The last Red River Dam story

(Editor's note: This is the first of a two-part series dealing with the Red River Dam controversy.)

By RON MITCHELL
Kerhel Staff Writer

The largest and most controversial pork barrel project in Kentucky history—the proposed $34.1 million Red River Dam—has apparently been scrapped, the victim of a unified effort by environmentalists, politicians and concerned individuals.

Brainchild of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the Red River project prospered for 13 years before a two-fronted attack put the finger in the dike.

The final in a series of damaging blows against construction of the lake and reservoir came Sept. 11 when Julian Carroll became the first governor to oppose the dam.

Carroll, currently the front-runner in his bid to return to the state's highest elected office, was in the enviable position of being able to honestly air his views on the controversial issue without fear of reprisals at the polls.

Known for his inability to take a firm position on controversial matters, Carroll procrastinated and hedged on the issue until he was confident an anti-dam stance would not damage his political standing.

While he is to be commended for dealing the devastating blow to the dam, it should be remembered that his delay in taking a position is too typical of the political maneuvering and rhetoric that has surrounded the Red River project.

The lake and reservoir were originally conceived in 1954 as the solution to major flooding in Powell and other eastern Kentucky counties. An area citizens advisory committee suggested there be a remedy to the annual spring floods.

The Corps was authorized to study the problem and determine the best solution. To justify construction of a dam, other factors besides flood protection had to be tossed into the deal by the Corps. The most severe flooding could be prevented by construction of flood walls and levees.

So the Corps made an earth-shattering announcement: there is a severe water shortage in Central Kentucky. And both the flooding and water shortage problems would be alleviated by a multi-million dollar dam.

Since all public works projects must have projected economic benefits equal to or greater than

Title IX effect on single-sex organizations unclear

By MIKE MEUSER
Kerhel Staff Writer

The University is apparently undecided about what effect Title IX of the Education Amendments Act of 1972 will have on single-sex organizations now under University sponsorship.

New Title IX regulations, which became effective July 21, 1975, prohibit sex discrimination by educational institutions receiving federal funds. Campus organizations would supposedly be included since the University is a federally-funded body.

Fraternities and sororities are exempted from consideration because of an amendment clause attached to the final draft of Title IX.

Honoraries, whose members are chosen on the basis of academic excellence, make up the second largest group of single-sex organizations on campus and are not covered by the exemption clause.

Frank Harris, associate dean of students responsible for registering all campus organizations, said from his understanding of Title IX honoraries would be required to admit members from both sexes in order to maintain their sponsorship.

"I have not heard anything from the legal staff about this yet and until I do there is really no action I can take," he said.

Under the terms of Title IX, an institution has one year to comply with the regulations after which time a loss of funds is possible.

John Darsie, University legal counsel, said the real problem is determining whether an organization is sufficiently involved with the University to be covered by the law.

"Since honoraries are not included in the guidelines we find ourselves back at the same old problem. Is the entity a receiver of federal funds, or if not, is it so closely connected that it is 'entangled' with the federal program and thus can be said to be an indirect recipient," Darsie said.

Darsie attended a meeting with Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) officials last spring in Atlanta and was told at that time that University sponsorship with the appointment of a faculty advisor "probably" constituted entanglement.

According to dean of students office regulations, campus organizations at UK are offered these services as well as University-maintained accounts, free office space, mailing services and post office boxes. Additional services are available to organizations receiving direct appropriations from the University.

Harris said he was not aware of any honorary directly receiving funds from the University.

Joe Kinnarney, president of Omicron Delta Kappa, a men's honorary, said his honorary's constitution does not prohibit women. "Nowhere does it say that women are excluded, we simply haven't had any initiated. Last year a couple of girls were nominated, but they never followed up on their applications," he said.

John Schraeder, president of Lances Junior Men's Honorary, said that he was unsure about the effect of Title IX. "There is nothing in our constitution which prohibits women, however, we are still undecided about what we will do or even whether Title IX will affect us," he said.

Several other honorary officers and sponsors were also contacted but refused comment since they were out-going members and no longer represented their organizations.

Harris said very few organizations have registered with his office to date and that he cannot make determinations about their compliance with the law until all registrations are in.

"Once I am advised by the lawyers on the matter I will single out those organizations which are sexist by nature and notify them by mail so as to allow time for them to comply," Harris said.

Darsie said HEW would probably provide the force behind compliance. "I would imagine that once the law is in force next year HEW will provide periodic compliance checks of once every five years," he said.

Zionists deny tl 'indisputable facts'

By Iranian Student Association

In their comment in the Sept. 19 Kernel, "Vituperations" deserve response", four UK professors accuse John Roach of "venomous perversion of facts and events which tends to spread the poison of inhuman behavior." After reading their own diatribe we are forced to conclude that the only thing which they object to are the indisputable facts in Roach's article which less-educated Zionists in their comments and letters have attempted to deny completely.

Roach cited as an example of Zionist collaboration with the Nazis the case of Rudolph Kastner the head of the Zionist organization in Hungary and later the Israeli Secretary of Industry and Transportation. Kastner collaborated with Eichmann in the murder of 800,000 Hungarian Jews. In return Eichmann agreed to let several thousand wealthy Jews and the Zionist leadership in Hungary flee to Palestine. This was the finding of a District Court in Jerusalem and also of the Court of Appeal (not of the Supreme Court as Roach erroneously states). Supreme Justice Moshe Silberg wrote in his opinion: "...he, Kastner, in order to carry out the rescue plea for the few prominent, fulfilled knowingly and without good faith the said desire of the Nazis, thus expediting the work of exterminating the masses." (In appeal of the Attorney-General on Criminal Case no. 124 of 1953, the Attorney-General of Israel vs. Malachiel Greenwald, D.C. Jerusalem.)

According to the four professors: "It was the Israeli government, headed by the Jewish Agency, the Central leadership which pressed the Kastner case to trial. Clearly they would not have done this had Kastner's duplicity reflected their own policies. Nor is there evidence of any such scheme." The Israeli government did not press the Kastner case to trial. The truth is that the record of Kastner's crimes was exposed by a Hungarian Jew, Malachiel Greenwald. It was because of Greenwald's efforts that the case became known throughout Israel. At this point the government intervened — not to prosecute Kastner — but to institute a criminal libel suit against Greenwald. Kastner was defended by Chaim Cohen, the Attorney General of Israel. What was the governor's reason for instituting the suit? The attorney general pointed out: "The man Kastner does not stand here as a private individual. He was a recognized representative, official of non-official, of the Jewish National Institutes in Palestine and of the Zionist Executive; and I come here in this court to defend the representative of our national institutions...." The attorney general, of course, was correct. Kastner was not just any Zionist: he was the leader of the whole Zionist organization in Hungary; throughout his life he held leading positions in Zionist organizations and in the Israeli government. It definitely reflects on Zionism as a political movement that such a person could have risen to become one of its leaders. The four professors state that there is no evidence of the duplicity of other Zionist leaders in such collaboration. Again let us look at the record of Kastner's trial. One of the major findings of the District Court which was later approved by all five judges of the appeals court was that Kastner "in a perjurious and criminal way" saved Kurt Becher, a major Nazi war criminal, from the punishment awaiting him in Nuremberg. Becher, now one of the richest men in West Germany, was a member of the Nazi death corps which specialized in the murder of Jews in Poland. He was appointed in 1945 as "commissar in charge of all concentration camps in Nazi-occupied Europe." Following the war Becher was scheduled for trial as a war criminal at Nuremberg. He was saved from trial because of an affidavit signed by Kastner which stated "Kurt Becher did everything within the realm of possibility to save innocent human beings...."

The affidavit ends as follows:

I make this statement not in my name but also on behalf of the Jewish Agency and the Jewish World Congress. Signed Dr. Rudolf Kastner, official Jewish Agency in Geneva, former Chairman of Zionist Organization in Hungary, 1943-45, Representative of Joint Distribution Committee in Budapest.

When cross-examined on the affidavit Kastner stated:

Debkin and Barlas gave me permission to speak in the name of the Jewish Agency. And Mr. Perizwig, chief of the political department of the World Jewish Congress, and Mr. Reigener, European representative of the World Jewish Congress gave me permission (to offer the affidavit in the name of these Zionist organizations).

During the District Court trial Kastner alleged that the top leadership of Zionist organizations outside of Europe purposefully withheld from the press information he relayed to them about Nazi murder plans in 1942. He stated:

"...the Jewish Agency and the Joint Distribution Committee representative in Switzerland, Moshe Schwable and Asaly Mayer did not give out the information to the press about the mass killings. They failed to give the press the news I sent from Budapest...I informed them almost daily by cables about the pace of exterminations. My cables were never published anywhere."

Kastner's testimony clearly implicates almost all of the top Zionist leadership in Europe. One of the Supreme Judges of the Appeal, Moshe Silberg, clearly acknowledged that there could be guilty parties besides Kastner:

"I do not say that he was the only man who possessed information. It is quite possible that somebody else does not have a clear conscience with regard to this concealment. But we are dealing here only with the guilt of Kastner and we do not have to make judgments on the guilt of others...."

Kastner was assassinated under mysterious circumstances before his trial was over. The Israeli government has never carried out a thorough investigation of the question of whether Kastner had acted alone or in concert with other Zionist leaders. Kastner's death was used as a pretext for dropping the whole thing in spite of the many questions that had been raised.

Recreation

Editor:

The University of Kentucky has excellent recreational facilities for the students and faculty. Volleyball, basketball, racketball courts, pool tables, pinball machines, and many others available at various hours day and night.

There is one facility that could be greatly improved. I am speaking of the tennis courts located next to the Seaton Center. There are not enough courts to accommodate everyone that wishes to use them. You have to go almost a day ahead to reserve a court, which can prove to be very inconvenient. Then if you manage to get a court, you can only play once a day for an hour.

Additional courts are definitely needed on the campus. They are really needed on the opposite side of campus for students living in Blazer, Holmes, Jewel, Patterson and Keeneland dormitories.

Improvements could also be made by adding lights to the back courts next to the Seaton Center. This will not solve the problem in the long run, but it will help tremendously.

Disappointed

Editor:

I am disappointed with the Kernel for publishing the Spectrum article, "Dayan Should Not Take Part in SCB Lecture Series," which appeared in the Sept. 11 issue. Many of the statements and opinions expressed in that article are anti-Semitic in sentiment. It is, of course, correct that Zionism must be distinguished from Judaism. However the indictment of Zionism as a "fascist political movement," together with some of the observations used to support that position, is offensive to all members of one of the world's most oppressed religious minorities.

I hope that the editorial board of the Kernel will pause and think where Spectrum is—or should be—going. I recognize and endorse the purpose of the column: It serves as a valued outlet for non-establishment opinion. It is a practical application of the principle of freedom of the press. Freedom of the press is a highly respected concept in our country, but it is no more highly respected than freedom of religion. The article on Dayan's forthcoming lecture, because of its extreme statements, brings the former freedom into conflict with the latter. An editor should exercise the greatest discretion prior to the publication of such material.

Editor:

Earlier this week I read an article in the Kernel about the few black students and teachers at UK and the failure to keep them due, in part, to the University's image as racist. With this somewhere in the back of my head, I overheard a conversation across the aisle of a crowded bus headed to the stadium. "I thought you were gonna stay late and play basketball? I was but some niggers had the court." The response was by a bona fide member of the university community, no doubt.

I'm not a native Kentuckian, but I don't think I was alone in being raised to reserve the word "nigger" as a derogatory term—not a general indictment of a whole race. Would any of the readers want to attend classes where they were referred to as "honky" or "whitey?" I wouldn't. I'd feel threatened and impersonally judged.

Yet we wonder why more blacks don't attend UK, why there is less than a two per cent enrollment, why many are attracted solely by the athletic programs. What else are they offered? If the bus rider was any indication, probably a cold stare.

I'm not black, but there's a whole lot of times I wish I could say I'm not white.

A great fighter inhabits arenas of sensibility

(This is the second installment of a two part column on Ali, Frazier and the upcoming fight in Manila—sort of. I wasn't quite able to keep a fix on the subject matter at hand, probably because I was writing it in a last minute frenzy as I tried desperately to get drunk enough to board my godforsaken plane for Manila...where I'll cover the fight for Collier's and try to land a job as Joe Frazier's speech therapist...at any rate, the art historians may enjoy the digressions you fight fans decide to slip.)

payton

There are possibilities here: we can run down long wind-rivers of rhetoric about the art and pure grace of Muhammad Ali, or churn up turgid headwaters of analysis picking apart his motives and significance. But I'm not up to that—my general style of approach to the man is something akin to that of a village witch doctor who's asked by his people to explain the maning of a crashed helicopter found in the bush. The sophistication of the artifact is beyond his powers of interpretation, so he must resort to some metaphors from his own paltry experience; metaphors which mollify the natives but come nowhere near to explaining the root.

And so it is here: There is nothing more impossible to enter than the mind of a great poet or a great prize-fighter. They inhabit arenas of sensibility accessible only to other great poets or fighters. And since I am only a journeyman poet and a very mediocre boxer, I'm truly up against it. For Ali is a great poet, a poet of mind and body, and (dare to say it!) quite probably the greatest heavyweight who ever lived. There is no man alive today who could really know the core of Ali, for no other man has done what he has done, which is to totally integrate body and mind—sense and sensibility—into an art form that is at once brutish and beautiful.

(Dwell on this: There are Mind Arts and Body Arts and in the stretch of evolution we have derailed our connection of the two. Mind Arts are pure, bourgeois and laced with an easy status. Body Arts are sensual, primitive, with a hint of The Furies to frighten the timid. In our rush toward civilization and self-faming we have tended to block off the Body Arts into Sports, where the animals who participate can pound each other senseless and who cares? While the more civilized, more "advanced" aesthetes have contented themselves with the pure and bloodless pursuit of Mind Art, which makes no demands and asks for no payments. A prizefighter faces the very real possibility of death everytime he enters the ring. Death is the salt and tang of his existence, and every fight throws him into the voids of the existential—for who knows what dark and violent turn the night might take?

