

APR - - 1901

The Faculty of the Department of Pedagogy met in regular session in Prof. Wernicke's room in the Natural Science Building.

There was much discussion regarding the number of examinations which any one pupil may be allowed to take in a subject without going over the whole branch again.

It was finally decided that a regulation of the general faculty already existed, covering the case, and that only one re-examination could be allowed.

Faculty adjourned.
