enough to send me, as well as for the Revise of Element.

I should be much obliged if you could let me know, or give me some general idea, how far in your article on Origin you propose enter on an investigation of his Hebrew work. If you have by you a copy of the original printed programme of the Dictionary, you will see that it includes an article on Hebrew, Study of by the Fathers; and as this will be a laborious subject I have already been in communication with a contributor to him respecting it. The Revd C. J.

Elliott, one of the contributors to the Speaker's Commentary, is disposed to undertake it.
But he is anxious, I am sure,
to avoid anticipating your work; and I am most desirous that you should deal

with Origen at your ab-
-lutta discretion. If you would prefer it, I would get Mr Keith simply to make a crisp Reference to your article in the case of Origen.

Please say,

at your leisure, to let me know what you would like, & I will take care your wishes are attended to.

Believe me
very truly yours
Henry Wace
The Revd Canon Westcott.

P.S. In the same printed programme, there stands also a Cross Reference to Origen
from Hexapla & Tetrapla.

My Dear Hunt

It always gives me great pleasure to hear from an old friend particularly from one I have always felt so much regard for as yourself. Your picture as you describe it is exactly similar to mine, I have an engraving of it with a description, it is a view on the Thames & the house is called Pope's Villa and it states that Wilson must have been very partial to this View as he so often repeated it.

Dear Professor Westcott,

I venture to invade you, rather vaguely, with two questions. If your view of them is generally favourable, I will write more fully.

1. My hope is to go to the Triennial Church Convention in America, which is to be held at Baltimore in October: My place is definitely taken in the "City of Paris" which sails 21st Sept. I hear a rumour that you are going also. May I ask if this is true? It would be a great pleasure and advantage to me. If it is so.

2. Feeling almost sure that the question of Cathedrals will soon come under discussion in Parliament, & knowing that many of our Legislators are profoundly ignorant on the subject, I have arranged with Macmillan for the Editing of a volume of short Essays on Cathedrals. Can you enable me to include therein Hope that you will write on a "Cathedral of the New Foundation" or indeed on any branch of the subject you please? Many thanks

My dear Westcott,

The new address makes me – and I hope it will make you – feel how much I want your prayers & your counsels.

You will be delighted to hear that Lightfoot has offered me £50 a year for three years, and another friend, whose name may not be mentioned, but whom of course you know, £250 for three years, to use him in helping candidates for Orders.

It was in answer to my expressing regret that people I visited give some daily time to such men
as were likely to wish to come here but I could not undertake to do that was wanted for them; they want much Latin & Greek."

I repeated this as near before

Now I want a coherent sentence.
Am Bp wish make him a Prebendary like that.

2. Do you think Drake of St. John's Wh A

The Bp wd feel that his coming wd clear away
a certain difficulty as to marking his Relations, because he has worked for 2 years & more in the Diocese.

There is some hope that we might get him soon. But this is not certain.

I hope you are all well. Your Last

My very dear Friend,

We are all more than delighted that you have elcted to come to Polperro. By the way, the full address there is:- The Watchers, Polperro, Cornwall. Phone. Polperro 22. The phone was not cut off but one has to ring ~~Oper~~ 0.1, to get the exchange, so that is all right.

We shall go down there certain either the 13th or 14th with various furniture and silver etc. in a van and the place will be really comfortable for you. I only hope your wife will enjoy Polperro and think it as lovely as you do and also your friends.

Now listen, you must come down for at least one long weekend with your wife, bless her, while we are there which will be up to the end of July. I really think Polperro will give you more years of happiness. It has certainly lengthened my life, for I was desperately ill five years ago and peace and happiness of it effected a cure which I am sure no doctor could and I truly believe the 'Pirates' will give you the glad hand I have always had.