Ballet, for all its considerable beauty, seems a pale cousin to boxing when considered as total art. For who would dare to say that Rudolf Nureyev knows the dark passions of bile and vomit that any good club fighter feels on a bad night? (While a good boxer knows the wit and grace of a good turn around the ring, and some might equal Nureyev in their footwork.) Besides, who can deny that there is a choked hint of the un-consummated in a dance that has, finally, no possibility of exploding outward into the real arenas of triumph or tragedy...

OK. I'm fully aware that the gas in these paragraphs threatens to explode them, but I'm compulsive on this point, and any appreciation of Ali must settle around it: Boxing is an art as well as a sport, and when you speak of a great boxer you speak of a great artist as well.

Yes. Still, there is one aspect of Mind Art that boxing has more or less lacked and that is self-consciousness. It seems fair to say that there is an artist's consciousness at the other end of any creation or performance, and it is that consciousness which vivifies the activity into art or keeps it down at the level of show. Up to now, we have had many boxers who were superb Body Artists, resplendent in the genre, but no really aware of the possibilities of genuine, self-conscious creativity in the deep thump-your-guts of the sport.

Until Ali. Who started in the ring so many years ago as a simple poet of the body—one of the greatest of body poets—and as he grew older and wiser and suffered through unimaginable hells of self-appraisal during the grim years of his exile, rearranged all of boxing with his simple notion: That wit counts for more than force, and the inevitable corollary of this, that a man is as easily defeated by mind as by fists. So we have it—sense and sensibility combined, irrevocably, and boxing matured as an art.

The temptation is strong here to fly to the moon on lyrics of praise for Ali's style as a boxer and as a man. But that wouldn't do. Panegyrics are the easiest things in the world to write, and so they add their share of pollution to the air. But there are doubtless those of you out there who hold to the simple notion that Ali is nothing but a braggart who talks better than he fights; and the whispers of racism crowd behind that sort of thinking, for what hard-working white American wouldn't want this uppity nigger to shut up and show some gratitude for all that was given to him?

Look: For every ten of you who love the champ there are probably ten who can't stand him and—well, hidebound sensitivities chafe under the bridle of novel ideas. I won't waste time trying to convert you. But as a brief example of what I'm trying to get at here, let's explore the parallels between a masterful line of poetry and a knockout punch.

First of all, let's expand the common definition of the limits of poetry to include any activity which reinterprets experience, redefines sensibility and shoves the psyche outward toward spaces of greater understanding. We all know how devastating a great line of poetry can be in this respect—the dull shock that besets the brain when a great poet really sends his dart home. (Wallace Stevens for one, will give me the approximate sensation of receiving six good shots to the head almost anytime I read his poems.)

Consider, now, the processes of a knock-out punch. The brain of a fighter who moments ago was in full confidence of victory must undergo far-reaching processes of reconsideration and, if the blow is powerful enough, re-programming. The stimulus is overwhelming. The body may collapse as the brain tries desperately to assimilate this new invasion on its certainties. Coma results. The brain has rebelled at the knowledge the body has transmitted to it. The knockout is poetry precisely because it imparts a vast amount of overwhelming information in a concise package. Intimate poetry, to be sure, for only one person, finally gets the message. But a sufficiently sensitive spectator can share in the profound transmittals of the moment.

(Gibberish? Maybe. I'll grant you have to have some appreciation for the nuances of boxing to catch the full import of the analogy. But one thing is certain: "Float like a butterfly, sting like a bee," Ali's longtime slogan, is the best definition of poetry I've ever heard. Only a poet could have come up with it.)

Well, perhaps the witch doctor has missed his point. Perhaps he should-missed his point. Perhaps he should have pointed out such things as Ali's incredible courage in the 60s when he joined the Black Muslims (how could a simple-minded nigger boxer dare to do that?) and refused induction into the army. ("I ain't got nothin' against them Viet Congs," he said, in the most eloquently simple antiwar statement ever made.) Perhaps he should have looked at Ali as the incredible social and political phenomena he is, a man able to mobilize the entire Third World at a lift of his finger...perhaps a future President.

Perhaps, perhaps. But what is life but a series of missed possibilities? Someday the witch doctor will learn to read and write and do an entire book on the subject. Until then, he will read omens; and the omens say, unmistakable: Muhammad Ali has not yet done his most significant work—he'll be with us, and among us, for many years to come.

Nixon may testify on intelligence topics

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Senate Intelligence Committee agreed unanimously Wednesday to ask former President Richard M. Nixon to testify on a broad range of subjects relating to its investigation of improper domestic activities by U.S. agencies.

Chairman Frank Church (D-Idaho) said the committee's chief counsel was instructed to open negotiations with Nixon's lawyers to secure his appearance.

Church said that after a closed-door discussion committee members felt Nixon himself was the "best witness" in a number of areas, including the background of the so-called Huston plan to give U.S. intelligence agencies broad domestic power.

Church said he couldn't comment as to when or where or in what manner Nixon might be asked to appear because he said that would be a subject for negotiations.

Carroll, Gable endorse judicial system changes

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) —Both Democratic Gov. Julian Carroll and his Republican opponent, Robert Gable, have endorsed a proposed amendment to the state's judicial system.

Carroll and Gable, have issued a joint statement Wednesday calling on voters to approve the amendment, which will be on the Nov. 4 ballot.

"As candidates for Governor of the state of Kentucky, we recognize the importance of improving the court system in Kentucky," the joint statement said. "Therefore, we endorse and support the proposal to amend the Judicial Article of the Kentucky Constitution."

The amendment would set up a Kentucky Supreme Court, with an appeals court below it, then circuit courts and district courts.

Gov. Carroll to address Med Center dedication

The addition began receiving patients July 23.

Other speakers will include President Otis A. Singletary; William B. Sturgill, Board of Trustees chairman; and Peter B. Bosomworth, Med Center vice president.

Ceremonies will begin at 10 a.m., Sept. 27.

Shaving legs: Badge of slavery?

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) —Judith Quist, who lost her job as a waitress because she refused to shave her legs, has taken her fight to federal court. She bases her complaint on a 19th century antislavery law.

Quist's suit in U.S. District Court maintains her former employer required her to wear a "badge of slavery" when he told her to shave her legs.

"We're saying that forcing a woman to shave her legs is forcing her back into servitude," said Ann Hill, director of the Connecticut Women's Educational and Legal Fund, which filed the suit.

The complaint also claims the job requirement violated the waitress's civil rights.

Registered? Only 60 per cent can vote so far

By MONTY N. FOLEY
Kernel Staff Writer

The voter registration deadline for the November election is less than two weeks away, but Fayette County Clerk Charles Baesler Jr. said Wednesday only 60 per cent of qualified Fayette County residents are registered.

According to the 1970 census reports—the latest available source—more than 124,000 Fayette Countians are eligible to vote, but Baesler said only 75,000 have officially registered.

The county clerk's office will set up registration desks at various Lexington shopping centers to increase voter rolls before the Oct. 6 deadline.

Deputy County Clerk Gwen Carter, said officials will be at Fayette Mall on Thursday and Friday, and at Lexington Mall all of next week to facilitate voter registration. She said voters may also register at the Voter Registration office at the Fayette County Courthouse.

Carter said local voter registration reached a peak of 79,000 in 1972, but after that year's election all voters were required to re-register. "We're still trying to reach people who failed to re-register, as well as newly eligible persons," Carter said.

Current eligibility requirements, Carter said, "include that citizens be 18 years old by Nov. 4 and that they have resided in a local precinct for at least 30 days."

Baesler said this year's gubernatorial election should attract a heavier local turnout than 1974's senatorial race, when 35,000 local voters, or less than one-half of the then registered voters cast ballots.

Fayette County Democratic Party Chairman, Don W. Webb, said, "Anytime you have a light turnout it favors the party with the best local organization, and this is particularly true if the organization has incumbent candidates such as Gov. Carroll."

Democrat Julian Carroll opposes Republican Robert Gable in the November 4 governor's race.

On the other hand, the Fayette County Republican Party Chairman, David A. Sugg, said Republican candidates for state offices have done well in Fayette County, regardless of the size of voter participation.

"Even though democratic registration outnumbers our registration by about 3-1 in Fayette County, local voters have supported Republican candidates for state-wide offices."

The Nov. 4 ballot will include races for 12 Urban County Council seats and all state offices, as well as two state constitutional amendments.

PHI BETA KAPPA

The Membership Committee of Phi Beta Kappa is now receiving nominations for membership. The preliminary requirements which must be met in order for a student to be eligible for consideration for election are:

- (A) Over-all grade-point average of at least 3.5;
- (B) At least two upper-division courses outside the major;
- (C) At least 90 hours of "liberal" courses;
- (D) At least 45 hours of classwork taken on the Lexington campus;
- (E) Have satisfied by the end of the term the lower division requirements for the BA degree in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Should you know any individual who you believe meets these requirements, then we would appreciate you urging that individual to come to the office of Dr. Raymond H. Cox, Co-Chairman of Phi Beta Kappa Membership Committee, College of Arts and Sciences, 249 Patterson Office Tower to pick up an application packet.

In order to be considered, nominations must be received no later than Friday, October 3.

PLEASE NOTE: It is entirely appropriate to nominate yourself and, in fact, if you believe that you meet the criteria necessary for election it is expected that you will come to the above office for further information.

The last Red River Dam story

the cost, the Corps tossed in recreation benefits to contrive the economic justification.

The first of many public hearings to explain the extravagant plan by the Corps was held in 1954 at Stanton, Ky. and there was no opposition.

Preliminary planning and design continued, and finally in 1962, with passage of the Flood Control Act of 1962, the Red River Lake was authorized by Congress.

Pre-construction planning and land acquisition funds were approved by Congress for the 1964-66 fiscal years. And at another public hearing in 1967, first opposition to the dam was voiced by the Sierra Club.

The national news media became interested in the concrete monstrosity which would flood a major portion of the scenic Red River Gorge. Articles were printed in publications such as Newsweek, Sports Illustrated and various environmental publications.

A hike through the gorge in 1968 by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas drew even greater national attention and other local and national groups joined in the battle against the dam.

Concern over the dam's effects on the gorge and a request by former Gov. Louie B. Nunn forced the Corps to re-evaluate the project. Because of the planning delay, funding for preliminary design and land acquisition was delayed by Congress.

The Corps and environmental groups finally agreed on an alternate site that would locate the dam on the outer fringes of the gorge, appeasing most critics.

Under the revised plan, a seasonal year-round water pool would cover 1,546 acres of land and 15 miles of free-flowing stream. During periods of severe flooding as many as 3,177 acres of land and 19 miles of stream would be inundated.

About the author:

Ron Mitchell (left) has covered the Red River Dam issue for the Kernel since spring, 1974. He is former managing editor and covered the Kentucky legislature for the Kernel in 1974.

With enactment of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, which became effective Jan. 1, 1970, all public works projects were required to have environmental impact statements (EIS) detailing all specifics of the project—economic costs and benefits, environmental damage and alternatives considered by the Corps.

The conclusion of this news analysis, which will appear in Friday's Kernel, will explain how release of the environmental impact statement served as impetus to the eventual downfall of the Red River Dam project.

Adopt-A-House

University shares program's duties

By LYNN SIMMONS
Kernel Staff Writer

Adopt-A-House will begin its third year on campus with the help of Lexington Mayor Foster Pettit and a proposal by Dr. P. S. Sabarwahl that the organization be run by the University administration.

Adopt-A-House is an organization staffed by students who paint and "fix up" the homes of elderly people who are unable to either do it themselves or pay to have it done.

Sabarwahl, biology associate professor, and this year's academic ombudsman, started the Adopt-A-House program and has coordinated it for the past two years.

Because of his increasing work load and because he felt Adopt-A-House should not be one man's project," Sabarwahl has decided to "let the University come through with something too." He proposed turning the coordination of Adopt-A-House over to the University.

Pettit has pledged support for the program and has promised to get the donations of paint and other materials that Adopt-A-House will need. The program is financed entirely through donations.

Robert Babbage, assistant to the mayor, had presented Adopt-A-House with a list of 28 names of people who qualify for help. Previously students had to find people by going "door to door."

Babbage said the people will be contacted before hand so that "we can make sure the people understand what's being done."

Adopt-A-House is manned by sorority, fraternity and independent students, who besides doing yard work and painting houses, get to know the people they are helping.

Sabarwahl said the Adopt-A-House program is a good experience for students and that it lets elderly people know that they are wanted and that "we still care for them."

Sabarwahl said he had "excellent cooperation" from students and had no problems with students volunteering to help but not getting around to it. "Most students went through beautifully," he said.

Adopt-A-House earned recognition and a "help the city" award from the Metro Environmental Improvement Commission in 1973.

Gymnasts are optimistic about upcoming season

By JOE KEMP
Kernel Staff Writer

Leah Fryman was asked to give an early prognosis of her women's gymnastic team.

"Oh, I'm excited about this team and so are the girls," Fryman said. "We have five new recruits with two girls back from last year, so I'm pretty optimistic."

The new faces being counted on by Fryman are Robin Connally, Cindy Jackson, Pam Harris, Karen Meyers and Kim Brucher. Returnees from last season's team for women which finished sixth in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (AIAW) regional are Bari Wood and Tracy Sears.

Seven may not sound like a large roster, but suits Leah Fryman just fine.

Twenty-three girls came out for the team this fall," Fryman said, "but my philosophy is why should you have 23 mediocre gymnasts when you can have seven good ones."

"But if someone has an injury, I'm sunk," Fryman said.

Fryman said the women's gymnastics program has grown tremendously in the past 18 months.

"When I first came here the girls had no background or training in gymnastics. Some of the girls couldn't even do a cartwheel," she said. "But last year's group was very dedicated and they were determined to progress. They worked hard."

