficit in the second half to beat Nebraska 98-93.

"They can have it. In a couple of years, half of their team will be in the NBA. They deserve it," Calloway said.

Medicine Center officials.

Pitino said that the situation of Lawrence Funderburke, an Indiana freshman, has not changed. (Funderburke) called C.M. (Newton) to see if he would be interested if he got his release from Indiana," Pitino said. "But C.M. called Indiana and they said that Knight would not give him his release under any circumstances. And that was the end."

Todd Bearup transfers to walk-on UK team

Staff reports

Todd Bearup, a 6-5, 210-pound sophomore basketball player at Utah State University, announced yesterday that he will transfer to UK and walk on to the basketball team. Bearup is the younger brother of former Wildcat Bret Bearup, who played for UK from 1980-1985.

Bearup, 22, is a 1986 graduate of Laurel County High School, where he was an all-state selection his senior year, averaging 19-points per game.

He played basketball his freshman year at Utah State under Rod Tueller before traveling to Seoul, South Korea, for a 2-year church mission.

During his freshman year at Utah State, Bearup played in 19 games, and averaged 7.2 minutes per game. He was 15-37 from the field (40.5 percent), 8-22 from the free throw line (36 percent) and had 39 rebounds (2.1 average) and 37 points

(1.9 average).

Bearup participated in only one game this season, Utah State's season-opener against Boise State, but he did not score.

Under NCAA transfer rules, Bearup will be eligible to play for UK after 1990 fall semester. He will have 2 1/2 years of eligibility left once activated. Bearup may practice with the team after he enrolls as a full-time UK student.

After he enrolls as a full-time student, UK coach Rick Pitino said Bearup will be allowed to practice with the team after he passes a routine physical examination, which is scheduled for Friday.

"We're happy to welcome Todd to our team as a walk-on," Pitino said. "Although I have not seen him play, anyone who earns a scholarship at a Utah State obviously is talented."

Back to the same ol' grind

Like birds heading south for the winter, UK students flocked back to campus this week to begin yet another semester of classes and usher in a new decade.

A few things have changed. UK has an interim president (Charles Wethington), a new football coach (Bill Curry), and lots of vacancies in the residence halls.

A few things haven't changed, however. You still have to hunt for a parking spot, and you still have to wait in line to get in your classes. Welcome home.

Clockwise, top left, Residents of Complex-Commons return Sunday evening. Chemical engineering sophomore Stephen Dunlevy carts his belongings to Blanding I. A Keeneland Hall resident gathers her clothes. Jennifer Hacker gets a hand from her father, Oscar, as she moves back into Patterson Hall on Monday.

'It's like a new era'

Campus has high expectations for Wildcat football under Curry

By JULIE ESSELMAN
Special Projects Writer

The UK community is welcoming new UK football coach Bill Curry with open arms — and already expectations of a trip to a bowl game within a few years.

Most students and faculty interviewed said that Curry was the right person to carry on former coach Jerry Claiborne's tradition of integrity and academic commitment while lifting the football program to new heights on the athletic field.

"I think he's probably the best choice UK could make," said Dustin Graham, a computer science freshman. "He had a good season (at the University of Alabama). I like the way he handled his players. He's just got the look that says he's a good coach."

"It's great," said Jamie Hobgood, an undecided sophomore and member of the women's basketball team. "He had a really good record at Alabama. I think he'll be able to come here and do the same. I think he sort of follows the characteristics of Claiborne."

UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton offered Curry the coaching position last Friday, and Curry was officially named the new coach

Monday night by the UK Athletics Board. He is the second coach Newton has hired since coming to UK, with men's basketball coach Rick Pitino coming to UK last June.

"Now we have Pitino and now we have Curry," Hobgood said.

BOND

"He's carrying on the Claiborne tradition of academic quality."

"It's like a new era."

Most students said they think that the Curry era will include a trip to a bowl game within the next few years.

"I think it's an excellent choice," said Brian Underwood, a chemical engineering freshman. "From what I hear, he's a real disciplinarian. He did an excellent job at Alabama. I think we're definitely going to a bowl."

"I think it's awesome. He wants everyone to be well thought of," said Papu Narayanappa, a biology sophomore. "Plus, I think we'll get to a bowl game in two or three years."