With regard to that lovely Dresden group which was on the mantelpiece, I have had this carefully packed. It is, of course, Dresden and the price I told you is a really silly one. Do you remember that there were two figures that stood on either side of this? They are also Dresden of the same period. In fact, all three of them have lived together for a good many years. They came originally a long time ago, from the collection of that amazing man, J. Pierpont Morgan and I bought them when his collection was sold over here at Christie's. All that was a longtime ago, so you see, they come from a really famous collection. As I told you, I will take £50 for the group and if you would like to have the two figures to go with the group you can have these for £25 the pair making £75 for the three pieces. I think it would be a pity, as I am sure you do, for the sake of a few pennies. With the tea set and the salver, the colossal total is £425. Poor Arthur, my heart bleeds for you. How will you survive this terrible extravagance? Well, at least they are all 'there' and you do not pay any tax on them. They are tangible and can't run away.

Now this is more important than anything else. We do want your wife and yourself to come to Polperro while we are there, for at least a long weekend. Doubtless you will come out in the boat with me and be aroused from deep slumber on the bosom of the sea by the tolling of the church bells. In fact on a really calm day there is no reason why your wife shouldn't come.

We all join in sending you our most affectionate thoughts. Bless you all always,

My dear Arthur,

I have just written to you a letter and now I have yours. I shall really enjoy those cigars when they arrive BUT I DEFINITELY REFUSE TO PAY 7d. FOR AN EGG.

It is awfully nice of you to be sending the bag and the case. We do appreciate this. By the way, Mr. Pierce rung me up last night and said for goodness sake let him know about accommodation for Cambridge, his wife and two children as it is absolutely impossible to find anywhere unless he knows right away.

Do you know, I am missing Polperro terribly and shall be thankful when I get back. We are going on Monday at 12 o'clock with a van load of stuff, i.e. the whole of our silver and our choicest pieces.

By a very strange coincidence Mr. William Mordy, the shipping man, came down yesterday and is staying with us and the first thing he said was "Where are those Dresden figures from the mantelpiece?" (He knows everything here well.) I told him "Gone" and showed him the boxes they were packed in. So he promptly bought that small Dresden china three light candlestick, (You will remember it, it was in the hall on the little table.) and some other pieces.

We will have the pictures removed from the walls and all ready for the van you are sending and also Billy Harper's carpet and his two silver meat dishes. They are in a brown paper parcel. I am dropping him a line to tell him.

Mr. Pierce of Polperro has your plate quite safely up at his place so that is all right.

I don't think there is anything else except you and your wife must come down to Polperro while we are there and see the place. It will be perfectly furnished for you with nice easy chairs so that you can enjoy your slumbers.

I enclose the little signed slip you sent to me. I do hope that is what you want.

We all send our most affectionate thoughts to your wife, yourself and the Hillman tribe and don't forget, once more, we want to see you and your wife at Polperro.

Of course I do not hold you responsible for any damage beyond your control and I shall be so happy for you to have them until such time as I can find a place or home for them.

Don't forget you and your wife must come down to Cornwall to see us. You love it down there but how do you know that your wife will unless she can see it first.

I think the great fight was lousy. Personally I imagine hearing it on the radio was much more interesting than seeing it.

My Lord,

I am really indebted for the letters which you have been good enough to send: they will be helpful in throwing light upon my father's ways of work and habits of thought. Allow me to thank you also for your very kind letter. As you know, my father was really strengthened and sustained by your sympathy, - especially during those later years in which so many ties were broken one after another. It was for him a period of great loneliness; and after so many years spent in the battle tide of life, he felt the isolation keenly. Once than ever your word of cheer helped him in hours of despondency; and the very last time that I saw him, he spoke particularly of a letter which you wrote to him early in the autumn of last year, at a time when his work, as it seemed to him, had been unfruitful and his life a failure. Your word helped to bring back the light again, and he was profoundly grateful; even in those last days its impression still remained.

I am sending by this post a copy of a volume which has been published this week: it is incomplete, but appears to me to contain some of his most characteristic thought.

You are good enough to ask about my own work. For several years past the demands of the college and of the university, — especially on the Town Council and on the management of the Press, — have left little time or strength for other things. I had hoped before to plan a book on Christianity and can my spare hours to it in the early part of the year; but now my father's death, and the responsibilities which it has brought, defer all such plans for a long time to come.