"Even without giving scholarships we have more to offer than any other state school in all ways," Fryman said. "The facilities we have are just super."

Though the team is not scheduled to compete until January, the Lady Kats are nonetheless sharpening its gymnastic skills right now. "Gymnastics is a sport where you have to be in proper condition all year," said Fryman. "So they'll be going through workouts until the end of the semester. The team will open against Ohio State Jan. 17."

Robinson, Condit quit Soccer team beset by problems

By ANDY CONNERS
Kernel Staff Writer

The UK soccer season has started up once more and currently the club is sporting a 1-1 record.

The soccer club opened its fall schedule by dropping a 3-2 decision to Morehead State University Sept. 13. Saturday the Kentucky team bounced back to blank Bellarmine College at the UK soccer field 2-0. Praghdup Mangat and Robert Stauble scored the two goals.

The soccer club has been beset by internal problems so far this season. Jack Robinson, player-coach for the first week of the season, resigned from the team after encountering problems with his teammates, according to sources close to the team.

Tom Condit was elected by his teammates to be player-coach after Robinson's resignation, but he reportedly quit after Saturday's match with Bellarmine.

Dr. Abdelmonem, graduate coach of the soccer team, said control of the soccer team has been in the hands of the players and undergraduate coaches.

"Since the soccer club has not been given recognition on a varsity team level, the program is controlled by the players."

"Taking this responsibility, plus the pressures of being a student, puts a lot of strain on them," Rizk said.

Rizk had no further comment on the resignations, but said he will set up a meeting with the club to get things "straightened out."

The lack of varsity status has put the soccer team's plans to attend away games on a day-to-day basis. "If no funds are available for away games, the players will have to raise the money or pay their own way," Rizk said.

This Saturday's game is with the University of Evansville here at 2 p.m. Last season the UK club beat Evansville 2-0.

Lady Kats lose to Madison College

By TERRY GABBARD
Kernel Staff Writer

The women's field hockey team played two matches last weekend at Harrisonburg, Va., losing to Madison College 6-0 and tying Bridgewater College 1-1.

Friday afternoon coach Susie Stammer's squad lost to regional favorite Madison College. Even though the Lady Kats were held scoreless, Stammer was pleased with her team's performance.

"I was excited to see them do so well," Stammer said. "The score is somewhat misleading since we were behind only 1-0 at the half."

Stammer said the tiring 450 mile trip to Harrisonburg, combined with the 80 degree heat, "took something out of the players in the second half."

The next day a much rested team battled to a tie on lineman Barb Baugh's goal.

"They (UK) showed their intelligence on the field in this game," Stammer said. "The first two games show we need to work on some basic fundamentals. The team was weak on defense because of loose marking."

"In other words, they weren't covering their man."

Stammers thinks the team will be able to correct its mistakes and improve the defensive play before the next game.

"They learn quickly and that helps," Stammer said.

One change Stammer has made on this year's squad is moving senior Donna Porter from center halfback to forward. "Porter's experience will help the other forwards make the team's game more flexible."

Although Stammer is enthused about the team, she is unhappy about the poor playing surface on UK's hockey field.

"The grass here is too long for field hockey. A player's performance could be adversely affected while adjusting to a better surface at away games," Stammer said.

The hockey field is maintained like the soccer and rugby fields, but Stammer said the grass needs to be shorter, because in hockey, the ball must travel "through the grass, not over it."

"We have a varsity sport, but they don't take care of the field," Stammer added. "It would make so much difference if we had a good field."

Leonard Abrams, groundskeeper for the north area of campus, said he "had not received any complaints on the length of the grass on the hockey field."

"Nobody has gotten in touch with me about cutting the grass shorter on the hockey field," Abrams said. "But from now on I'll have the grass cut lower on the hockey field."

Golf team finishes third

The Lady Kats golf team placed third in the Illinois State University Invitational held in Normal, Ill. last weekend. The Kats finished 26 strokes behind the winning team Michigan State and second place Iowa State.

UK's Myra Van Hoose, the current State Amateur Champion, lost the individual championship on the first hole of a sudden death playoff to Diane Beech of Michigan State.

The golfers next outing is a home match against Western Kentucky Friday.

The women's tennis team had two matches rained out this week. The Lady Kats were to play Transylvania University and Eastern Kentucky.

Friday and Saturday the women's tennis team will host a tri-meet starting noon Friday. Western and Louisville will be the two visiting teams.

Issel traded

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Dan Issel announced late Wednesday night that he would honor a trade made last week that would send him to the American Basketball Association's Baltimore Claws.

At a news conference held at his suburban home, Issel said he decided to go to Baltimore because, "The Browns want money more than me."

Issel was traded last Friday by Kentucky Colonel owner Ellie Brown for $750,000, rights to player Tom Owens and future considerations.

Hello?

If you've got a problem, Nexus is only a call away

BY MIKE CARR
Staff Writer

□ If all the complexities of campus life seem overwhelming upon arrival on campus, the Nexus tapes could be the answer.

Nexus, a telephone referral service sponsored by the Human Relations Center (HRC), can help students find answers to questions regarding 101 various topics and University procedures.

The topics, covering 10 areas of campus life, are filed by code number on tapes at the HRC office. The caller dials 7-3921 asks for the appropriate tape's number and it is played, giving a general "how-to" summary on the topic. (A brochure listing all the code numbers is available at the Student Center and the HRC office in Alumni Gym).

The basic philosophy of Nexus is that the size of the university bureaucracy necessitates a system where information can readily be obtained. "Joyce Urban, HRC program coordinator and Nexus director said.

According to Urban, Nexus can be especially helpful to freshmen who might have a variety of questions during their first encounter with the University. "You're pretty lost when you come here," Urban said, "you don't even know what offices exist. This is where Nexus can really help."

Nexus referral areas include student health, academics, transportation, personal assistance and financial aid.

"We try once a year to send the tape scripts back to the appropriate office or organization for revision," Urban said, adding there will be at least eight new tapes for the coming semester.

"A group of tapes on student health runs consistently high each semester concerning problems which students are hesitant to ask a doctor or friend about," Urban said.

Other popular tapes deal with day-to-day processes of being in a University," she said.

Nexus takes calls from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays, 1-5 p.m. Saturdays and 5-9 p.m. Sundays during the fall and spring semesters.

Urban said these hours need to be expanded because a person contemplating suicide, for example, would be more likely to need Nexus referral during late night hours.

"I see this (the hours) as an area where we need to improve service but it's a matter of having money to have students here to cover the phones," Urban said.

The Nexus system, began in 1973 involved an initial investment of about $1200 for tape recorders, tapes, publicity and phone lines. It now operates on a yearly budget of $2000, most of which is used to pay student operators.

"One of the good things about the system so far is the minimal cost," Urban said. "But we need more money to staff it around the clock preferably."

Although the charge has been made that Nexus says much about nothing, Urban doesn't believe it.

"It just depends on what you need to know and when. Maybe someone who knows all about University life doesn't need it," Urban said. "It probably needs some work to make the tapes better, but I think it's pretty good."

The campus police force is (just like) the real thing

BY BYRON WEST
Assistant Managing Editor

Before 1972, the campus police department's authority came from a "special local police officer's" law established during the mine strikes in eastern Kentucky. The law gave mining companies the ability to hire private police.

In 1972, the General Assembly passed a law allowing state universities to establish public police departments.

"The big difference," police chief Paul Harrison said, "is we switched from a private to public policing agency. We are now the same as any public police department.

"The other big difference is that up until 1972, in other than felonies, we had no jurisdiction on any public street.

"The statute gives us full police power anywhere on UK property, including any street running through or adjacent to UK property, as well as community colleges and other parts of the state where the University owns property," Harrison said.

"We also have authority to pursue an offender who has committed a crime on campus to any part of the Commonwealth he may go to," he said.

"That portion of the law is seldom used," he said. "Even if we did use it we would certainly contact the people in that jurisdiction to assist us in whatever we were doing."

The department is divided up into several divisions, traffic, patrol, criminal investigation, identification (fingerprinting and photo), and safety.

Patrols are on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and a dispatcher is always on duty. They are arranged so a maximum of nine men are on duty on any shift.

"What this means is, no matter when you call the police, someone is going to answer the phone," said Capt. Ben Anderson.

There are three numbers working on holidays and at night. The emergency number, 333, is to be used only for emergencies like fire or assault. The other two are dispatcher numbers, 257-1616 and 257-1617.

Anderson said UK police also give safety and self-defense lectures on request. Four or five officers are now being certified as first-aid instructors to provide training to UK groups on request.

Persons arrested by campus police are processed through Fayette County detention services. The department then notifies the Dean of Students' office when a student is arrested.

About 70 per cent of the arrests made on campus are non-students, said Anderson.

regulations. I feel confident these people will not misuse their weapons," Harrison said.

The department tries to prevent theft. "We urge people to register their bicycles with us and to record serial numbers on everything, so property can be identified," said Anderson. "We will engrave your social security number on other identification on anything, free of charge. Just call us for an appointment."

Traffic division is in charge of giving parking tickets. Cars without permits may be ticketed if they are parked in permit-only areas between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays and 7 a.m. and noon on Saturdays.

Anderson said cars receiving three parking tickets are put on the "hot sheet." If it is found on campus again it will be towed away.

Students cars which have been towed away may be claimed at

'Our policies say a weapon cannot be removed from the holster...'

"We're here to serve the students, not come down on them every time they look at somebody cross-eyed. But we can arrest students, and we will if we have to," Anderson said.

Harrison can't remember a single incident where UK police have fired a gun at a student.

"Our policies say a weapon is not to be removed from the holster at any time, except to protect the police officer's life or the life of an innocent person," he said.

"We drill these people from the day we interview them for the job until the day they leave here, on the importance of these police headquarters in the Public Safety Building at Euclid and Rose Street. Payment of the $2 tickets and the tow bill, which Anderson said runs around $8 will release the car. We take cash or single party checks, said Anderson, and the student must also show a driver's license and proof of ownership of the car.

Students without parking permits may park at Commonwealth Stadium and take free shuttle busses to the main campus. The stadium lots must be cleared before every home game, Anderson said. Cars still in the lots before a game will be towed away.

Does anybody know?

What time is it?

BY BYRON WEST
Assistant Managing Editor

Last week I was pondering going to see some people in the Office Tower to get something on my record changed, or some small thing like that, and I happened to mention it to a friend.

He asked me whether I had ever tried to get anything done over there before; I admitted I hadn't.

It's an experience you won't forget very soon, if you live through it," he said. "Personally, I wouldn't ask those people for the time of day if I could help it," could help it."

I was kind of upset to hear that, so I went off in a huff, determined to prove him wrong.

With all the confidence in the world I walked into the lobby of the Office Tower.

There were 123 people crammed into the lobby, waiting for an elevator, talking about grades and independent study projects and such, carefully holding their elbows in at their sides so as not to jostle their neighbors.

A bell rang and a green light came on as one of the elevator doors opened.

I got on the third elevator. Somebody punched my floor for me, and I got off at the proper moment and went to the office of the dean of my college.

Two secretaries were comparing the lumps in their milkshakes. I stood in the doorway for a few minutes, trying to look like a new piece of furniture or something.

One of them finally looked up at me. Can I help you?" she asked, trying not to sound too helpful.

"Yes," I said. "Do you have the correct time?"

"No," she said. A minute or so went by. The other secretary finally said, "One of the assistant deans might know, but they're all in a meeting. Would you like to wait?"

"Thank you," I said. "Do you have any idea how long it might be?"

"Who knows?" she shrugged. "I think I'll come back later," I said.

The office next door was open, so I stuck my head in.

"Excuse me," I said. "Do you know what time it is?"

The woman behind the desk looked up. She snatched up a bronze paperweight and threw it at me. I ducked, and it imbedded itself in the door facing over my head.

"No, I don't know what time it is," she shouted. "Did that damn fool at the information desk send you up here?" "I haven't talked to any damn fool, at the desk or otherwise," I said extracting the paperweight from the door facing and handing it back to her.

"Well, if you see him, tell him to screw himself," she said.

"Certainly," I said, backing out the door.

But there wasn't anybody at the information desk. I found a phone and called campus information. "Directory assistance," a sinus-laden voice said.

"Do you know what time it is?" I asked.

"I'm sorry, but I'm not allowed to give out that information."

"So you know where I might get it?"

"Thank you," she said. A moment later she said, "I have nine listings under time."

"Just give me all of them," I said.

"I'm sorry, but I'm not allowed to give out more than three numbers at once. But they are all listed in your student directory."

"I don't have one," I said.

"You can get one in room 122 of the Student Center," she said. There was a click and a dial tone.

I went off toward the Student Center.

Room 122 was locked. I started to walk away ejected, but I discovered the next door down had the word TIME painted on the glass. My joy knew no bounds.

I walked in. A man behind the desk looked up and smiled.

"Yes?" he said.

I felt it good. "I need to know what time it is please," I said.

"I don't," he said. "My job is to keep track of employees who get paid by the hour."

"Oh," I said.

"So why the hell do I need to know what time it is?" he went on. "But I might be able to direct you to someone who knows."

"Far out," I said. He gave me a room number in the Old Ag Building and off I trotted.

The door of the office I wanted was ajar, so I stuck my face in.

A gentle man was seated at a long table working a crossword puzzle in an old Sunday Herald-Leader.

He looked at me over his glasses. "What's a four-letter word for duration or tempo?" he said.

"Time," I said.

"T-I-M-E," he muttered. "It fits!" "Would you happen to have the correct time?" I asked.

The office you want moved to Breckinridge Hall last week," he said.

"Thanks," I said.

"Thank you," he said.

Sometimes I get confused in the quadrangle. I walked into Bowman Hall by mistake.

The place was full of rocks. I didn't stop to look at any of them; I accosted the first person I saw.

"Pardon me sir, what time is it?" "Recent epoch," he said without looking at me.

"Well," I said, "that narrows it down some. Where can I go from here?"

