PREFACE

In the summer of 1938 the American Imprints Inventory of the Historical Records Survey undertook a survey of the extant copies of early American imprints located in libraries and other depositories throughout the nation. Since that time, some 2,000,000 volumes have been examined in Tennessee. Of this number, roughly 77,000 were found to have been printed in the United States prior to 1877, the date limit set for the survey. The number of Tennessee imprints among this total is approximately 1,200 different titles dating from 1793, three years before Tennessee's admission into the Union.

The purpose of the American Imprints Inventory is to make a complete record of printing and publishing in the continental United States since the establishment of the first American press in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in the year 1639. The Tennessee Survey is also engaged in the preparation of inventories of county and municipal archives, church archives, manuscript depositories and collections, and in making transcripts of selected early county court minutes.

The established practice for making available extant printed material has been to publish lists of the imprints by states. At the present time, 15 of these preliminary check lists have been published; this list will become number 16 in the national series. The general pattern of check lists has consisted of listing all issues of the press of a particular state in chronological order and alphabetically thereunder. The contents usually cover the holdings of libraries scattered throughout the nation. The List of Tennessee Imprints, 1793-1840, in Tennessee Libraries deviates from this pattern in that it is limited to holdings found only in Tennessee. Like the other check lists, however, it is preliminary and will be supplemented by additional lists to be issued from time to time. Work has been initiated on a check list to cover Tennessee imprints, irrespective of location, for the succeeding decade, 1841-1850. It will be similar in style and scope to the other publications of the national series.

This List consists of 469 entries representing the holdings of 34 separately maintained libraries and 12 private collections. Entries are listed in alphabetical order under years, beginning with 1793, the year in which the first printer to the Territory of the United States South of the River Ohio, George Roulstone, published the Acts and Ordinances of the Governor and Judges of the Territory. Each entry is a full description of the title page of a Tennessee imprint, nothing being omitted except quotations. Books for which no title pages were found are so designated by brief notations. Other pertinent information on certain titles is also included following the pagination and measurement of the books. After every title paragraph a symbol for the collection in which a copy may be found is entered. A list of symbols designating the title of the library or owner of the imprints is included in this volume. A general subject index and an index to printers follow the listing; references in both are to entry number only.

Preface

The supervision of the field work which resulted in the compilation of the material contained in this List, and the preparation of this book for publication were under the supervision of George F. Bentley, Imprints Editor of the Tennessee Survey, assisted by Edna Evans, Sammie B. Spence, Madie Evers, Ona Mae Chilcutt, and Lucile Hosale. This book was prepared in accordance with instructions of the Washington Office of the Historical Records Survey Program, and was edited by Douglas C. McMurtrie, National Consultant of the American Imprints Inventory. Much of the field work in Tennessee was done while T. Marshall Jones, now State Supervisor of Research and Records Programs, served as State Supervisor of the Survey and while Dan Lacy, now Assistant to the National Director, served as Regional Supervisor.

It is with pleasure that the Tennessee Survey acknowledges the assistance of all the librarians and custodians represented in this publication. Particularly helpful were Mrs. John Trotwood Moore and Miss Gladys Wiley of the Tennessee State Library; Miss Mary E. Baker of the University of Tennessee Library, and Miss Lucile Deaderick, former head of the McClung Collection, Lawson McGhee Library.

INTRODUCTION

The list herewith presented of Tennessee imprints from the beginnings of the press through the year 1840, located in Tennessee collections, represents a departure from the usual form of the check lists of the American Imprints Inventory. The present list was prepared by the State Office of the Tennessee Historical Records Survey with the aim of informing scholars and librarians in Tennessee regarding local historical source materials in accessible locations.

When the copy was examined by the National Office, however, it became apparent that the list would be useful in fields far beyond the borders of Tennessee. It was therefore decided to issue it as one of the regular series of imprints check lists.

A list of Tennessee imprints through 1840 in all known locations is now in process of editing and will be issued when completed. Later it is hoped to issue another list recording and locating Tennessee imprints of the period 1841-1876.