Believe me to remain, faithfully yours,

Rev Sir,

Accept my thanks for the favor you have done
me in presenting to me a copy of your History of the N. F. Canon. It is a subject, the continual agitation of which cannot

but strengthen our position
as members of the Church

been able to look into it enough, to venture on any criticism; but, if I may judge from the matter

which I have read, it promises to be a valuable addition to the Divinity

My dear Mr. Keble.

The writer of this note is one Sara wia born at Vanua Lava, but living indifferently there or at Mota. His half brother Baratu signs his name, because I enclose their last answer to some questions about Baptism. Don't take these answers as a specimen; they are not so fair as some others: & they can answer viva voce (when the question of course helps them) better than they can express their minds on paper.

But your heart will I know be filled with thankfulness when you read such words. My eyes are moist as I write of them. Sara a young man of perhaps 21 & his brother (say) 16, who a very few years ago had never seen a white man, nor heard of the true God,

He seems to have enjoyed a wide reputation as a successful controversialist against Rome. In these days, when "conversations" at Malines proceed with primatial approbation, it is difficult to realize how absorbed our Fathers were in the Conflict against all that Malines stands for.

My dear Lord

I am still of the same mind as when I saw you. But the outburst here has been so tremendous that I have felt bound to promise my people to "reconsider" the question. I entirely accept your view that unless I find my former judgment to be mistaken touching essentials, I ought not to change my decision. To absolutely refuse to think about it again would, I feel, be a slight on my people here.

What I propose to do is this. On Monday I shall go up & see Canon Body, who knows this Parish well, I shall also consult

S. MARY'S VICARAGE, ROCHDALE.

Dr Peile, on whose wise judgment I greatly rely. The fact of my doing this would tend to reassure my good people here, that I had taken every counsel. But of course the ultimate verdict must rest with myself; & I do not think it likely that I shall feel called on to change it.

I am sorry & ashamed that you should have so much worry on this. Do people often make such a fuss about losing their shepherd? I remember something of the sort in St Chrysostom's life, but then I am not St Chrysostom & St Mary's Rochdale is not the see of Antioch!

There is one thing more I have to ask. If I come to St Thomas (which I shall do, unless some fresh light comes to me) is it a matter of importance how long the interregnum will be? If I could stay here through the greater part of the summer, it would give the people a better chance of settling down after all this storm & stress, & I should be able to put a good many things in better order — notably the financial condition of the Day School which might be in danger if my successor were not a strong man. The School is one of the few things about which I do feel uneasy when I look to the future of the work here.

But of course I do not want St. Thomas to be reduced to chaos by an over-long interregnum.

Certainly the strong expressions of trust & affection & loving kindness from the people here have fairly taken my breath away. It has been very touching & exceedingly trying. It humbles one; if they knew all about one's true character they would speak differently.

It was very good of you & Miss Westcott to give me seven such a kind reception.

Believe me, Dear Lord,

Your affectionate Son

J. A. Kempthorne.

I believed, carried it

that that the note was not among my papers, and I had consequently to wait until my return here before I could reply. Why, sir, she ask, did I not at once send my answer & the simple question put in your note? Well, frankly, because although I am perfectly well disposed & spirit in the advancement of the objects of the Lincoln Traffic Committee, I had as I still have, a certain difficulty in bringing myself to believe that I can be, personally, of any real use as a committee man; and if I am right in thinking so, then my appearance in the ranks, or rather among the leaders, would have a something unreal about it, an apparent pretension & a place in the front, from which the older I grow the more I feel disposed to shrink. On the other part, I frankly admit that there is more

more or less of mauvaise

my unwillingness to

I therefore place myself in your hands. I cannot help adding that you
all seem to regard me

My dear Mr Westcott/

I ought to apologize for troubling you with this letter, but my only apology is that a man who writes such good books as yourself makes himself to a certain extent public property -

I write then to ask you a question touching pp 47-48 of your little book "The Bible in the Church" - I observe there that in speaking of those remarkable passages Eph 6. 14

and I Cor II. 9, you make no reference to the statement of Dr J M Neale (see "Essays in Liturgiology" p 412 & 3) that these and other quotations in St Paul are from primitive liturgies - The statement is so curious, and if correct so important, that I venture to remind you in asking you whether you have looked into the subject, and whether you deem it due to have concluded against Neale's view?