"Try the Administration annex," he said.

So I did. The person at the main desk sent me across the hall. I got into the first line and waited five or 10 minutes to find out I was in the A-K line. I moved to the S-Z line and finally reached someone with my problem.

"Are you a teacher or a student?" she asked.

I could understand the mistake, as I was wearing a pair of cutoffs and an old surgical scrub shirt a friend of mine ripped off from the Owensboro-Daviess County Hospital, and I hadn't shaved in a week or so. I modestly informed her that I was a student.

"I'm sorry," she said, but we're not authorized to answer questions brought directly by students. Go back and see your instructor.

Within the afternoon I saw 49 unfriendly secretaries and 17 friendly but unhelpful secretaries in the Office Tower; nine guys on a survey crew in front of Anderson Hall; a nice lady on the fourth floor of the King Library; five people listening to a waltz in the Fine Arts Building; a group of very busy people in Pence Hall; an apologetic postal worker in the basement of the Classroom Building; and finally a fellow at the gate of the Rose street Parking Structure, who sent me back to the Office Tower to see somebody who he was sure could tell me what I wanted to know.

This was the most definite answer I had received all afternoon, except for the five people listening to the waltz, who informed me it was in three-four time.

In the lobby of the Office Tower I found myself alone, waiting for an elevator. As luck would have it all of the elevators were coming down. In fact, they all reached the ground floor simultaneously. Four-hundred people piled out.

"Where's everybody going?" I yelled.

"Home," somebody said. "It's our o'clock."

I wonder how they knew.

The I.D. card and you

Besides your diploma, your I.D. card is probably the most important item the University will give you.

All students of the University are required to have one: A blue one if you are a full-time student or a pink one if you're part-time.

A blue card, plus the student-activity card, entitles you to attend any UK athletic event free. It also pays the way to the Central Kentucky Concert and Lecture Series and gives you a discount on regular student concerts.

The blue I.D. is necessary to vote in student elections or to get your own locker in the gym. You can leave it in the Seaton Center as collateral on almost any type of sporting and camping equipment, too.

The pink card, on the other hand, won't give you any of the above privileges. But, like the blue one, you'll need it to cash checks at the University, take books from the library, or use the meal-ticket plan.

If you happen to lose either an I.D. or a student-activity card, first, report it to the Department of Safety and Security, 305 Euclid. Next, pay the people at Billings and Collections $5 for a new one.

Retreat is introduction to college

The annual Freshman Retreat sponsored by the Human Relations Center (HRC) is to be held Aug. 22-24 at Camp Carlisle near Carlisle, Ky.

The retreat serves as an introduction to college life through seminars and programs with students, faculty and administration.

Joyce Urban, HRC program coordinator, invited 35 professors and administrators, including Dr. Robert Zumwinkle, vice president for student affairs to join the program.

In addition to academically-oriented presentations, the retreat will also have such activities as movies, swimming and square dancing.

The $25 fee, which includes cabin lodging and meals for the weekend, is "really cheap these days," Urban said.

A $3 late fee will be charged for registration after Aug. 1.

Greekdom is something to think about checking into

BY GREG HOFELICH
Staff Writer

Talk to Greek students seriously about their experiences as members of fraternities and sororities and personal growth will come up.

In the "laid back" seventies, greek organizations have been influenced by members' demands for fulfillment in an open-ended, fast-paced college environment.

If you're prepared for it, college can be a mind blowing experience, both exhilarating and challenging, scary and intimidating.

At the University you're continually bombarded by people with diverse backgrounds and ideas about the way things are. You're also thrown into situations where you have to work with teachers and students, who are members of widely divergent age groups.

It seems the best thing a student can do is make the most of his time, enriching his own experiences. To look at the pamphlets the individual fraternities and sororities send to prospective rushees, it is this personal enrichment that is becoming the major emphasis of Greek life.

Greek life is focused around particular methods of personal enrichment—growth through affiliation with a group of people with a common bond.

Opinion

Often I think the notion of groups gathering together is attacked unfairly. A lot of rhetoric propagandizes people and obscures the truth; it is only natural for people to gather in groups.

Some groups are stifling. They tend to make individuals less individualistic. But then many people find they work well in smaller groups or their abilities are enhanced by group activities.

The only sensible way to approach the notion of Greek affiliation is as a potential lifestyle that might have something important to say to you.

So how do you approach Greeks? How do you find out whether or not any of the organizations hold the type of people you appreciate and want to cultivate ties with?

Pretty much everyone involved, from Greek rush coordinating officials to University advisors and students themselves agree that traditional rush isn't the best way to get to know people.

"Short, intensive rushes, with all the parties and such are difficult and present many problems," Brian Pridle, head of interfraternity rush activities said. Parties are expensive and time consuming. Sometimes they distract from the real purpose behind rush, which is to meet the rushees and get to know them as people and vice-versa.

Many of the fraternities are trying to gear rush toward

The awkward age

Recently I attended a seminar devoted to a study of early adolescence. In the midst of our deliberations a participant said, "middle school is the age when work is swapped for love."

This is an intriguing statement, combining the difficult concepts of work and love in the homely act of a swap. Children of this age do swap, and a good middle school will foster his exchange of work for love.

The work we will expect of our students is, in the first instance, the customary middle-school curriculum. There are masses of facts to be acquired, skills to be mastered and concepts to be studied and understood. But if the exchange is to be worthwhile, sometimes ludicrous surface are stirring the first intimations of approaching adulthood.

For many children the implications of growing up dawn slowly and painfully. They are felt, deeply and often with dread, but they are understood only gradually—sometimes only in reluctance and occasionally not at all. Thus the person who detects the uneasy ebb and flow of these emerging selves, who participates in this brawling and uncertain birth, and en-livens it with words that give light and disciplines that create order, is important to the middle school. To teachers such as these, adolescents will bring, if they can, not only their work but their enthusiasm and loyalty. They will swap not only work but growth for love.

These early adolescent years are the years of true moral beginnings, the years when they need to grow in freedom and to be educated into a culture that reveals the meaning of freedom becomes urgently alive.

The challenge and the pre-we will expect more than this. We will look for an awareness growing within the student that his schooling, his activities, his assignments, his games—that is his work—are more than work.

They are, simultaneously, his assimilation of the world into his maturing self, and his message to the world that he is maturing. I think it is in the middle-school students that this awareness first makes itself consciously felt. For the first time the student knows that a lesson well-taught or a lesson well-learned reflects something larger than itself.

Not all are articulate about it, but I once had a boy say to me (we were discussing literature), "What's really good is to study something that somehow I already knew but I never realized before. Then suddenly, I understand it. Do you know what I mean?"

This teaching is itself the hardest kind of work, devoting arduous hours to preparation and instruction and evaluation of results. But teaching not only instructs, it also assures: It is applied encouragement.

For the teacher of early adolescents this is tremendously important. The early adolescent can almost be defined by his acute sense of new worlds emerging around him, and by his need for the knowledge to cope with his growth and assurance that growth is good we characterize this period as the difficult age, the awkward age, the age when ebullience and reluctance occur side by side and vulnerability is acute. It is a critical age, for beneath its shifting and

DANGER

These buildings may be hazardous to your academic health

The buildings listed on this page have some of the worst conditions on campus. Although they aren't intolerable, the conditions can make your academic life somewhat less than comfortable.

Our advice to you is, schedule around them if you can. If you can't let it be some consolation that everyone else is suffering along with you.

Miller Hall

Miller Hall is one of the granddaddys of all UK buildings. It is ancient and it tends to have all the problems that any person the same age would have.

While the classrooms aren't the worst on campus, they aren't in the Top 10 either. As for the poor organizations unlucky enough to be sunk into the basement, there is not much to be said except stock up on pills for your claustrophobia and watch your head, the pipes tend to hang about three inches below one's hairline.

McVey Hall

McVey Hall has problems in the acoustical department (words bounce around like echoes in a cave, people have been known to develop a keen sixth sense somewhat akin to radar after being housed in the building for long periods of time). The ventilation (one side of you is toasted golden brown while the other side could be sold as bona fide dry ice) is somewhat less than adequate. The looks of the place (suitable for a movie location about poison showers in the Nazi death camps) are also just a little depressing.

Kastle Hall

Kastle Hall, one of the perennial non-favorites on campus is a victim of poor lighting and ventilation. If the lighting and ventilation problems weren't enough, the Physical Plant Division decided to play tricks, and remodeled the north wing of the building. The renovation produced some very attractive rooms, that it is almost impossible to see, hear or breath in. Not only that, but they went so far as to bolt the chairs to the floor. The south wing of the building is a different story. Realizing a hopeless case when they see one the University astutely decided to leave what was had enough alone. The decor is somewhat like a daguerrotype of a turn of the century boy's school somewhere in New England.

Funkhouser

Funkhouser Biological Sciences Building is in the running for the worst building on campus.

In winter, students sitting more than six feet from the radiators may develop severe frostbite. Anyone inside the six foot radius is a brave soul, much more suited to life somewhere near the Tropic of Cancer.

Although poor ventilation is the major problem with Funkhouser, it suffers from others as well.

Uncomfortable chairs, bad acoustics and poor lighting in the hallways are runners up in the complaint department.

Any building with front steps built at a 90 degree angle to the horizon must be avoided at all costs.

Greekdom is something to think about low-key affairs, so we've seen the rise of the "casino party," where people don't have to shout over music and can really think about fraternity life."

"UK is one of the last places where a new rush style is emerging. This year, all of the sororities are dropping the more traditional spring rush entirely, though they are retaining the one in the fall," Patty Cazee, panhellenic president said. "Of course sorority rush has never been characterized by band parties like the fraternities', so there's never been quite the problem of talking with rushees concerning sororities and Greek life in general."

For women there are specially chosen "neutral" representatives whose job it is to steer women through rush, and help them find the best personal choice. "Organization can have its drawbacks too, but basically, I think the system probably works to the women rushees advantage when compared to fraternity rush," Cazee said. "Our co-counselors attend several training sessions in dealing with problems that can arise for rush candidates."

What should a rushee expect when he or she begins the rounds of the houses?

One might expect a lower-key rush that includes big parties but with an emphasis on conversation and getting to know one another.

For women theme parties are the standard fare. Sorority members will perform skits, sing songs, and on some occasions, feed prospective rushees. Usually, the party will be centered on some theme like a Broadway musical.

Men can expect "smokers"

(general bull-sessions and cook-outs) where the emphasis will be put on meeting the brothers. There will be more conventional dances, with and without dates. Many houses will try hard to set rushees up. Since sorority rush is two weeks before school starts there are usually plenty of women into going out.

Let's go a little further, and suppose that you've begun getting serious about one or more houses. Don't be paranoid if you're taken around to meet a lot of people. Try to remember faces and names, but don't panic if you can't. Chances are the fraternity member you think is eyeing you rather oddly, is really trying to remember your name or whether or not you are the guy he talked to in the lounge.

While women's rush is difficult in terms of remembering the people you meet; men's rush doesn't provide any strong organization to fall back on. Things are done more casually at fraternities and it's a toss-up which is more effective. Anyone will admit that neither is perfect.

Be honest with yourself and those you talk to. There's no point in misleading people about your goals your likes and dislikes. The friendlier and more open you are, the more it will show. Openness makes it easier to be open in return. Likewise, if you wander into a house full of bores or stuffed shirts, split after you've given them a fair chance, unless you're one too.

With this in mind, it seems like a good idea to shop around and check out the houses, if you think you're interested.

During your four years at UK you pick up a lot of information.

Here's a bit of information you can pick up daily.

We're the Kentucky Kernel, your independent student newspaper here at UK.

The Kernel is the only way to get information about what's going on at UK, that's why nearly 95% of the student body reads it every day.

And you won't have to dig for a dime either, it's free at 32 distribution points on and off campus. In fact, our circulation makes us Kentucky's fourth largest morning daily.

So before your first class at 8:00, be sure to pick up a Kernel. You won't even be quizzed on the information.

dicament of all teaching is to enable the spontaneous child to be spontaneous and yet to discipline, to instruct to guide him. How do we nurture, yet not force?

For all our accumulated science and wisdom we will find neither sure methods to accomplish this nor certain means to measure it. Our best efforts will sometimes fail and our greatest successes sometimes take us by surprise, if in fact we are permitted to know them at all.

The only true measure of our accomplishment will lie in the future. It will lie in the awakened genius of our young, when their time arrives, to lovingly rear and teach children of their own.

BGS enrollment increasing

BY WALTER HIXSON
Assistant Managing Editor

The Bachelor of General Studies (BGS) program is the University's most liberal undergraduate degree program and it has become increasingly popular since its inception in Dec. 1972. The program was instituted by the College of Arts and Sciences (A&S) because of continuous complaints from students about stringent A&S requirements. Consequently, A&S followed the lead of several major universities and offered the BGS degree which allows significantly more freedom in course selection.

The program has been so popular that well over 300 students have been graduated from May 1973. This large influx of students into the program has caused worrying among A&S officials.

"We're hoping the program is going to level off now," said Ben Black, assistant A&S dean. Black said continued increases in BGS enrollment could begin to lower the number of students in other A&S departments.

Despite the possibility, Black and other A&S administrators agree the program has been a success. When BGS was initiated, they feared that many students would take advantage of the relaxed requirements and schedule "bunny courses."

"I was cynical at first," admits Black. "But many more students than I thought are scheduling good-sense programs. We've found, when you get right down to it, it's pretty hard to schedule 45 hours of bunny courses anyway." (Black was referring to a BGS requirement of 45 hours at or above the 300 level).

Another "pleasant surprise" to Black is the effect BGS has had on employers. "I've heard no criticism from employers. If they don't like it, word hasn't gotten back here yet," he said. Most students who enter BGS stay in it. "Very few students get in the program and then switch," Black said. "Not very many (students) are critical of it either."

Although unlikely, A&S could revoke BGS, initiated as a trial program until 1978, when it will be reevaluated. But, "I assume they'll keep it," Black said.