"His success at Alabama is why I'm happy he's coming. I have high expectations. I'm looking forward to a winning season," said

COLEMAN

"I don't think we should get down on him if he doesn't get a winning season right away."

Marian Jameson, a first-year law student.

But others said that it is unrealistic to expect too much too soon.

"I think he'll bring a different approach, a different intensity," said Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs James Kuder. However, he added, "I don't think anyone would expect him to take us to a bowl game right away."

"I think at this particular time Bill Curry was an excellent choice for the job," said Eric Coleman, a mechanical engineering sophomore.

"I don't think we should get down on him if he doesn't get a winning season right away."

Several people said they think Curry will build a strong program because of his ability to recruit good players.

GRAHAM

"I think he's probably the best choice UK could make."

"I think he'll bring a different approach, different intensity."

come and play for him because he has a reputation as a good coach."

"I think he's done a very good job at Alabama. He seems like a very personable guy and to have a good rapport with his team," said John Shawcross, an English profes-ring on the Claiborne tradition of academic quality."

Although Curry led his Alabama team to a 10-2 overall record and a Sugar Bowl victory last season, many Alabama fans were upset with him because of his team's loss to rival Auburn. Some UK students said they think Curry will be better accepted in Kentucky and fit in well with the UK program.

"He will be (accepted) because we want him here," said graduate student Thomas Reed. "He's wanted here and needed. They'll treat him right. They'll treat him in ways he never dreamed of being treated."

"I think he'll be accepted here," Kuder said. "He's a proven winner." "Here we don't have that kind of pressure, so I think it will be different," Jameson said.

And the prospects of Curry leading UK to new competitive heights might bring more fans to Commonwealth Stadium next season, some students said.

"I think he'll recruit some good players and make you want to watch," said Scott Bower, an undecided freshman.

"I think definitely next year I'll go to more games," said Alyssa Middleton, a communications sophomore.

UK, Wethington must show search will be truly open

Charles Wethington is a very able administrator who is devoted to the success of UK. However, the decision by the University's Board of Trustees on Dec. 28 to make him interim president was a bad move.

Wethington may not be a noted scholar as former UK President David Roselle was, but his work with the UK community college system illustrates his competence as an administrator.

Wethington has been an official in the community college system for 22 years, the last eight as the chancellor. During the 1980s, community college growth increased almost 100 percent, and the academic quality of the community colleges was considered to be among the nation's best.

But Wethington's ties to Gov. Wallace Wilkinson create too much suspicion. Too many people associate Wethington with Wilkinson and view him as a puppet of the Governor's Mansion.

None of Wethington's actions thus far have indicated that he looks to Frankfort for making decisions, and we hope that while interim president he continues to act in the best interest for the University, not Wilkinson's political aspirations.

One of the arguments advanced for appointing Wethington interim president was that he has strong ties to Frankfort. While Wethington may know the right people in Frankfort to secure more money for the University and higher education than Roselle was able to get, if his appointment causes faculty to leave, who will be left to give the money to? Faculty and student leaders voiced strong opposition to Wethington, and by disregarding those interests, trustees insulted the most important constituents of the University.

The most disturbing action by UK's trustees at their Dec. 28 meeting was allowing the interim president to be a candidate for the presidency. Although the board publicly pledged to conduct an honest and open search for a permanent replacement for Roselle, once again they will have to deal with perception.

It must be difficult for Wethington to preside over a University that he has devoted almost half of his life to and have so many people question his loyalty, therefore the greatest sacrifice Wethington can make for the University is to not run for the presidency.

As Roselle was fond of reminding people while at UK, no one person is more important than the integrity of the University.

- Wethington - His credentials seem good, but something still smells funny.

Batter up Lohman can mold SGA into better or worse organization

The 1990 session of Kentucky's General Assembly may not have much in terms of financial aid for higher education, but for UK Student Government Association President Sean Lohman, the session is rich with political opportunities.

Lohman, only a junior, is the youngest person to lead UK's student government. Although his chief concern right now is getting the state to give higher education more money, a successful lobbying effort would ensure his reelection later this semester.