I shall write on this subject with much obligation -

My dear Lord Bishop.

I write a line to answer the one question of your letter of the 6th. The train reaching Cambridge at 2.20 will bring you here in plenty of time for the meeting. A fly shall meet you at the Station and bring you here and after some lunch take you to the Guildhall at 3 o'clock.

Let me thank you much for your kind words as to the Hulsean Lectureship. The work was suggested to me
in such a way that I did not like to hold back.

May I ask your acceptance of a copy of some articles on St. Peter written for Hastings' Dictionary. I have received this morning a few separate copies. Forgive my adding that I send them on condition that you do not acknowledge them.
One point interested me in working out the later life of St. Peter viz. the suggestion that St. Paul summoned St Peter to Rome
- a practically corollary of the Epistle to the Ephesians - and that Peter and Luke met St Paul's desire, by his messenger (pp. 778a, 791a). After much anxious thought I felt obliged to give up the Petrine authorship of 2 Peter – I hope that it will not seem to you wrongly.

Believe me, my Lord Bishop,

Y. most dutifully,

J. B. Lightfoot.

Dear Sir I notice that in the new edition of your work on the N. T. Canon for more than once take care not to commit yourself to the common opinion and ascribe the 'Refutation of all heresies' to Hippolytus. If you are not likely to publish anything on the subject I should feel really obliged if you did not think it too much trouble to tell me whether any special causes of doubt had suggested themselves to you or whether it is merely that the current arguments for Hippolytus authorship seem to you to come short of full proof.
To me I confess it seems that they amount to demonstration. The other arguments urged by Döllinger establish at least a fair probability that Hippolytus is the author: but the matter seems now to be put beyond doubt by the fact that in the work a Chronology which is certainly by Hippolytus he takes credit for the industry with which he has traced out the division of the 72 nations of the world, enumerating 25 from Shem, 15 from Japhet & 32 from Ham; on that in the Refutation X. 30 the same division is not only adopted but the author expressly states that he had in another work given the names of the nations. Surely it is not credible that in the beginning of the third century there were living together at Rome two scientific chronologers each of whom had arrived independently at this result; but claiming it as the fruit of his own personal investigation

15 Jan. 1891

My dear Lord,

Dr Hort has advised me to apply to you in reference to a proposal to allow candidates for the Divinity degree to submit their previously published works instead of a dissertation upon a subject approved by the Professors.

In the Arts' School objections to the proposal were made freely, & I must confess that I found myself compelled to take exception to it in the form in which it was presented to us. It seemed to me (after discussion with the other Professors I felt the difficulty) that if we follow it thus extend the analogy of the D. Litt & D. Sc., we ought to go further, & allow a veto to the Special Board or at least to the General Board. The Registary objected strongly on quite independent grounds, & Dr Taylor also objected. How can he be dealt with if the proposal came, as it should, before the Senate it would be non-placeted.

On the other hand an accepted change in this direction is very much to be desired. The Divinity faculty is very limited, especially among students, & the older & better men shrink from undergoing the labour of a new dissertation. One or two excellent men, I know, are anxious to obtain a degree on the strength of publications which deserve it. But at present there is a deadlock on the questions.

Can you kindly throw any light upon it? What I want and is the briefest sketch of the history of the proposal. Dr Hort tells me that it goes back some way; but in his present weak state he could not charge his memory with the details.