Many major universities, including virtually all Big 10 and Ivy League schools, have a program similar to BGS. "We're in good company," said Black.

Although some students are attracted simply by the freedom

BGS

In order to enroll in BGS, a student must:
(A) have a 2.0 grade point average or better;
(B) have at least 30 hours of credit;
(C) have an advisor in A&S.

In order to graduate with a BGS degree, a student must:

- (1) fill University requirements for English composition;
- (2) complete 120 hours with a G.P.A. of 2.0 or better;
- (3) have 90 hours in A&S courses;
- (4) complete 45 hours at or above the 300 level;
- (5) write a final statement evaluating various aspects of the program and its affect on the student.

BGS enrollment on the rise

offered in BGS, many students enroll in the program to dodge foreign language or other requirements. For this reason, Black says the BGS "has kept an appreciable number of students in school, and has given several others a degree." The BGS program is not suggested for students who have indefinite academic goals in mind. Rather, as the BGS entrance form states, "students should have clearly defined degree objectives and schedule courses accordingly." Whatever the reasoning might be, BGS is sure to offer a student more discretion in course selection and academic goals than virtually any other program at the University.

Little towns, big shovels

BY JOHN SCHAAF

Staff Writer
Western Kentucky communities like Greenville, Powderly and Central City are not much different from any other small towns in America.

The houses in the towns are not large, but they look comfortable enough behind their modern re-brick facades. The yards are neatly trimmed and complete with statuary. Bird baths and black jockeys have grown like weeds on lawns all over town.

Coin laundromats, Baptist churches and used car dealerships line the streets of the towns, making life tolerable for the people of Muhlenberg County just as life is tolerable in thousands of American communities.

There is something a little unusual about Muhlenberg County, however, something that sets it apart from most other places. Muhlenberg County is the heart of an area known as the Western Coal Field, an area containing some of the richest deposits of bituminous coal in the world.

The United States is relying heavily on coal to relieve the nation's vast energy needs. Relying on coal means relying on Muhlenberg County to produce much of that mineral.

This means strip mining in Muhlenberg County.

Strip mining is a method of extracting coal from the ground by employing gigantic earth-moving machinery to tear away trees, topsoil and rocks in order to expose a vein of coal. The coal is scooped into huge trucks, carried away and used to help heat the homes and fry the bacon of an energy-starved nation.

Periodically a few people are motivated to ask what happens to the coal fields after the coal is gone and the bacon is fried. These people, called conservationists or ecology nuts, depending on who you talk to, are concerned that strip mining is not in the best interests of the land or the people who live on the land.

These conservationists claim that turning the land upside down to extract coal will have a disastrous effect on man's relation to the environment, and they ask the politicians to take some action to save the land by outlawing strip mining—or at least putting tighter restrictions on it.

The politicians, not wanting to anger anyone, sometimes call for reform in strip mining laws, but nothing much seems to happen. The politicians often show their concern by visiting some strip mines and studying the problem firsthand.

That's what happened earlier this week when a group of legislators from the Kentucky General Assembly's Committee on Agriculture and Natural Resources visited Muhlenberg County.

The politicians spent the day riding around the coal fields, listening to experts discuss the coal companies' efforts to "reclaim" the strip-mined land by planting grass and trees on the piles of rock and dirt (spoils banks) which are left behind when the coal is taken.

It was a warm day. The sun was shining brightly, interrupted periodically by the passing of one of those puffy white clouds that drift aimlessly in summer skies. The politicians had just finished lunch and were standing on top of a strip mine listening to an agronomist talk about growing new grass on the spoil banks.

As the agronomist told of planting fescue and bermuda grass, a monstrous machine was at work about a half mile away, across a vast expanse of brown dirt. Its huge orange arms were gouging out tons of earth and dumping it several hundred feet away.

To stand on a strip mine is to stand amidst incredible devastation. From where the politicians stood in a group, discussing vegetation, the scene was one of massive destruction.

It was easy to compare the picture to the aftermath of a military bombing. Vast heaps of rock and dirt were silhouetted against the sky. In the distance other strip mines were visible across the rolling countryside—other bombs exploding on other hillsides.

The brown dirt piles, where the politicians stood, were barren, void of life because they were exposed to the sun by the monster shovel which hovered nearby. Except for an occasional weed which

Temperance Union fights drugs, alcohol

BY JOHN SCHAAF
Staff Writer

On a busy street corner two blocks from the University of Kentucky a huge white house towers formidably over the smaller buildings in the neighborhood.

The house is the state headquarters of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union (WCTU) and though the building seems more powerful than most, the group which meets inside is not.

Though the WCTU has strong beliefs, they are hardly universally accepted. In fact, the WCTU is occasionally ridiculed for their gospel of abstinence from liquor, tobacco and drugs. They believe "good" things should be enjoyed only in moderation, while "bad" things (liquor, etc.) should be entirely cast aside.

WCTU is probably best known as the organization which held parades several decades ago which many times wound up at a local tavern where the group members would spend a few minutes evangelizing to the pie-eyed patrons inside...then proceed to break up the place.

However, the liquor palaces of Lexington need not fear violence from the modern version of the WCTU, according to Blanche Rentz, the "hostess" of the group's local headquarters.

"We don't go in for that type of thing anymore," Rentz said. "But we do go into some of the bars and distribute leaflets which tell those people how they are destroying their lives with alcohol."

Today's WCTU is primarily interested in reaching young people with its message of self-restraint, according to Rentz.

"We have placed anti-alcohol films in many schools throughout the state," Rentz

Galleries to be found in Lexington

BY GREG HOFELICH
Staff Writer

When it comes to the visual arts, seeing is believing. The only way to experience a painting is to stick your nose right up into it and examine the surface—the way the artist lays the paint on. And the only place where you can get this close to art (unless you're one of the lucky people who has access to a friend's studio) is in a gallery.

Lexington is hardly a mecca for gallery-goers, or even artists for that matter. But it's not the edge of the world either. In fact, some very exciting things are waiting your arrival at UK, if you're spunky enough to go out and hunt them up.

I don't know what the arts scene is like in your neck of the woods, but at UK, and in fact all over Kentucky, art seems to be diffuse. Most artists work on their own. Schoolism, so prominent in big "art" cities like San Francisco or New York, isn't a major force around here. So, the art and the artists come and go through a series of small, divergent galleries.

Let's begin with the University proper. The "big apple" on campus, as far as art galleries go, is the Fine Art Gallery. It's located in the Fine Arts Building on Rose Street which is adjacent to the President's mansion.

Fine Art Gallery shows are usually of the four-star variety and change approximately every six weeks. For example, one recent show was an extensive collection of editorial art by the cream of today's editorial cartoonists. The cartoons concerned former President Nixon and Watergate goings-on. The show (of national stature) was assembled by Richard Freeman, a UK art department faculty member. It's now touring the nation.

Generally, the Fine Art Gallery's season includes a one-man show by a UK faculty member or someone active in the University environs, as well as exhibits of touring shows.

Each year, the gallery also sports an art faculty blow-off that evolves around their most recent work in or out of class.

Something worth noting is that each show is opened with a special reception featuring some pretty dynamite refreshments. An incentive to art appreciation and a pleasant enough way to dress up an otherwise slow Sunday afternoon.

We may have the answer to a lot of your questions.

Questions like, "How am I going to meet people?" or "Where can I go and what can I do when I get to UK?"

The answer is easy. Christian Student Fellowship. We're a non-denominational group of young adults who find a lot of answers in each other's company and conversation.

We're having a get-together Tuesday and Wednesday nights, August 26th and 27th beginning at 6:00 p.m. There will be volleyball, cider, donuts ... and just maybe some of those answers.

Kingly substitutes flock to Keeneland

BY JOHN SCHAAF
Staff Writer

Horse racing is sometimes calls "the sport of kings." However, there is a distinct shortage of U.S. royalty, so it's inevitable some kingly substitutes emerge to shed blue blood on American race tracks and thoroughbred breeding farms.

Many of these royal stand-ins have become wealthy through such non-royal pursuits as earth-moving equipment, insurance sales and hamburger chains. It doesn't matter where the money comes from, the important thing is it allows earth-moving moguls and burger kings to dabble in hobbies like horse racing.

To "dabble" in horse racing it is necessary to meet, drink and spend money with fellow hobbyists. These demanding tasks are most pleasantly accomplished at the Keeneland Summer sales; an annual auction of young horses and attracting more rich people than a tax loophole.

Earlier this week, driving into the Keeneland parking lot, it was difficult to determine if the prestigious sale was in progress or if someone at the track had just received a Cadillac franchise. Rows and rows of Fleetwood Cadillacs, many bearing out-of-state plates, filled the lot surrounding the ultra-modern sales pavilion.

Rubbing their silver, thoroughbred hood ornaments for luck the horse hobbyists strolled into the cool, glassy pavilion to await the auctioneer's first call.

Inside, the bar was jammed with buyers and sellers of the best horseflesh in the world. Holding glasses of Jack Daniels, many wandered outside and stood on the lawn talking to each other.

As they milled about, the scene resembled one of Gatsby's backyard affairs except the music for the Keeneland party was provided by Tom Caldwell, a chubby auctioneer. Caldwell's sing-song voice was amplified and piped to every corner of the area. The partygoers listened with one ear as colts and fillies were paraded around a ring before being quickly auctioned off at a price usually in excess of $50,000.

Occasionally bidding became heated causing outdoor revelers to stand motionless, drinks in hand and reverently listen to Caldwell prod would-be buyers to fork over another five, 10 or 50 thousand.

"Take a look at him, he's a beauty isn't he folks?...and out of a stakes winning mare...who'll give me $100,000 for him..."

As the bidding got higher, a charge of electricity went through the crowd while the auctioneer attempted to squeeze every drop from the ripe financial melons in the audience. "Sir, I hate to see you lose him when you've come this far...how about $350,000 and you can close the door on 'em..." The hammer falls, another horse is sold and the crowd resumes their conversation—usually horse-talk.

Many of the carefully-styled and fashionably-dressed seemed to have a preconceived notion of how wealthy people are supposed to look as they all appeared to fit the mold. Standing around in leisure suits and long dresses, dangling jewelry and looking light and breezy, these people present a unique picture of American life. Most of them are tanned and healthy looking, perhaps the result of many days on tennis courts and polo fields at summer homes.

They seemed to reflect a way of life alien to most of us. A life free of the everyday tension which plagues many people—money problems, jobs, food, housing—things, which a great number of people struggle with.

At the Keeneland Sales there's an aging, bald man in a green coat. His only job is to stand in the show ring with a small rake and dustpan and clean up horse manure after each horse is led from the ring. Perhaps better than anybody else, the man described the entire two-day spectacle of beautiful horses and fashionable people when asked to sum up his duties.

"A lotta shit," he said with a grin.

The Program of the Year isn't on TV. It's in the Air Force ROTC.

Look into Air Force ROTC. And there are 4-year, 3-year, or 2-year programs to choose from. Whichever you select, you'll leave college with a commission as an Air Force officer. With opportunities for a position with responsibility... challenge... and, of course, financial rewards and security.

The courses themselves prepare you for leadership positions ahead. Positions as a member of an aircrew... or as a missile launch officer... positions using mathematics... sciences... engineering.

Look out for yourself. Look into the Air Force ROTC programs on campus.

Put it all together in Air Force ROTC.

Perhaps we've been misunderstood.

So let's set the record straight.

WCTU fights evils of drugs and alcohol said. "And we have meetings here three times a month for anyone who is interested. Mainly we discuss the detrimental effects of drinking, smoking and taking drugs."

As she speaks of the group's concern with young people, Rentz is surrounded by furniture and decorations which can best be described as "early grandmother."

There are small china figurines on the mantle, an ancient upright piano, complete with "Modern Hymnal," and a bloated couch with lace doilies protecting the arms.

Sitting on the overstuffed couch, Rentz describes several young people who have come by recently "to tell us about how they've stopped using this...what do you call it? Maro...marijuana."

Rentz also told of a UK student who dropped by the WCTU headquarters because he had developed a drinking problem.

"When he came to college he had never taken a drink," she said. "But he joined a fraternity and he said the liquor flowed like water there. Wanting to be sociable, he took a few drinks and he hasn't been able to stop drinking."

Rentz said the group referred the student to Alcoholics Anonymous since the two organizations frequently work together.

Since the WCTU has become known for such outspoken opposition to alcohol, the group's headquarters is often the target for liquor-related pranks.

"I'll wake up in the morning and beer and liquor bottles will be thrown all over the yard," Rentz said. "All I can do is pick them up and throw them in the trash. I know the garbage men must think I drink quite heavily."

Though the WCTU headquarters is only a wine bottle's throw from the UK campus, the comparative decadence of their neighbors has not deterred the group from its mission.

"We're sending out the word and we never know when one person may decide to stop drinking because of our message," Rentz said. "If you keep on fighting you will win in the end."

Phillips Market is a student 'home away from home'

BY MINDY FETTERMAN
Staff Writer

She's known as "Miz Phillips", and she runs a grocery.

"My store is a sort of home away from home for a lot of people in Lexington," Anna Phillips said. "We try to make it a place where people can come and get a good sandwich—and a smile."

Phillips Market, on the corner of Prall Street and Limestone Street, is all that and more. It's an old-fashioned country store in a city of supermarkets.

Some of the best sandwiches since mom's can be found at Phillips—chicken salad, salami, barbeque and chili dogs. "We try to take good care of our people and the home cooked way is the best way," she said.

The brown brick building has been the home of Phillips Market for 11 years. During that time its reputation has grown. Businessmen, laborers, housewives, University administrators and students know the little white-haired lady, and she knows them.

"Sometimes when things haven't gone right all day, my customers will come in and tell me about it," she said. "I'm a good listener."

Telling Phillips your troubles would be easy. She looks like everyone's favorite grandmother. Moving daintily through stacks of groceries, racks of potato chips and glass meat cases, Phillips wipes off bits of imaginary dust. Hers is a tidy establishment.

