Dear Sir.

You will perceive by Mr. Parry's letter to Mr. Wardock that it was owing to your making the offer of a commission to him, that he interfered - All the names that were placed in the Book were obtained before the arrangement was made between you & Mr. Parry. The Book was returned weeks ago to my Agent, therefore all those subscriptions will go towards making up the £300 - which you inform me is the sum required by you - If you like to employ the Paper or any other Bookseller it will not interfere with our arrangements. And of course I must have credit for all the names inserted in the first Book which you sent me - I am happy to say that there are already a great many names down - and I shall hope to assist you in getting sufficient number to cover the whole expence - but I understand that I am bound to make up £300.

Dear Sir Spencer -

Alas! I am (as you see) away from London, shall not be back in town for a few weeks. I am very sorry that I shall therefore be unable to meet you at the Athenaeum, or to be at the next Dinner on Monday - much has happened with me since we last met. You may have read in the Papers that I had resigned my Bristol Canonry owing to indifferent health. The truth is that me sharp attack of Influenza in June / July last, left behind it a weakened conditions of heart, w. requires rest and medical care, and I was quite unable to face the fatigue + daily exposure of a Residence of three months at Bristol in mid winter. So I thought it my duty to resign the office, though of course it is a very serious step — However my doctors are quite hopeful that with rest + care, as I have had, things will come right.

I see you have two new names coming up for Ballot with Dr Norman Moore for one of them — I hope there is no hitch of any kind over, about which you wished to talk to me —

I remain,
Dear Sir Spencer,
Yours always sincerely
Alfred Ainger.

I am staying here with a niece opposite, who has been lately left a widow — so I am in very sad hands.

Dear Sir

I had the pleasure yesterday evening of receiving your very obliging Letter accompanied by another impression in a very handsome case of your Pitt Seal which is a most excellent likeness, & I beg that you will accept my sincere thanks for your kind Present which I very much value in all respects. I wish that you had attended the last agricultural dinner, as you would have been much gratified to have heard what Mr T. Attwood said of Mr Pitt, & above all to have witnessed the universal enthusiasm with which those sentiments were received. His words were nearly as follows:

"I am said to entertain extreme opinions,
"but I do so in consequence of the system
"which has been followed for the last twenty "years, & I should not have done so if
"Mr Pitt had lived. He preserved &
"protected the prosperity of the country,
"but when he died there was no one
"to catch his mantle."

The Duke of Wellington whom I happened to meet on the following day seemed very much struck when I repeated to him these expressions.

Allow me to request the favor of your accepting the inclosed autograph, & to present my best Compliments to your Son

[There is much good sense and good feeling in these remarks. In London and large cities the use of dogs for draught is a nuisance, but then why extend legislation on the matter beyond the occasions for it? It should be made a matter of municipal regulation.]

THE LITERARY EXAMINER.

Memoirs and Correspondence of Francis Horner, M.P. Edited by his Brother, Leonard Horner, Esq., F.R.S. Two vols. Murray.

The majority of intelligent readers of the present day may never have heard of the name of FRANCIS HORNER, but few persons of any class can have passed through Westminster Abbey without stopping to admire a noble full-length statue which bears that name. It is by Chantrey. The poet has lavished praise upon the sculptor who could imprint 'Chatham's eloquence on marble lips,' but breathing of marble there is something better

His greatest speech in the House was on the Peace Treaties in 1816, and by this the hopes of his friends were raised to the very highest pitch. There was then noted in himself, too, an elevation of manner and spirits most unusual to him, as if a troubled and doubtful way had on the sudden become perfectly clear, and objects till then but the day-dreams of a young ambition were at last proved real. Sir James Macintosh's mention of this gaiety of success is extremely touching. Only a month or two passed on, and the fatal disease he had long silently disregarded, roused the anxiety of his friends and forced him to attend to their instructions. At the close of the year he left England for the benefit of a milder climate, and never returned. From Pisa, on the 4th of February 1817, he wrote a letter to his father full of cheering hopes of renovated strength, and four days afterwards died. Not at any time of his illness does he seem to have expected this sudden close. To the last his mind was full of the intellectual projects, and the wise and tender thoughts, which had made up his honourable life.