If Lohman were re-elected president, he would be the first two-term president in more than 10 years.

By January, the pre-executive branch elections usually are in full swing; steering committees are in place and running mates are lined up.

This year, however, the talk about who will be president of UK's student government next year is virtually non-existent. Lohman likely will be unopposed this spring, and the big election may be for SGA vice president and the top senator-at-large spots.

No scientific polls have been conducted on Lohman's popularity; most of his political strength is drawn from the turmoil that surrounded the University and higher education last semester.

Lohman got off to a seemingly bad start last semester by incor-

C.A. Duane

rectly accusing the state's university presidents of covertly pushing for a steep tuition hike, but instead of being criticized for it he was complimented for being so concerned about students.

Many of the programs and activities Lohman implemented last semester went unnoticed by students. Normally was the theme of SGA until UK President David Roselle became a finalist for the presidency of the University of Delaware.

Within a few days after meeting with Roselle, Lohman joined with other student leaders to organize a rally to encourage Roselle to remain at UK.

Although the rally did not achieve its ultimate goal, it gave Lohman plenty of media exposure. In addition to being interviewed by the state's major newspapers, Lohman appeared on all three Lexington television stations.

After the Roselle rally, Lohman's name was very familiar to many UK students and he was identified as the student leader most concerned with student issues.

Following the rally, Lohman should have called a press conference to keep not only the Roselle issue alive, but to establish himself as the student spokesman in Kentucky for higher education.

Lohman has been criticized for blowing with the wind on issues rather than following his heart, but his actions at the Dec. 28 UK Board of Trustees meeting indicate that he is ready to oppose the status quo.

Lohman was one of only five trustees who voted against appointing Wethington interim president, and he also opposed allowing the interim president to become president.

While it did not take a lot to figure out what was the right course of action at that meeting, it took some political courage to do what was right.

Lohman's other opportunity to establish himself as a strong student leader is when the University begins to conduct national search for a new president.

Many feel that Wethington has been railroaded into the interim position, and he likely will not have serious opposition, but Lohman can help give the search what chance it has of being fair by yelling and screaming if Gov. Wallace Wilkinson or his cronies stick their noses in the issue.

Assuming that he is not plagued by any scandals, there are several advantages to having an SGA president serve two terms. While having a student term SGA for two years can lead to stagnation and the establishment of a status quo that is afraid of changing, it also can benefit SGA.

It takes most SGA presidents a few months to get used to their job, and if they do not get things accomplished by the end of the fall semester, they are a lame duck as presidential politics sets in.

By discouraging anyone from running against him, Lohman can carry on with business as usual this semester and not have to concern himself with political loyalties.

Lohman also can hand-pick his successor to ensure that things run smoothly the following year, provided that office politics are kept to a minimum.

More importantly, however, is that Lohman could do something for SGA that it has sorely needed for a long time and emphasize student services.

Too often, SGA has attracted aspiring governors, mayors and legislators who are more concerned with padding their political resumes than they are with students' needs.

By de-emphasizing politics, Lohman can make SGA more attentive to students' needs, which would be closer to what a student government ought to be doing in the first place.

Lohman's supporters spoke of him last spring as the candidate with the most potential to do the best things for student government. This semester Lohman has the chance to prove them (in)correct.

Kernel Checklist

A weekly service of the Viewpoint Page to keep its readers abreast of the hot items in the universe.

✓Right Man, Wrong Job. David Roselle. At a press conference announcing his decision to be president of the University of Delaware, David Roselle told the press corps that the 13-month NCAA probe into the UK men's basketball program prevented him from doing what he came to Lexington to do: run a university. Of course having to deal with Gov. Buba's politics and whims didn't make things any easier for Roselle. Good luck at UD, Dr. Dave. Hope you have found a state that considers education to be important.

✓Newton's Coups. C.M. Newton. In less than one year as UK's athletics director, C.M. Newton has lured two of the biggest athletic names to UK — Rick Pitino and Bill Curry. Newton's reputation as being dedicated to an athletics program with integrity is one of the reasons cited for his ability to attract top caliber coaches. By the way, C.M., the University is looking for a new president.