It is also filled with the aroma of good things cooking. "I don't need to advertise," she laughed. "We just open the door and make them hungry enough to come in and empty their pockets."

People come back to Phillips Market to see Phillips and to have a "Phillips Special"—60 cents worth of baloney, salami, cheese and lettuce—a meal in a sandwich.

A man returning to Lexington after five years stopped in at Phillips. "Is the Phillips Special still as good as ever?" he asked. Phillips smiled, "Honey they get better with age like me."

Though near retirement, Phillips scoffs at the idea. "I have such a sweet bunch of people here. You can see why I don't want to leave," she said. "And I'm not even old yet."

Phillips treats her customers like the children she never had. "I love having college students around," she said. But no matter what the age, everyone is greeted with, "Can I help you honey?"

It is with small children that Phillips' friendly manner really shines. A little girl came in and stood in front of the counter. As if in a Norman Rockwell painting, her eyes barely cleared the top of the counter as she stared at the candy shelf.

Phillips came from behind the counter and stooped down to the child. "Can I help you, honey?" The girl reached in her pocket and pulled out a list that had been folded many times. She shyly handed it over and smiled.

"Children are just like grownups," Phillips said. "They like to be treated like individuals."

Earth-moving machinery leaves strip mines lifeless

dares to poke out from between the broken rocks and clods of dirt, there is no life on a strip mine—no ants, no flies—nothing but a group of men discussing the mine, and they would be gone in a while.

If a strip mine resembles anything in nature it is probably a desert. Both appear to be vast expanses of dry, lifeless dirt, with little aesthetic value. A closer look at a desert, however, reveals vibrant life and intense colors among the plants and rocks.

A closer look at a strip mine will reveal nothing of the sort. If a desert resembles a symphony orchestra masterfully performing a concert of colors, then a strip mine is like a burned-out wino wheezing into a broken kazoo.

Even among the "reclaimed" mines, which were viewed admiringly by a few of the politicians, there is the feeling of walking across a shopping center parking lot which is littered with small chunks of coal and overgrown with weeds.

A walk on a strip mine can be an emotional experience. Feelings of amazement are unavoidable. It's a source of wonder that man and his machines can so effectively obliterate the natural landscape.

Wonder is quickly replaced by anger. It's not hard to be mad when you sense that a malfunctioning time machine has suddenly transformed tree-covered countryside into arid wasteland, scraped clean and seemingly awaiting the construction of a new super-dome sports complex.

However, anger is also a difficult emotion to maintain and it soon gives way to sadness, a more enduring feeling. When the sorrow settles in, it is difficult to brush away.

Every turn of the head becomes painful because it reveals another picture, previously unseen, of the shocking blight characteristic of a modern coal mine.

There are few reminders of the land's former elegance. Those which do exist—a rotting tree trunk or a stagnant pond—merely provoke the lingering sadness.

Even a look at the BIG SHOVEL belongs to the Peabody Coal Company and is used at the company's River Queen Mine near Greenville.

The shovel was a popular feature for the legislators during their tour this week. They stood, as any person would, in awe of the machine.

It's a mechanical monster straight from the pages of a 95 cent science fiction thriller. It's as tall as a 20-story building, wider than an eight-lane highway and weighs over 20 million pounds. It is capable of removing 40 million cubic yards of earth in a year.

With a touch of pride Peabody says the shovel is 45 feet higher than Niagra Falls and 90 feet taller than the Statue of Liberty—thus it is among the great landmarks on the American scene.

Whether any of these statistics amazed the legislators is unknown. Whether the legislators felt any emotions at all while visiting the strip mines is unknown. What is known is one legislator was particularly disturbed when he saw several bags of garbage which had been dumped on one of the mine sites.

"Look at that crap," he said. "People ought to have more sense than that."

It seemed to be such a weird comment. Like busting Lt. Calley for loitering in downtown My Lai—triviality in the midst of total chaos.

If there is any emotion which accompanies sadness over the strip mining destruction, it is, strangely enough, humor. While some may be saddened at what is happening, it also seems a little bit funny that humans are capable of going to such lengths to preserve and enhance their way of life.

The coal company came with the world's largest shovel

They tortured the timber and stripped all the land

They dug for the coal 'til the land was forsaken

And they wrote it all down as the progress of man. from "Paradise" by John Prine

Lexington area art galleries

This semester's season is already booked and promises an exhibit of drawings by the primo architect, Le Corbusier; a collection of work by five extremely contemporary and well-known photographers; a one-man multi-media show by John Tuska, a UK ceramicist and a show intriguingly entitled: Grass Roots—it's an extensive exhibit of regional folk and "naive" art.

The Fine Art Gallery isn't the only campus art showcase. Two "little sister" UK galleries exist. One is the Barnhardt Gallery found in the Reynolds building (the warehouse on Upper Street housing art studios) and the other is the Rasdall Gallery located in the Student Center.

Both of these galleries tend toward one-man shows or, in the case of the Barnhardt, collections of current student works.

The Barnhardt is tricky to find. The general run-of-the-mill student doesn't have much incentive to bop over that way unless he goes to specifically catch what's showing. The Barnhardt is probably most consistently the most avant-garde local gallery.

More readily accessible to the student body is the Rasdall Gallery, located on the second floor of the Student Center. Shows here change approximately every two to three weeks and range from local grown to the real heavy, imported types. This gallery is small, but well-appointed, and consistently displays very high grade, upbeat collections. Particularly notable past shows include several ceramic exhibits and some mixed media and polymar collections.

One more gallery exists on campus, that's the Pence Hall Gallery or galleries, I should say. One is located in the basement hall and features student and faculty work ranging from watercolors to schematic drawings, etc.

Upstairs, is the main Pence gallery, exhibiting a good deal of photography in addition to graphic and fine arts exhibits. Some of the most exciting local shows have been housed there in the past few years, but they suffer from a lack of publicity. So you have to hunt them up.

Usually the Kernel can clue you in on what's going on at most of these various galleries, also informative posters (the predominant means of intercommunication on this campus) magically appear at some of the more heavily traveled bulletin boards in the classroom building, the journalism building and the fine arts building.

While not a gallery per se, the anthropology museum, located in Lafferty Hall between the library and the classroom building, displays many permanent collection objects that are interesting for their intrinsic artistic worth as well as fascinating as historical artifacts.

The museum, currently in the throes of renovation, is adding a special exhibit room to this permanent display area.

The museum owns a substantial number of artifacts which are displayed according to regions and peoples, according to staff members. The museum attempts, in display, to shed some light on the total lifestyle of the peoples via their art and practical utensils.

Beyond UK proper there are other interesting galleries that aren't too far off the student's beaten path. For example, on Cooper Drive near the Complex and just adjacent to the Sports Center and Commonwealth Stadium is the home office for Kentucky Educational Television (KET). Their building houses the Skylight Gallery which formerly showed a wide variety of collections.

Under the present management, however, the gallery has opted for a more permanent display of KET graphic art. This includes wood cuts, poster art, pencil sketches and full color sketches. The gallery is open daily from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., except Saturday.

About four or five blocks down Euclid from Rose Street is a Lexington subdivision called Chevy Chase. Not only are a lot of fascinating shops located here, (antiques, plants, patchwork, liquor, etc.) but two galleries as well.

They are McCann-Wood Gallery and Guild Gallery. Both are designed to sell the work of associated artists.

The McCann-Wood is small, but displays wide variety of professional work. The Gallery also houses a small exhibit room which has hosted some fine painting, sculpture and ceramic art shows.

The Guild Gallery leans more toward crafts and skills, however, some really fine prints and serigraphy by regional professionals can be found there. The gallery is designed to provide a practical outlet for professional work, so artists and the general public both benefit. You'll want to check it out.

There are two biggies left outside campus. One is under renovation and probably won't be accessible until well after you arrive on campus, depending upon its funding. That's the Public Library gallery, located downtown across from Transylvania University and Gratz Park. The other is the Living Arts and Sciences Center—probably the single most comprehensive art gallery and workshop in the entire Lexington area.

Record-breaking wrestlers should be strong again

BY JOHN VOGEL
Staff Writer

The Wildcat wrestling team, in only its third varsity season, seems to be riding the tidal wave of success. Under the guidance of head coach Fletcher Carr and assistant Ed Brown the varsity matters last season (1) set an NCAA record for most wins in a season—26, (2) earned a second place finish in the SEC tournament, (3) received national recognition in Sports Illustrated and (4) sent four wrestlers to the NCAA tournament.

"I gained a lot of satisfaction from our performance this past year," Carr noted.

Kentucky's successful wrestling program last season has been helped this year by an increased budget. "Both the school and (athletic director) Cliff Hagan have helped," Carr said. "All we have to do now is get the students to back us.

"Our experience the past two years has made it easier for us to get to the people and explain things to them," Carr said. "We'll probably be on local television a few times next year and we could possibly be on national television for one of our matches against Florida next year. When you've got a good program building everything comes around," Carr said.

This season the Cats may pose a serious threat to teams in the Southeastern Conference and to those in the NCAA finals. Ranked 12th in a pre-season poll, the UK squad will face SEC teams which are "predicted to be powers," Carr said.

Kentucky should make a shambles of their SEC competition this winter as it returns Carr's two younger brothers, Jimmy and Joe, both of whom will be ranked number one in the nation in their respective weight classes.

Another reason for Carr's optimism is "the best recruiting year I've ever had," Carr said. "I'll have to give the kids time to mature, but the talent is there."

Here is a short sketch by

Carr of the returning UK matters, freshmen and junior college transfers:

—118. Garrett Headley—SEC champ last year.

—126. Jim Carr—I don't have to say too much about him. I expected him to lose two matches last year, and he only lost one. This year he shouldn't lose a match, bar injury, and be the national champ.

—134. Kurt Mock—He did everything for me last year (NCAA finalist). Kurt set a record for most pins for UK (12). Lost but two matches.

—142. Tim Mousetis—Straight A student. He's a comer, co-captain for this year. Tim's a leader who gives you 100 per cent all the time.

—150. Scott Crowell—Wrestled at 158 for us last year. Saved a couple of matches for us. Even while he was injured he wanted to wrestle for us.

Joe Murray—Constantly wrestled anywhere I wanted him.

Despite loss of key players, baseball prospects are bright

BY BARRY FORBIS
Sports Editor

Despite losing four key players to graduation, UK head baseball coach Tuffy Horne is optimistic about his team's chances in this season's Southeastern Conference race.

Gone are third baseman Herb Hammond, catcher-first baseman Marvis Foley and starting pitchers Ed McCaw and Mike Howard.

Those four players represent last season's leading hitter in Foley (eight home runs, .352 average), a steady hitter and excellent defensive player in Hammond, a dependable hurler in Howard and the SEC's top pitcher in McCaw (7-3 record, 0.73 ERA).

That's a pretty big chunk out of Horne's baseball team. But, the soft-spoken coach is not pulling out his hair. He's not banging his head against the wall. He's not even kicking his trash can.

Horne's talking about divisional championships...and maybe more.

"I think we'll battle it out with Georgia for the divisional title," he said. "We're about as strong as they are, and I think last year we finally realized that we can play with some of these tougher conference teams."

Optimism alone will not win ball games, though. And,

Tennis team blessed with vast experience

BY DAVID WEHRLE
Staff Writer

Football and basketball occupy most of the limelight in the UK athletics scene, but other sports here are coming into their own.

Tennis, in particular, seems to be gaining more recognition than in the past. Since taking over the head coaching duties four years ago, Graddy Johnson has guided UK to an impressive 77-32 record.

The Wildcats chalked up 22 victories in 26 matches last season, including the first win ever over a Tennessee squad—a feat Johnson rates as one of the highlights of the year.

Everyone will return for the Wildcats this year except number five singles and team captain Steve Gilliam, who was lost to graduation.

Number one singles, Scott Smith, is expected to retain his top position where he finished 16-9, including 6-2 in Southeastern Conference competition.

Other solid performers are Glen Booth, Chet Algood, Jamie Howell, Rob Wallace and Paul Pursley.

The Wildcats finished fifth in the conference last year behind Florida, Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama.

"Our conference probably has four teams ranked in the top 25," the head coach said.

With continued improvement, the Wildcats might just make it five pretty soon.

Rugby still growing despite $350 budget

BY JOE GRAN CLARK
Staff Writer

They don't have a stadium seating 50,000 people and the budget is only $350 a year. However, the rugby program at UK continues to grow, and the teams improve each year.

Last year's UK team compiled a record of 16-5-3 and finished second in the Southeastern Conference tournament losing to LSU in the finals.

About 80 per cent of the plays are returning from last year's team, and hopes are high for another exceptional season. Almost two-thirds of last year's team were freshmen so there is a great deal of vitality and youth.

Eight matches are scheduled for the fall semester, and fifteen matches are planned for the spring. The last competition will be the SEC tournament near the end of the spring semester.

Highlights of the fall season include matches with Evansville and Louisville. These two cities always field excellent teams, and there is a close rivalry between these area clubs.

Long drive faces UK golf team

BY JOE GRAN CLARK
Staff Writer

Golf is a game of uncertainty with high odds for success. Trying to match or better par usually is frustrating for the average duffer, but the UK golfers have it even worse.

The competition they face in the Southeastern Conference generally is regarded as the toughest in the nation. Florida's record as the SEC's best college golf school for the past 20 years is unquestioned. Alabama, Georgia and LSU have exceptional teams year after year as well.

Kentucky's team, located in the pretty, but cold Bluegrass is faced with many obstacles. The weather allows fewer days to practice. The sports budget cannot contribute much money. And, Kentucky doesn't have the prestige in golf that many of the other schools enjoy.

Still, Kentucky is not faced with unbeatable odds. Only high ones. Competing in most of the major tournaments against the nation's toughest competition, the team's overall performance was quite impressive last year.

