PREFACE

The discovery of new informational materials about Kentucky's past and present is endless. Therefore, the selection of the most appropriate materials for school use is an unending task. We have attempted in this publication to provide the school librarian or teacher with a bibliography of Kentucky source material including both books and non-book materials.

In one sense this bulletin is a creation by the school librarians of Kentucky. Their many requests for an updated reprint of this Kentucky bibliography influenced the publication of this bulletin. Hopefully, both librarian and teacher will find the information contained in Inside Kentucky valuable and thus make it a worthwhile publication.

We also felt that a reprint of this bibliography would serve as a contribution by the department to Kentucky's Bicentennial Celebration.

Lyman V. Ginger
Superintendent of Public Instruction

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This bulletin is the result of the cooperation and special talents of many people. The agencies and organizations who made major contributions are listed on the following page.

The following staff members of the Department of Education were responsible for compiling the bibliography: Donna Swanson, Educational Counselor Examiner Supervisor; Rebecca Earls, School Library Consultant; Anne Hamilton, Director of the Kentucky Department of Education Materials Center. Gail Watkins, Artist, Kentucky Department of Education, was responsible for the graphic art work. In addition to departmental personnel the following Kentucky librarians have served as consultants: Lynn Bryden, Ann Franklin, Alma Hill, Donna Foley, and Virginia Pearson.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BOOKS AND NON-BOOK MATERIALS

This bibliography of Kentucky Books and Non-Book materials is a selective list which emphasizes books and non-book materials useful in school libraries. It has been compiled for those who are interested in a further study of Kentucky and as a buying guide for librarians and teachers.

BOOKS IN PRINT

NOTE: Full bibliographic information plus annotations are given to assist in ordering and also in shelf-listing. The suggested classification number is given preceding the information about each book. The symbols at the extreme right of the page indicate the grade level for which the material is particularly useful. P. indicates primary, El, indicates elementary, Jr. junior high, and Sr. senior high school. The following resource books were used in selecting books to be included in the bibliography: Best Books for Children, The Booklist and Subscription Books bulletin, Children's catalog, Junior High School Library Catalog, Library Journal, Standard Catalog for High School Libraries, and Inside Kentucky (Kentucky Department of Education Bulletin, 1967). Many librarians throughout the State suggested books to be included. In addition many books on publishers' lists were examined by the compilers and either included or rejected.

Our Bicentennial Celebration

The last 200 years have seen Kentucky evolve from a raw wilderness into a green, growing land crowning the Southern states with its magnificent natural beauty, a wealth of historic sites, the finest system of state and national parks in America, progressive industry, broad acres of farmland, an enviable highway system, and a reservoir of unlimited hospitality.

In 1974, Kentuckians celebrate their good fortune, and invite both American and foreign travelers to share in a dual event celebrating the 200th anniversary of the founding of Fort Harrod at Harrodsburg, the first permanent settlement in Kentucky, and the 100th running of the Kentucky Derby in Louisville, on the first Saturday in May. There'll be buckskins and brocades, festivals and fanfare, celebrations and parades, arts and crafts, good Kentucky bourbon and Kentucky foods, and all the other ingredients that help a happy people, inviting their friends to share their good fortune in being Kentuckians. Come join in!

FOREWORD
1973

From time to time, the advisability, perhaps necessity, of revising bibliographical works in Kentucky history becomes apparent. Discoveries are made that some appropriate books have been omitted. Too, each year some additional worthy contributions are published. Keeping bibliographical volumes up-to-date is none too easy, and certainly not inexpensive, but it is important. The Kentucky Department of Libraries in presenting the present slender volume is offering a revision and a bringing up-to-date of what are deemed important works in Kentucky history, involving state, county and local history, as well as certain significant contributions in biography, events and commentaries.

The Kentucky Department of Libraries in preparing the book has not been unmindful of the needs of students and teachers, nor of the rapidly increasing band of readers who like to delve into, enjoy and grow in the knowledge of Kentucky's fascinating past.

The most remarkable growth in interest in Kentucky history is occurring in young Kentuckians, particularly in the junior and senior high school ages. Many factors are responsible, probably none as significant as the work of the Kentucky Young Historians, a bright, energetic, vital organization, a department under the Kentucky Historical Society. Too, the increased interest in state shrines, historic sites and houses, availability of visual materials, historical relics, visitation, field trips, more books, easier access to libraries, more knowledgeable teachers -- all these have contributed.

It is believed that, for its purposes, the present bibliography is fairly complete, even in the listing of old, rare and scarce, as well as very recent books. With the wide distribution it will have, its service to Kentuckians, especially students and teachers, even researchers and writers, will be incalculable. It should also prove quite valuable for general reference. However, the work was not intended to be exhaustive and monumental, as is the great work, A Bibliography of Kentucky History (1949) by Dr. J. Winston Coleman.