Francis Horner

Exeter Augt 6. 1816.

My Dear Sir

I duly received the proof copy of your case for Mr Dingwall with the Judges' notes, and this night have also received your second letter, containing Sir J Leg Campbell's opinion, for which I am much obliged to you. As you told me you were not in an immediate hurry, I have not returned the case till I should think the matter over two or three times; I think Sir J Leg's letter will enable me to do with still greater advantage. Your argument seems to me irresistible; yet the House of Lords cite to be irresistible; yet the House of Lords cite being unwilling to yield to it.

After two tolerable days, though still cold, we have had nothing to-day but rain. I never knew such a season; yet the farmers complain up here one should expect. It is in the north, and in the high country, that the consequences of this summer without a sun will be most severely felt.

Believe me my dear Sir
Yours truly
F Horner.

EDWARD BAINES, ESQ., OF LEEDS.

THIS highly-respected gentleman, formerly Member for Leeds in three successive Parliaments, and senior proprietor of the Leeds Mercury, died on the 3d inst., aged 74.

He was the architect of his own fortune, having by industry, energy, thrift, and ability, worked his way in the world from the position of a journeyman printer, until he become one of the most prominent men in Leeds, and its representative for many years in Parliament. At the commencement of the present century he obtained possession of the Leeds Mercury, and, by his able management, so increased its popularity, that it is now esteemed, in point of circulation and literary character, one of the first provincial papers in England. Mr. Baines was besides author of several books, the "History of the French War," a popular and profitable undertaking; the "History of the County Palatine of Lancaster," an elaborate topographical production, &c. At the time of his death he was a Magistrate for the West Riding of Yorkshire. He leaves sons and daughters; one of the former, M. T. Baines, Esq., a learned Queen's Counsel, sits in Parliament for the borough of Hull.

Dear Sir,

I am desired by the Editor to ask if you would be willing to write some biographical notices of men of letters for use as obituaries. For instance if Mr George Meredith is a writer in whom you are interested you might send a notice partly biographical, partly critical & estimate in length – which should be well within two columns of the paper.

Kindly let me know, for the information of the Editor, as early as may be convenient.

Yours faithfully

Dear Sir.

I am desirous that you & the Chairman & manager of the autotype Company could see some of my immense collection of Drawings - for I confident a very important thing might be done in rendering them by your process for publication. I scarcely think it possible to accede to your request, for my sketches are Legion: near 20.000 mounted in separate locked cases including scenes in every part of Europe except France & Russia - including Morocco - many volumes of Holland & Venice & Spain & the British Coast &c &c How to select & convey a large number to town would be a serious trouble - but I cannot but think that a run down here would be far from a disagreeable thing for these gentlemen to do, this glorious summer weather - I will send a carriage to meet you at Broombridge & you can dine & return to town by 1/2 p 8 in the evg or earlier 1/2 p 5 if necessary - our country is charming & my rocks & groves very lovely - You would all have a better notion of what I could furnish if you could see my works here - Please communicate with Mr Winsor & the Chairman - & ask if they will propose a day & come to Glen Andred & I will immediately reply, if I am engaged or not - perhaps they will name two days - & I will select one say Monday a Wednesday, next week -

Dear John Dennis.

Some time since I was about to send condolences to you on account of your loss, but I omitted doing so because, knowing you would be assured of my sympathy, I feared intrude upon a private sorrow -

I do not know who wrote the obituary of your brother in the Athenæum, but, least of all men, is it likely to have been written by Macaulay. I did not write it; indeed it did not come within my section. I was startled by reading the "Times" notice without finding any word in it about "Etruria"!

Can you tell me in what way you have to complain of MacColl's "shameless conduct" to you? Of course this would be taken in the strictest confidence. I, too, have been writing for the Athenæum for 40 years, have indeed, made that the staple of my life's work; sometimes, and for years together, at the rate of 400 columns a year.