Kentucky finished above the .500 mark for the season and placed eighth in the SEC post-season tournament.

The nucleus of last year's team will be returning. Mike Nelms, the defending Tennessee amateur champion, is UK's top golfer. Jim Ridd's, who finished fifth in the Kentucky State Amateur Tournament, is expected to be UK's No. 2 golfer.

Also returning are Stewart Wheeler, Carter Matheis, Bart Mahan and Steve Mills.

In addition the Wildcats have signed Bill Hamilton of Indianapolis, Ind., Ray Goodman of Decatur, Ill., Bryan Leake of Lebanon and Ralph Landrum of Elsmere.

Another new face will be head coach Dan Leal. Leal, an assistant football coach and recruiter, is replacing Dan McQueen, who resigned after 5 years as head coach.

The Wildcats will participate in four tournaments this fall. They open the season Sept. 20 in the Eastern Kentucky University Fall Invitational.

The next week, Kentucky travels to Calloway Gardens, Ga., for the Dixie Intercollegiate Golf Championships (Sept. 26-28). The Ohio State University Invitational (Oct. 3-5) and the Reed House Intercollegiate Golf Championships in Memphis, Tenn. (Oct. 16-18) are also on the UK fall schedule.

Optimism

hopes are high as women's athletics begins second year

BY DONNA HARGIS
Staff Writer

learn new skills so the team can keep its state title intact.

One year ago, women's varsity athletics at Kentucky was born.

Now, the fledgling department is growing, and Sue Feamster, director of women's athletics, is optimistic about its second year here.

"We've made a lot of improvements and added a lot of personnel," she said.

One of the improvements has been the establishment of a women's advisory board to counsel Feamster in what she calls the "gray" areas of her administration.

"The board is divided into three sub-committees," she said. "A long-range planning committee to work on what kinds of facilities, schedules and things like that we'll need in the future; a scholarship committee and a budget committee."

Right now the board is studying women's club sports in the hope of adding some of them to the varsity list next year.

"We've made quite a few innovations in the individual sports this year, too," Feamster said.

The girls' tennis team, which won the state championship last year, will move inside for indoor practices, and Claudia Young, the UK tennis coach, is hoping the University will be able to host the regional tennis tournament this year.

Field hockey will be going to a week-long training camp in the Poconos (N.Y.) before the season in an effort to learn new skills so the team

can keep its state title intact.

The golf team, which finished eighth in the state, is expected to name a new coach soon.

The squad only lost one player, April Bain, but added some strong new members.
Myra Van Hoose will be playing for the team under a K-Wives sponsored scholarship. Karen Watson, a former state high school champion, is transferring from Ashland Community College, and two other girls, transferring from Transylvania and Odessa Junior College in Texas will join her.

The gymnastics team, which was third in the state and fifth in the region last season, has signed one girl of "national caliber," Feamster said.

This will be Feamster's last year as coach of the Lady Kats basketball team. She will be assisted by Dan Adkins, who managed the basketball Wildcats for three years and assisted Roy Walton, coach at Lexington Bates Creek High school.

The team lost only two girls, Susie Switzer and Laura Schwager, but added a host of new members from the high school ranks.

Debbie Mack of Lexington
Lafayette and Janet Timper-man of Louisville Assumption, both All-Staters, will play guard and forward, respectively. Terry Galloway (guard) from Memphis State,
Karen Lewis from Louisville
Iroquois and Melinda Warner of Louisville Seneca will also join the team.

Campus recreation plans new programs

BY DONNA HARGIS
Staff Writer

Campus recreation's intramural department is buzzing with new ideas for this year.

Pilot projects—including inner tube water polo and coed wrestling and something Campus Director of Recreation Bernard Johnson calls "one-night stands"—are going to be introduced to the students.

"We want to stress the recreational part of our program," Johnson said. "Sometimes it seems like all anyone is interested in is points. We're hoping these new projects will bring in a little more fun along with the competition."

Inner tube water polo is just that. It's water polo played with everybody wearing an inner tube. Six coed players will be on each team, and the rules will be much like regular water polo.

Coed wrestling also lives up to its name. The rules are very simple. One girl and one boy square off, but the boy has his hands tied behind his back.

The boy must pin the girl, but the girl only has to get her opponent on his back to win the match. Needless to say, the men rarely win.

"This has been tried out in other schools," Johnson said. "And it's been a huge success everywhere."

Also on the list of new things to do at the Seaton Center will be "one-night" affairs. This will include events like tug-of-war (the first event on the intramural calendar this year), one-night tournaments in tennis or ping-pong, and a co-recreational "date" night.

"We want to open the gyms on Friday nights, and let everybody come in to play," Johnson said. "Guys could bring their dates. It would certainly be cheaper than a movie and healthier too."

In an effort to encourage student golfers, campus recreation has arranged with all the metro golf courses for students with valid I.D. cards to play at reduced rates during the week.

There will be an organizational meeting Sept. 2 for anyone interested in intramural sports. Exact times will be announced later.

"We mainly want to get the freshmen involved," Johnson said. "The first year, it's really hard to meet others and intramurals provide a way."

Anyone with questions concerning intramurals should call 258-2808, or go to Room 135 of the Seaton Center.

Football: Vastly improved Cats face tougher schedule

BY JOHN YOGEL
Staff Writer

"We should have a more improved football team this season, but our schedule improves, too."

In 15 words Wildcat football coach Fran Curci, knowingly or not, summed up what's in store for UK gridiron enthusiasts this fall.

This season will be challenging to the Curci bunch as it must face seven teams that played in post-season bowl games last season. "That's going to be our problem," Curci said.

"We could very easily have a much improved football team and not have as good a record (as last year's 4-5 mark)," the head coach said. "This year's going to be a bit of a struggle."

But before everyone drops his news paper in shock and runs to enroll in another university that promises a glorious football season as Kentucky had last season, here are a few reasons to stick around Lexington this fall.

Reason number one is the promising Wildcat offense machine. All-American candidate Sonny Collins, a whirling dervish on legs returns for one more year. Already UK's all-time rushing leader, the Bluegrass hero will beat the Southeastern Conference rushing record in his first three or four games this season.

Collins, who broke his ankle in UK's homecoming game against Vanderbilt last fall, is in his "money" year which should be inspiration enough for the Madisonville star to excel.

"Sonny is a real classy kind of guy," Curci noted. "He's got a lot of pride in his ability. All summer he's been running twice a day because of his ankle. He's not only a good athlete, but he is making his ability work for him." Curci said.

"I don't think anybody on our team is working out like he is," Curci added. "He wants to be ready."

However, Collins is not the only guy in the Big Blue machine. Senior Steve Campness, paired with the all-time UK rushing leader, is back to punch out handage along with superb backup stars, Bill Bartos and Joe DiPre. Both Bartos and DiPre starred in last year's upset victory over Florida, when the Cats were minus Collins with his broken ankle.

Sophomore Ken Northington, seen as Collins' future replacement, will not be back this fall due to second- and third-degree burns he suffered earlier this summer while working. "We don't see how Ken can be ready this fall because of his injury," Curci admitted.

Curci has indicated that junior Cliff Hite will fill the void at quarterback created by the graduation of Mike Fanuzzi. "Right now Cliff is number one," Curci said. "He has the experience."

Sophomore Derek Ramsey is expected to battle Hite for the number one position this fall when practice begins Aug. 19. "Derek is a very talented young man," Curci said. "But we don't have time to dilly-dally around like spring (practice). When we come back in the fall, things are going to have to fall in place right away."

Ramsey is a 6-5, 215-pound throwing whiz. But with Curci's desire to remain with the veer offense (which operates primarily with the running attack), Hite, also a fine passer, has established himself over Ramsey so far.

Reason number two for not giving up on UK's football team, despite the murderous schedule, is the return of giant linemen Warren Bryant and Art Still and the Cats' backfield defensive corps.

Bryant, a starter as a sophomore on the offensive line, should make the All-SEC team, at the least. So should 6-7 Art Still, a defensive lineman and a freshman who broke into the starting lineup last season. In UK's 2013 squeaker over LSU last October, Still knocked down four Bengal passes, sacked the Bengal quarterback for 37 yards in losses and made nine solo tackles.

The defensive backfield corps lost the services of Ben Thomas due to graduation, but will return starters Tony Gray, Greg Woods, Ray Carr and Jim Kovach. Of the bunch, only Kovach, a sophomore, can tip the scales at 200 pounds or more. Weight isn't everything, however, as UK's backfield was in motion against Tulane last season, scoring on three interceptions, the longest being Woods' 45-yard (aunt to pay)!

For the first time since former UK star Lou Groza played for the Cats in the early 1950's, the placekicking position is in such good hands. Junior John Pierce returns to guarantee three points inside the 30-yard line and points after touchdowns.

All-American center Rick Nuzum is gone, though, and so is punter John Tafferson. Both positions are up in the air for grabs now. "Those are the ones where we are in immediate trouble," Curci admitted.

Curci, however, could not be talked into cancelling this season, though facing seemingly insurmountable odds. "You can never take the emotions out of a contest," he said. "Last season we kicked off some good ones and lost some games we never should have."

"The emotions in the football game are something that you can't ever get rid of. It's a position where we're really, more equal than we have been with teams. Then it comes down to the emotional hangover."

While people may be casting a wary eye at the teams UK must play this fall, there is a developing, Curci feels, a new enthusiasm for football not seen around the Bluegrass for some time.

"I've had several people pull me aside and tell me how well we're going to do," Curci said, grinning. "It's interesting that two years ago nobody was thinking like this. Now all of a sudden, we have basically the same players. We've improved ourselves quite a bit, but now with a little bit of success people have us winning the conference!"

"We're not anywhere near that, but the excitement of the people is just fantastic," Curci said. "The whole scheme has changed. The whole outlook towards going to a football game has changed now."

"It's a fun thing, an all-day affair," Curci emphasized. "Really pull for the old" team. That's the fun of college football. That part is here! Now if we just start winning...it's just going to be a glorious time."

Wildcat machine faces major overhaul, but Joe Hall has plenty of spare parts

BY BARRY FORBIS
Sports Editor

Last year Kentucky won the Southeastern Conference basketball title, upset the nation's top-ranked team in the Midwest Regional and advanced all the way to the NCAA Finals before losing to perennial basketball king UCLA.

The average fan would be satisfied to cherish last season's performance for the next 10 years. But Kentucky basketball enthusiasts are a different breed. They are not enough. You have to do it consistently. In fact, right now most Wildcat fans are probably wondering how Kentucky is going to do for the next year.

True, the Wildcat machine must be rebuilt after the graduation of Kevin McHewy, Jimmy Dan Conner, Bob Guyette and Mike Flynn. But remember: Hall has some pretty good spare parts left from last season.

Take, for example, the three 6-10 centers who were so impressive as freshmen last year. The towering trio—Rick Robey, Mike Phillips and Danny Hall—are back with an important year of experience under their belts.

And, then there's Jack Givens. A deadly shooter from within 20 feet, the former Mr. Kentucky Basketball may be called upon to bear the scoring load this season.

Hall also has defensive wizard Larry Johnson back for his junior season. "Larry's continued to improve every year he's been here," Hall said. "It looks like next year he's going to be our most improved player."

Husky James Lee, the 6-5 forward who battled opponents under the basket in several key relief roles last year, has a good chance of breaking into the starting lineup. Merion Haskins, who was used last year when Kentucky needed defensive help, also has a shot at the starting five.

And Hall recruited four blue-chippers this spring. Three of the four are guards and should help fill the vacancies left by Conner, Flynn and Jerry Hale.

Pat Foschi, a 6-4 guard, is "an excellent passer and playmaker," Hall said. "He moves the ball as well on the dribble and gets the ball to the open man as well as anybody."

There's a player that is completely unselfish, almost to the point that it takes away from his scoring potential," he added. "To be a complete ballplayer he needs to score a little more than he likes to."

"You usually face that every year," UK head basketball coach Joe Hall said. "It's either what are you going to do for an encore or what are you going to do to get back on top."

This season is a particular kind of challenge," he added. "Whenever you graduate the bulk of your ball club and you're coming back rebuilding, it's a big question. Not only in the fans' mind, but also in yours as a coach."

Unbelievable? Kentucky mark! Those who do not expect anything to mind those of us who are rebuilding. But then, the basketball picture at UK is not quite as dark as it seems. It may make it appear.

Truman Claytor, a 6-2 guard from Toledo, Ohio, is "one of the finest guards I've ever seen in high school," Hall said. "He comes to us as one of the best guards we've ever recruited in the 10 years I've been at Kentucky."

"He's got unlimited potential in all areas of the game," he added. Bob Fowler, the only forward signed by Hall, has unquestionable raw talent. The 6-4 forward has quick hands, a good shooting touch and an incredible vertical leap of 43 inches.

Fowler has his great jumping ability and because of it, he has failed to develop his total game," Hall said. "He has a lot of work to do—developing his offensive moves and his defensive positioning, but physically, someone who has the strength

Another big guard is 6-3 Duane Casey of Union County. A good jumper and deadly outside shooter, Casey has been compared to Johnson, his former high school teammate. "At this stage Duane may be ahead of what Larry was at this stage in overall play," Hall said. "But it's hard to determine how fast Duane will improve... if he makes the same kind of progress as Larry did, perhaps he'll be as good a player as Larry."

Truman Claytor, a 6-2 guard from Toledo, Ohio, is "one of the finest guards I've ever seen in high school," Hall said. "He comes to us as one of the best guards we've ever recruited in the 10 years I've been at Kentucky."

"He's got unlimited potential in all areas of the game," he added. Bob Fowler, the only forward signed by Hall, has unquestionable raw talent. The 6-4 forward has quick hands, a good shooting touch and an incredible vertical leap of 43 inches.

UK big man, Rick Robey, who will be a sophomore, played a dominant role last year, leading the Wildcats to their second place NCAA finish.

he has—the physical size, the good hands and the great jumping ability—has the potential to develop into a great ball-player."