1966

Primary source material: original letters, documents, diaries, interviews and personal experiences are still and will always be, the best sources for historic research and writing but many students have little or no such materials available in their area. Consequently, they will look to such secondary sources as newspapers, magazines, pamphlets and most particularly, books. Used wisely, they can be an excellent source material but used with complete abandon they can cause trouble for the younger writer. Many do not understand plagiarism and copy material verbatim or deviate from the original so slightly that it is akin to literary theft. Too, some early history books contain inaccurate or obsolete information, having been written for the purpose of flattering individuals and/or groups. But with a little time and thought these pitfalls can be avoided, even by a less than average student, and using several books as sources, he can do a commendable job with historic writing.

Lewis C. Woods, Jr.
Kentucky Historical Society

HOW TO USE THIS BIBLIOGRAPHY

For want of a better title, this is a selective bibliography of "secondary sources for secondary schools." It, then, is apparent that this is simply a basic list of books on Kentucky history in the Kentucky Historical Society library and the Department of Libraries for high school students. It does not attempt to be a scholarly, even exhaustive, or certainly not, definitive list.

Definition

What is Kentucky history?

As for the similar question, "What is Kentucky literature?," there is a similar answer. We believe Kentucky history is about Kentucky, written by a Kentuckian, written in Kentucky, or published in Kentucky.

However, within the limits of this list, we must define it further. The definition must be narrowed to include only books about Kentucky history in general and city and county histories.

Why local history?

Each of these three levels of history -- state, county, and local -- has its significance within the larger framework of the history of the United States during these Bicentennial years of the country and the Commonwealth, western civilization, and ultimately, the world itself.

"Good local history," writes Donald Dean Parker in the Foreword to Local History; How to Gather it, Write it, and Publish it, "is one of the most effective contributions that can be made to social science . . . These problems and processes generally emerge in localities, in communities, and their nature, operation, and influence can be studied most effectively only there."

Scope

Also, the scope of this is limited to selected secondary (printed) sources; no primary (manuscript, originals of records, etc.) sources are given.

Arrangement

The list has been arranged in the following order:

- Method of local history
- Kentucky histories (Alphabetically by author)
 - General Kentucky histories
 - Bibliographical references
 - Geographical references
- County histories (Alphabetically by county)
- City histories (Alphabetically by city)
- Journals
- Acknowledgement of sources for this list

Availability

The number immediately to the left of the entry is its call number in the Kentuckiana Collection at the Department of Libraries, where it is available for use in the library or only on interlibrary loan, for use in the library only, for use one (1) week only, and each item insured for one hundred dollars ($100.00).

The Kentucky Historical Society library keeps a permanent non-circulating collection.

Limitations

This list does not attempt to include the following kinds of Kentucky history though the general histories often do contain references to, and, occasionally have rather complete coverage of many of these topics:

- Other general or specialized bibliographies
- Architecture
- Biography, autobiography, or genealogy
- Biology, botany, or zoology
- Constitutional, political, or administrative histories
- State histories or drama
- Educational or institutional histories
- Encyclopedia articles
- Festivals (i.e., Kentucky Derby Festival), fairs, or commemorations
- Financial, business, or industrial histories
- Folk music, folklore, or anecdotes
- Geography, description and travel, or maps
- Geology, paleontology, or archaeology
- Historical houses, shrines, or landmarks
- Kentucky imprints, publishers, or printers
- Legal, legislative, or judicial history
- Literary history -- Fiction, oratory, poetry, etc.
- Manuscript collections
- Medical history
- Military history
- Newspapers, magazines, or journals
- "Period" pieces (Particular eras, battle, court cases, obituaries, etc.)
- Proceedings of conventions, conferences, or committees
- Rare books
- Records (primary sources) or reprints of records (secondary sources)
- Social histories

What's left?

The very limitations of this bibliography, though, should suggest many tasks for today's students, as tomorrow's scholars, to take -- since the limitations of this list leave so many areas, not included, to be explored -- exhaustive studies to be made; so many sources, to be documented -- definitive studies to be made.

So, to you, today's students, we present this list of books about Kentucky's past, along with the challenge of so much history still to be written -- by you -- for her future.

The Bluegrass State

"Kentucky gets its name from an old Indian word whose exact meaning is not known. The meadow land and the land of tomorrow are two of the many meanings that have been given to the word. The Indians and the pioneers called Kentucky Country the Hunting Ground because of the abundance of game. Later, the region was called the Dark and Bloody Ground because of the fierce battles between the whites and Indians. But Kentucky is most often called the Bluegrass State because the grass that covers the rolling land of Central Kentucky bears tiny blossoms of a dusty blue color."

