Ahriman (Persian, Zoroastrian).

Dio (Persian, Dyaon, Dious, Deus, Deus, God; so much for variant uses of the selfsame word).

The Persians use all the Arabic terms; the Turks use the Arabic and Persian words. The Arabs do not use the Persian expressions.

The Arabic jinn (genii) and gib (demon of the wilds), are never used in the sense of devil.

Shaytan and Div are used of any devil; not of Satan only. The others are special to Lucifer, alias Satan.

me to send you as many of the devil's

Arabic, Persian, and Turkish.

In Turkish there is no such thing that I am aware of. Like sensible people, they use a devil of other folks' manufacture, as we do in English.

few names in Islam; absolutely none in original Arabic.

ʿAnāḩīl was his angelic name, before his fall (apparently Hebrew).

Shayṭān is his adopted name from the Hebrew - see Satan.

Er - Rajīm (Persian, Turkish Rajīm), the lapidated one, driven away with stones (the stones being sun meteors, shooting stars, aerolites); he is supposed to be pelted with these missiles by the angels whenever he approaches too near to heaven. This is true Arabic; but is a title, not a name.

I told you that I should return from Ipswich this morning and I am here on Monday week, I need not tell with it the other evening however the absence of that will not make much alterment to my entertainment.

I hope you are now at ease since you have discovered your annual losses

Dear Sir

I must ask you to kindly excuse delay in reply to your letter as I have been so pressed with work of various kinds that my correspondence has fallen behind

I send you herewith a synopsis of my Bill by which you will see all particulars of it. This Session I have divided the Bill into two, making the Allotments & Small Holdings parts separate. These Bills are not yet out of the Printers hands, but I