All thanks for the charming, exquisitely finished poems which came here this morning. That is poetic art indeed.

F. G. Stephens

I and my wife are sorry to hear of your continued ill-health and I trust you will find it all right when the weather changes; it must be bleak at Crowborough now, one must needs think. We, likewise, have been very much out of health; since we came from Cornwall in the middle of September (being then, apparently, in the best condition) both of us have been so upset that the doctor has not been out of the house for more than three days at a time. I am much better, tho' far from my former self, but my wife continued to suffer and is not yet strong enough to leave home for Lymington, where his

10 HAMMERSMITH TERRACE W

Patmore is going to take care of her. As to the life of C.P., although I am in frequent communication with Mrs P., I have heard nothing of it for some time.

Between ourselves, I suppose you know that Maccoll is not nearly his own master and that, blameworthy or not, he is very sharply looked after.

In knowing Mrs Anning Bell will be sure that your selection of the lyrics you are indeed fortunate. I think him one of the best men of his order, technically, and a delightful designer, but, of course, he is not always at his best.

Yours truly F. G. Stephens.

Dear Mrs Gardner

When I had last the pleasure of seeing you to mentioned to me that you had seen a reference made to a traveller named Mendelsloh, whom you believed to be a relation or ancestor of yours. This gives so great an interest to the Book, in your eyes, that I venture to ask you to accept a copy of it.

The name is spelled indifferently Mandelslo, Mendelslo, & Mendelsloh. The family of the traveller came from Holstein and as yours belongs to Hanover, they are probably one & the same.

Mrs Gardner

He was born in 1616 at Mecklenburg & was page to the Duke of Holstein Gottorp. who

Ormus & India returning by the Cape of Good

Dear Mrs. Mason,

I left London sooner than I expected in consequence of my brother coming suddenly from Italy and as I can write here, I shall remain probably ten days longer -

I will send you letter to Jameson with him from myself asking him to leave out the sketch with him

servant so that I can call for it on my return or, if you want it particularly
by before I come back,
you must get somebody
else to call for it.

I hope George is better

After having agreed with me both personally, & by letter, as to terms, for the production of my piece on Mesmerism; and then declining it, on account of the subject, than which, you told me, yr friend, Mr. Power recommended you to do "Animal Magnetism" I must say, I feel a little surprised, at yr producing another piece on the subject, in which it seems Mr. Power plays principal part: of course, there may be nothing in all this: nothing more than an every days occurrence; only that such forgetfulness, on the part of professed friends, are apt to wound, deeply the feelings of single minded men, like myself: mais n'importe: return, if you please, my manuscript: which, but for my firm reliance, on your opinion, I might have produced elsewhere, months ago: this is too bad, friend Webster! this is too bad! however: return, at once, my MSS & so let the matter end, as all matters must end, sooner or later, whether of prosperity, or trouble: and, I think I've often heard you make the same remark, at Cont. Gardens.

an absence of some months.
& it was not until then
that I found your letter -
— too late. I am sorry

take credit for having any very great influence among
the names you mention.
But in such cases it is frequently sufficient that the attention of the Electors

have done.

As it is, I sincerely

My dear Sir.

Although I did accept the original invitation to the Children's Hospital Ball for the ~~##~~ 2nd of November I do not after all intend to be present on the day to which the ball has been postponed. Although I am obliged to attend for public reasons at some undoubtedly festive meetings, it is only from a sense of duty. But that I do so.

there is a clear line to be drawn between balls & other kinds of festivities; and there is a point at which the sense of duty gives way to the sense of strong personal disinclination. Such is my feeling about this ball at Sheffield; and you may perhaps gather the reason for my feeling if I only hint at the very different circumstances (at the Sheffield Children's Hospital Ball) under which, in November 1880, I was last present at anything of this kind.

I enclose a small contribution (2 guineas) to the funds of the Hospital and remain

very truly yours