Printing in Tennessee began on November 5, 1791, with the publication of the first issue of the Knoxville Gazette by George Roulstone and Robert Ferguson. These printers undertook this new venture at the request of William Blount, the recently appointed governor of the Territory of the United States of America South of the River Ohio. This territory was created by an act of Congress in 1790 to organize the western lands ceded to the Federal Government in 1789 by the State of North Carolina.

George Roulstone was born in Boston on October 8, 1767, and made his first venture as a master printer in Salem, Massachusetts, before he had reached his twentieth birthday. By August 1789, he had come to Fayetteville, North Carolina, and it was from that point that he removed to Tennessee. Robert Ferguson, Roulstone's partner in Tennessee, had also been printing in North Carolina, at Hillsboro.

On the date of the first issue of the Knoxville Gazette, the new territorial capital for which the newspaper was named existed only in the plans of Governor Blount. The paper was actually issued at first from the little settlement at Hawkins Court House, now known as Rogersville. Not until October 1792, a year after its establishment, did the paper bear a Knoxville date line.

Ferguson retired from the partnership with Roulstone in May 1793, and thereafter the name of Roulstone appeared alone as "Printer to the Territory." In 1796 the State of Tennessee was admitted to the Union, and Roulstone became "Printer to the State."

In June 1798, Roulstone discontinued the Knoxville Gazette and began a new paper, the Knoxville Register, in partnership with

Introduction

John R. Parrington. Nothing is known of this paper beyond the issue of October 30, 1798, but in the summer of 1799 Parrington was at Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, and Roulstone had made a new start with the old title of Knoxville Gazette. A rival paper seems to have begun at Knoxville in June or July 1799, the Impartial Observer, published by George Wilson. A merger was effected in a paper entitled both Impartial Observer and The Knoxville Gazette, published by the firm of Roulstone & Wilson.

Roulstone and Wilson dissolved their partnership in November 1800. Wilson removed to Jonesboro and eventually became the first printer in that town. Roulstone again restored the old title of Knoxville Gazette and picked up its serial numbering from the date of its reappearance in 1799. He continued as publisher of the paper and as printer to the state until his death in 1804.

George Roulstone was succeeded in his business by his widow, Elizabeth Gilliam Roulstone, who had the printing done for her by John B. Hood, a newcomer to Knoxville, who was later to become the first identified printer in Alabama. Mrs. Roulstone later married William Moore, who was Tennessee's public printer in 1808. In the summer of 1808 the Knoxville Gazette came to an end when the Moores removed, with the printing plant, to Carthage.

The first press at Nashville was that of John McLaughlin, who established the Rights of Man, or, Nashville Intelligencer there on February 11, 1799. This paper lasted only a few months and was followed, in January 1800, by the Tennessee Gazette, founded by Benjamin J. Bradford, a son of John Bradford, the pioneer printer of Kentucky. Bradford discontinued the Tennessee Gazette about 1806 and in January 1808, began the Clarion at Nashville, but turned it over to others in the same year. In 1812 Benjamin Bradford began the Nashville Examiner, which was continued after his death, in February 1814, by Rebecca Bradford, his widow.

Further appearances of the press in early Tennessee were at Jonesboro, with George Wilson's Newspaper and Washington Advertiser, from 1801 to 1804; at Carthage, with William Moore's Carthage Gazette; established in 1808 with the materials of George Roulstone's old Knoxville Gazette; at Clarksville in July 1810, with the United States Herald, published by Theoderick F. Bradford; at Columbia, in November 1810, with the Western Chronicle, by Thomas Eastin and James Walker.

An idea of the wider spread of the Tennessee press may be obtained from the imprints on the titles recorded in the following check list. This list contains titles through the year 1840. It is perhaps in order to note here that a bibliography of Tennessee imprints through the year 1830 was compiled by the undersigned and published in 1933 in a volume entitled Early Printing in Tennessee. The present list thus adds ten years to the period of publishing activity which that earlier volume undertook to record.