I have just returned from the Conference at Oxford. It was, as regards the character of the debates, a complete success, though I regret one or two of the decisions. The Preliminary seems to be entering on a new stage of its life, with Bramston's help the nucleus of a system of examinations. Believe me, my Lord,

Yours very sincerely

The only statement was made by Mr William Jones, & was journalese referred to by me in a parenthesis as the first intimation I had received of Episcopal support. No one present could have misunderstood me except wilfully. What I did say about religious teaching was an expression of my own personal convictions. My Lord Bishop,

I am going, D.V., to conduct a brief Mission in Sunderland & in Hartlepool, Jan 17–21. The Mission is absolutely un-denominational, – it is evangelical, spiritual, practical; its one purpose being to help the religious life of the two towns. A short note of kindly sympathy with such a movement, to be read during the Mission, wd be of great value, if you cd see your way clear to give us your good wishes.

As a total stranger to your lordship I may add that the Rev Dr Nevosth is my particular friend, & that I have the honour of being on visiting terms with the Archdeacon of London, the Head Master of Harrow, & other distinguished churchmen. I have had Dean Vaughan amongst my hearers, together with innumerable clergymen.

As one of your grateful readers & students may I subscribe myself

My dear Sir

I am glad that you like the general form and plan of my Cod. Berae.

What you say of Tischendorf is all too true, but there is no error about his seeing Cod. E. Learning from Mr Coxe that he had not been in Oxford for years, and had had Cod. E very little in hand, I wrote to him to ask whether he intended to carry out his announced purpose, since I much as an Englishman wished to publish it and of course had facilities not within his reach. His reply was "Thank you for giving way to me in regard to Cod. E. I reckon myself half an Englishman, as I am a member of the Royal Society of Literature.

Not being anxious for a new issue of the proclamation against Tregelles Ad arcendas calumnias, I gave way to my very great sorrow.

Have you seen, and if you have, would you advise me to answer, Simonides attack on Codd. Bezae and Augiensis in the last Literary Churchman? It appears to me only too absurd, and one is really surprised that he can find any one so unintelligent as to have faith in him.

Lord John Russell wishes to make application to our ambassador at St Petersburgh for a distinct pledge from the Russian authorities that I may obtain Models without delay.

Lord John wishes to send with his letters to Sir P. B. letters from those who wish to urge this point on his attention, and who from position, academic standing &c might be supposed to be capable of giving a judgment in the matter.

My dear dear Westwood,

I directed that a copy of the Codex Zacynthius should be sent for your acceptance as soon as it was out: Mrs. Bagster ought to have attended to this a fortnight ago. There is a copy for the Hon. Mrs. Vernon who returns to England: I forget in whose hands Mrs. Bagster were going to place it for this: I will write to him to have it as soon as he returns.

I hope that yours has been sent to Harrow.

We shall be for a little I think in this place: I have found benefit certainly from several changes: I trust that after the winter I may go on with my work.

I heard a whisper that you might take Dean Ellicott's Professorship at Cambridge: I trust that this may be [illegible] for you than School work.

It would have been ready long ago, but I had not been laid by for a great part of last year, from January to July by a very severe attack of whooping cough, and for six or seven weeks in Nov. and Dec. by a trying cold on my chest; I am thankful to have got this done, and that in spite of so many hindrances. I quite hope to complete the whole this year.

I only want to know the address as soon as you can let me have it.

It may take more than 2 days before printers and boor. ders have done their work: but I shall look for your two days next back the last sheet "for Press".

My dear Sir

Your obliging letter has just been forwarded to me here.

I have stated from Matthai that Cod. K does not contain the Acts.

As regards Cod. A my adhesion to Sir F. Madden's notion that the red breathings and accents are primâ manu is given in very guarded language. He told me last year that often as he looked at the passage, he was more sure than ever of the fact, which I did not care to contradict, though on looking over the page again this week I did not like the colour of some of the strokes. Have you seen the breathings &c. which Carton judges p. m. in the Homer be published?

I think I must throw into my Addenda greater doubt about Madden's opinion, though with the well-known passage of Epiphanius before us, we need not question the occasional use of breathings &c. at the period.

Have you any definite information respecting the Liverpool papyri? Until I hear your opinion, I never suffered the idea of their possible authenticity to rest on my mind.

Believe me,
yours very truly,

I had the advantage of attending one or two of your courses on the History of Doctrine, and find my imperfect notes of much service in guiding my own attempts.