NON-BOOK MATERIALS

The attached list of audiovisual materials on Kentucky includes a number of items from many places -- from tools and aids, such as the NICEM series, LEARNING DIRECTORY and ELEMENTARY SCHOOL LIBRARY COLLECTION and RESOURCES FOR LEARNING to information from Kentucky Educational Television, Western Kentucky University, Indiana University, University of Kentucky, Kentucky State Government and Materials Center Services Office. The list is neither evaluative nor complete. Annotations are given those materials which have been reviewed.

Not all information is given--for instance, some items lack the price, others lack the level or number of minutes. We did not have or could not find all the necessary bibliographic information to make this list "complete" for ordering. You are urged to send for catalogs listing the Kentucky items for the following reasons:

1. Prices listed may not be current.
2. Both record and cassette may be available on some items.
3. Film loops may be regular "8's" or super "8's."
4. Some items may be identical yet available from a number of sources (the transparencies, for instance), and
5. The possibility of an item being out-of-print is ever with us.

Ann Franklin, Library Consultant, Jefferson County Public Schools, supplied a copy of her publications Audiovisual Materials on Kentucky which served as a basis for the listing of Audiovisual materials.

The primary characters are black, and they voice their opinions about drug use, drug counseling and racism. Some of their opinions are controversial and possibly insulting. Herein lies one of the values of Got My Own. It encourages viewers to examine their own opinions about these statements. Another strong point in the film is the series of glimpses into the "junkie mentality."

The film is useful for any viewing audience which desires to understand a little more clearly the phenomenon of drug addiction. It is also a useful film for people working in drug counseling and therapeutics.

Olde English, 30 min., Color. Is about an urban New England high school and its influence upon students, teachers and administrators. Each group has uniquely different perspectives about common experiences and situations. Each group has developed a different set of defenses, values and strategies.

You've Got the Same Thing, Aintcha? 30 min., Color. Focuses on an urban school in which students and teachers alike experience the frustrations of teaching and learning in an environment marked by change. School doors are locked during the day. Guards patrol the halls. The school's student population has changed and grown larger. Money for educational needs is scarce, sometimes non-existent. Teacher and student value systems are not necessarily the same. Cultural differences abound. And, within this context, the school attempts to "educate" students.

DRUG FILMS (primarily for educators)

This series can best be used as a catalyst. It consists of films around which personal and collective problems can be discussed and solutions suggested. The series was designed primarily for teachers and school administrators, but can also be used as a community education and discussion program with parents, young people, and teachers.

One to Grow On, 5 min., Color. Prologue to the series.

A Pretty Good Class for a Monday, 26 min., Color. This is a documentary study of three uniquely different high school students in a singly history class. Each participates in the class with his own special set of motives, needs, and values. This film is a good discussion tool for exploring a variety of behaviors in the classroom.

Act II - Linsey, 17 min., Color. A student's home and classroom environment is the focus of this film. Family pressures, peer pressures, unmet emotional needs, and teaching style all play important roles in influencing Lindsey's behavior.

A Teacher in Reflection, 10½ min., Color. This is a "methodology" film about a grade school teacher who used class meetings to help work through students' personal and classroom problems. In this documentary, the teacher talks about her teaching style, and her successes and failures in accomplishing the classroom environment she seeks.

Individuals, 17½ min., Color. This is another "methodology" film in which a teacher allows some of her students to plan their own day's activities. Both she and her students talk about the classroom system and the goals they have set for themselves and their class.

Learning Strategies, 11 min., Color. This is a documentary film about a school in Cleveland, Ohio which helps students guide their own development. Human values and human relations are emphasized in the curriculum along with student tutorials, historical dramatizations, and student-principal discussions about the curriculum.

He Comes From Another Room, 30 min., Color. Excerpts of a continuing program provide a source of information about integrating children with special needs into a regular school setting. This film demonstrates a few techniques, raises issues for discussion and hopefully will inspire teachers and school administrators to consider alternate techniques as they strive to meet the needs of all young children.

State Song

'My Old Kentucky Home'

Stephen Foster

*The sun shines bright in My Old Kentucky Home,
'Tis summer the darkies are gay;
The corn-top's ripe and the meadow's in the bloom
While the birds make music all the day.*

*The young folks roll on the little cabin floor,
All merry, all happy and bright;
By 'n' by hard times comes a knocking at the door
Then My Old Kentucky Home, good night!*

Chorus

*Weep no more my lady
Oh weep no more today;
We will sing one song
For My Old Kentucky Home
For My Old Kentucky Home, far away.*

Five Kinds of Resources

"Man's resources today fall into five large classes. His first resource is himself. Second, he has the materials he finds in nature. These are the two resources with which the primitive man worked. Third, man today has developed the knowledge and skill with which he uses nature's materials. Fourth, he has capital as a resource. With capital wealth he carries on business and gets some of the things he needs. Fifth, man has all the institutions and organizations he has made. With these institutional resources people help each other in living and making a living."

Vance, Rupert B., Ivey, John E., Jr., and Bond, Marjorie N., Exploring The South, pp. 20-21, the University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1949.