✓So Much Time, So Little To Do. 1990 General Assembly. It's an even year, so it must be time for another exciting meeting of the General Assembly. Included on the agenda of this year's meeting is higher education, prison reform, health care, road improvements, and restructuring the state's elementary and secondary education system. With only 90 days to make up for the lack of work done in the 1988 session in addition to the number of tasks that need to be tended to this year, perhaps Frankfort will realize that the state would run a bit smoother if lawmakers met once a year.

Master Student Program encourages better study habits

Dear Counselor: Last semester my grades were C's and B's. Even though these grades are "average," I feel I am a better student than my grades show. I am determined to do great this semester in all my classes. Do you have any suggestions on how I can get off to a good start? I'm especially interested in ways to manage my time better and to study more efficiently. What can I do to max-out this semester?

Marty, undecided sophomore.

Dear Marty: You seem determined and motivated to succeed this semester. DON'T LOSE THIS ATTITUDE — it is a key component of your success.

There are basically three reasons why students fail to achieve academic success.

✓Not forming effective and consistent study habits.

✓Not utilizing efficient learning skills and strategies.

✓Not maintaining a proper attitude toward their own education.

In order to maximize your chances for academic success, you should concentrate on improving three major areas:

STUDY HABITS

The first area to examine is that of developing consistent study habits. Sometimes forming new habits (or breaking old ones) is not an easy process. We usually go through an "adjustment" period (generally two to three weeks) to adapt to the change in behavior.

Be aware of negative self-talk during this period (e.g., "I've never done well in this subject," "I'm not good with math," and "It won't work.").

Also, be careful about judging the effectiveness of the new habit until it becomes more natural and comfortable. It has been discovered that students who develop consistent study habits do better in school. Let's look at a few new habits that might aid you in achieving your goals.

✓Formulate and write down your specific (and realistic) academic goals for the semester. Review these goals daily and ask yourself the question: What can I do today to help me achieve these goals?

✓Plan your use of time for the semester. Use a calendar to record important dates such as tests and reports. Utilize a weekly and daily schedule to plan specific study times and reviews. The Counseling and Testing Center has blank weekly schedules — stop by and pick some up.

✓Attend all classes, sit near the front of the classroom, and participate in class discussions.

✓Schedule your study time in shorter, frequent, regular sessions distributed over a longer period of time. Runners don't "cram" in training the day before the race; don't cram your mind the day before the test.

✓Use an effective personal reward system to motivate yourself to achieve goals. Small rewards such as taking a walk, seeing a movie, or even eating some ice cream (only one dip!) can make study sessions more enjoyable. Be careful — don't use something you were already planning to do and be sure to complete the task before rewarding yourself. Be honest!

STUDY SKILLS

developing specific study skills — in areas such as reading, note taking, test taking and memory skills.

Most of us throughout our educational careers are told many times to "study" and to "study harder," but are never told specifically how! The purpose of the Learning Skills Program in the Counseling and Testing Center is to help students learn how to study smarter.

The program offers individual sessions with a learning skills counselor or you may want to find out more about The Master Student Program. Stop and think for a minute — you can improve your memory, read more efficiently, take better notes, increase concentration and learn more effective test taking strategies by enrolling in The Master Student Program.

STUDY ATTITUDE
A final component to consider is cultivating the proper study attitude. Your motivation and attitude

are directly related to your success. How do you view school? What drives you to pursue this academic experience? Where do you see yourself five years from now? Here are a few suggestions to consider regarding your attitude.

✓Formulate your goals and review them daily. This is the "fire" that can get you through the rough times.

✓Learn to enjoy your studying. If you don't, you are making it harder on yourself!

✓Set internal standards rather than compete with others.

✓Use positive self-talk each day.

Focus on the rewards of success rather than the penalties of failure.

Marty, you have taken the first step toward making the most of this semester — you want to be successful. Now it is up to you to develop effective study habits, skills and attitudes to help achieve your academic goals. Start now to use these strategies and you will be amazed by the results.

Students who wish to address these issues can come by the UK Counseling and Testing Center, 301 Frazee Hall or call, 257-8701. If you have a problem you would like to address, write: "Counselor's Corner"; 301 Frazee Hall; UK; Lexington, Ky. 40506-0031.