Kentucky's top signee in the spring recruiting season was 6-8 forward-center Bill Willoughby. But Willoughby, the top high school forward prospect in the nation, jumped to the pros.

"He was the kind of player who really could have come in and helped us early," Hall said. "What has happened is that we not only failed to get Willoughby, but we also failed to get someone in his place."

After we signed him, we turned a few players down because we didn't need any more forwards and two or three turned us down because they didn't want to compete with Willoughby."

Even with Willoughby, Hall could not expect the SEC race to be a cakewalk. Conference co-champion Alabama returns three starters including the SEC's top center Leon Douglas. Tennessee has

All-SEC forwards Ernie Grunfield and Bernard King returning, and Auburn and Georgia will return young, but experienced teams.

Vanderbilt has its F troop—Joe Ford, Butch Fehrer and Jeff Fones—back for one more year. "They'll be in about the same position we were last year," Hall said. "They won the conference as sophomores, and then had a disappointing season last year as juniors. Now they'll be back, pretty much repeating the roles our seniors played last year."

Louisiana State and Mississippi recruited several junior college players who may be able to crack their starting lineups before the season is over.

"The SEC is going to be much stronger this year than it has in the past as the conference continues to grow and recruit more and more talent each year," Hall said. "The depth of the conference is just phenomenal. It's going to be a very tough race."

UK All-American Sonny Collins will return this year to lead Wildcat running backs.

Wildcat forward Jack Givens returns this year as a probable starter after playing a prominent role as a reserve last year.

Jimmy Dan Conner (now graduated) and Larry Johnson, who will return this year, helped the Wildcats topple Ole' Miss last season.

Return Policy

The University Book Store will allow a full return on any book purchased in the store up to TWO WEEKS from the date of purchase.

If a new book is returned for a refund or exchange, it must be in new condition. Autographed copies or copies with underlining that cannot be returned to the publisher as new books will not be accepted for full refund or exchange.

Books purchased during the summer for use in the fall may be returned or exchanged for other texts if you find it necessary to change a course or section, provided you have your sales slip, and the refund or exchange is within TWO WEEKS of the beginning of the fall semester.

Buy-Back Policy

When selling your books at the end of the semester, keep in mind that:

- 50 per cent of the list will be paid for the current editions of textbooks for which we have received orders from the departments for the coming semesters. (Except for books on which we are overstocked.)
- Up to 30 per cent of the list price for current editions for which we have no order or current editions which have been discontinued. This will depend on the current wholesale price.
- Up to 25 per cent for paperback books which are not considered textbooks by the publishers.

Keep Your Sales Receipt

No refunds will be made without a sales receipt. It is necessary and also a good record of your purchases.

Welcome students!

Dear Student:

On behalf of the University Book Store, let me welcome you to the University of Kentucky.

The University Book Store is owned and operated by the University for the convenience of students and faculty. Our primary function is to make available books and supplies necessary for your education. We have used books, engineering drawing equipment, a very complete art department, paperback books and all required supplies. You will also find a selection of sweat shirts, jackets, gym wear, souvenir pottery and glassware, as well as a varied line of stationery, greeting cards, health and beauty aids and an extensive record selection.

The University Book Store is located on the ground floor of the Student Center. Of special interest to you if you live in the Blanding-Kirwan Complex is our Complex Sundry Shop, a small facility located for your convenience in the Complex Central Facility. The Sundry Shop stocks notebooks, fillers, greeting cards, records, health and beauty aids. Don't miss this neat little nook.

We look forward to seeing you in the Student Center. Come into the Book Store and give us the opportunity to serve you.

Coin Lockers

Coin return lockers for your use while shopping in the Book Store are located inside the entrance to the Book Store. A quarter is required to remove the key and is REFUNDED when the key is returned to the lock and unlocked. These lockers are large enough to hold your books and personal items in storage while you are shopping at the University Book Store.

Marking New Books

You will notice that all pricing of new books are done in charcoal, which is erasable. Publishers do not extend credit on returned books with any marks in them. Due to this fact, we cannot make refunds on books with markings of any kind and we constantly stress: DO NOT WRITE IN A BOOK UNTIL YOU ARE POSITIVE YOU ARE GOING TO USE IT.

Book Sales and Costs

The largest department we have, and from which more than 64 per cent of our sales are derived, is the book department. Most of the problems we have are centered within this department of the University Book Store. Textbooks are the expensive tools of the trade—the tools of being a student. National figures suggest that books for required courses cost about 4-5 per cent of one's total educational expenses—when you figure that you receive 80-85 per cent of your education from textbooks, your investment in these books is one of the most profitable to your entire educational process.

The pricing of new textbooks is determined solely by the publisher, and prices are subject to change at their discretion. From the price structure offered by Publishers, stores receive a 20 per cent discount on which to operate. Average figures across the country indicate that it costs about 25.7 per cent of the gross profit to operate a textbook department.

Orders for textbooks are placed about 3-4 months prior to need. A requisition form from the academic department supplies the store with the title, author, publisher, and the number of students expected to enroll in the class. We request these book orders from the faculty as early as possible in order to allow time to screen the used book market as thoroughly as possible. By this method, we can get early leads on used books; by stocking used books, we can save your up to 25 per cent on book costs.

Often we are asked why a $1.65 copy of "MOBY DICK" is required when we have a $.50 edition of this title in stock. THIS IS NOT THE UNIVERSITY STORE'S CHOICE—nor should it be. It is a faculty decision based on the edition's special footnotes, appendix, or other justifiable reasons.

There are several reasons why we may, occasionally, run out of textbooks or fail to have them available when classes begin. One of the major reasons is the fluctuation in class size. It is not unusual, because of unexpectedly high enrollment in some courses, to have entire new sections created as classes begin. Classes projected at 200 could easily have an actual enrollment of twice that number, without the store being forewarned. When this does occur, we immediately call for books; their subsequent arrival is dependent upon availability and shipping time. Also, there are a few orders for books which the store might not receive until after classes begin. This may be a result of a late faculty arrival or failure by a professor to choose his books far enough in advance of the semester.

We hope that you will utilize your University Book Store, keeping in mind that the Book Store is always open to any suggestions from students in a continuing effort to better serve the University community.

Soccer team ignored but still confident

BY WALTER HIXSON
Assistant Managing Editor

With a host of returning players, the UK Soccer Club hopes to improve on last year's impressive 10-5-5 record.

Among the returning standouts are goalie John Maloney, fullbacks Don Hisam and Jack Robinson, and forwards Paul Laureman and Kari Teraslinni.

These regulars, plus 14 returning underclassmen, are being counted on by Coach Abdelmonem Rizk for added depth on the 60-man squad.

Rizk says the team's outlook is "very good" for the coming season. It has to be, he says because the soccer club faces a tough schedule.

Most of the teams Kentucky will play are proven in soccer-playing ability. The Wildcats' opponents include Indiana University, Purdue, University of Chicago, Cincinnati, Berea, Eastern Kentucky University and rival Tennessee.

Home games are played at the Seaton Center soccer field where crowds usually number around 200, Rizk says.

"There's definitely interest in soccer in Kentucky," Rizk said. "We're the major school in the state, so we should be the leader," he added.

But, because the UK soccer club is a club, and not a registered sport with varsity status, the funding task has become increasingly difficult.

A dismal interest in UK soccer was noted by this reporter when he asked a secretary in the sports information department for facts about the UK soccer club. She said, "We don't have anything on the soccer team except the coach's name."

According to Athletic Director Cliff Hagan, there is "No interest on the UK athletic board to 'varsitize' soccer. We're having enough difficulty now in supporting our programs to support non-income programs. It's not our problem," Hagan said.

Despite some hardships, the soccer team plans to keep on plugging for the 200 or so spectators who are interested enough in their program.

Freshmen bolster UK swimming

BY JOHN VOGEL
Staff Writer

Two years ago coach Wynn Paul's swim team struggled to a 3-6 dual meet record and a last-place finish in the Southeastern Conference swimming championships.

Last year, however, UK's second-year coach recruited several outstanding thoroughbreds to strengthen his stable and produced the following: (1) A 9-3 dual meet season—"The best season I've ever had", (2) Two people who qualified for the NCAA Championships in Cleveland, (3) A first-place finish in the Kentucky Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Championships, the first time the Wildcats have won the tourney since 1963, and (4) 10 team records set by last year's squad.

But, as you very cleverly noticed no mention was made of UK's SEC finish, which was a distant seventh, a step up from last year, but only seventh nevertheless.

The best cure for a poor SEC finish is to hit the recruiting trail, and Paul confirmed that "as far as recruiting goes, this is the best group we've had since I've been here. We have six outstanding swimmers, all courted by other schools. The guys we get in this year are really going to help because we have six "solid" seniors that we are going to miss after next season," Paul said.

Two-time Kentucky high school backstroke champion Greg Shepherd was Paul's first signee. Shepherd holds the state high school record for the 100-yard backstroke and is a "super prospect," Paul said.

Dan Ward, of Hawken High

School in Cleveland, falls into Paul's "outstanding" category, holding times in both the 100- and 200-yard butterfly events under the UK varsity record.

Connecticut state high school diving champ Peter Craig appears to be a real recruiting catch. From Darien High, Craig "is very muscular, has great board-work and real good mechanics," Paul said.

The other three "outstanding" swimmers Paul signed are all from Florida.

Mike Edwards, a junior college transfer from Indian Rivers, swims the 50- and 100-yard freestyle sprints.

Bob Arnold, whose hometown is Coral Gables, swims the 50-, 100- and 200-yard sprints and was a finalist in the state high school meet last season. The other Floridian, Ted Bresnahan, swims all the freestyle events from the 50- to 1,650-yard races.

The UK swim team lost but three performers from last year's squad—diver Alan Doering, breaststroker Phil Wilder and sprinter Rob Livingston. "Almost everybody is back," Paul said. "Most of them are swimming this summer to keep in shape."

Sophomore sensation John Denison, who qualified for the NCAA Championships in the 500-yard freestyle race last season, set varsity records in the 200- and 500-yard races this past year. Denison is training at home (Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio) while his roommate this past season, distance specialist Dave Cornell is training at home in Detroit.

Other key personnel are the Rubenstein twins, Dave and Rick, Bob Wohl, Steve Stocksdales and Randy Eli.

Recruiting strengthens water polo

BY JOHN VOGEL
Staff Writer

The Wildcat water polo team trudged through an 8-4 season last year with little excitement being generated about the Cats' chances in the upcoming conference tournament. The year before, fans saw their team's big chance to advance to the NCAA finals in California dashed to the rocks by its unexpected collapse at tournament time.

So last year, UK's water polo fans maintained a low key approach going into the Midwest Conference tournament. And again, Kentucky's chances to advance to the NCAA finals in California were dashed to the rocks by its ragged team play.

Following the Cats' second whipping in the tournament (double elimination) coach Wynn Paul swore to himself that he had to alleviate his team's upsetting tournament play. So he hit the recruiting trail. Here is what he caught..

Floridian Bob Arnold, the state's number one high school water polo player. Arnold measures in at 6-5, 200 pounds and has "an arm like a bullet," according to Paul.

The number four water polo player in Florida, Ted Bresnahan, was also lured to play at UK. "Both Ted and Bob are looking forward to playing together on the same team," Paul noted, happily.

Another top prospect, the number five player from Missouri, Joe Pohrer, from St. Louis, has also found a home in the Bluegrass. So has high school honorable mention All-American Bob West from Lexington and Bruce Herr from Georgia, the most valuable player at Mercersburg Academy last season.

"Bresnahan and Arnold are probably the two outstanding players we recruited," Paul said. "We have 11 freshmen and 12 returnees, which is a big squad. There's going to be a lot of scrapping to see who makes the traveling squad because we only take 12," Paul said.

The luxury of having the numbers to work with is best seen at the goalie position. "We're going to have four guys who can play goalie so someone's going to have to sit on the bench.

"I think we'll have three starters from the freshmen and we're considering platooning our players since we have quite a few," Paul said.

Track coach sees improvement over last year's lowly finish

BY FRANKLIN RENFRO
Staff Writer

Despite Kentucky's poor performance in track and field last year, head coach Ken Olson is highly optimistic about the upcoming season.

In fact, the young coach said he believed the Southeastern Conference race

"will go down to the wire with Tennessee, Florida and Kentucky."

The Wildcats last season finished in a tie for sixth in the SEC's indoor meet and placed seventh in the outdoor meet.

But, added experience in the distance events may mean the difference this year, Olson said.

It is very difficult to achieve excellence in all track and field events, so Olson's solution is to concentrate on just a few events this year. "Our primary thrust will be in the distances," he said.

Two potential All-Americans head a list of impressive distance runners. Jim Buell, a national junior 10,000-meter champion, and Max Hadley, considered one of the best in the nation in the steeplechase, should help substantially in the distance events.

And Olson hopes the addition of two freshmen football players will strengthen the team in the sprinting events.

Rod Stewart, a speedster from Lancaster, Ohio, and Bobby Hawkins, a 9.5-second 100-yard man from Mount Sterling, have agreed to join the UK spikesters next spring.

Olson also is hoping Ken Northington, another football player, will be able to return. Northington was injured in a construction accident in May and already has decided not to play football this fall.

He may be back for spring track, however. "The football

Wrestling team riding high

John Griggs—Man with the guts on our team—weighed 150 but would go up to 190 just to try to help the team.

—167. Joe Carr—Didn't have a loss last year and placed third in the nationals. This year, coming back he'll be ranked number one in the country. He is undoubtedly one of the most physical wrestlers on the team.

—177. Brian Wilson—Gave us that effort. Not much on talent, but has that desire.

Graduation took its toll in the 190-pound and heavy-weight classes. Mike Cassity, who has one year of eligibility left, probably will not return to the 190-pound class, Carr said. Heavyweight Pat Donley has graduated.

In the heavyweight class this year Carr has the likes of "three potential stars" in Dan Fowler, at 6-½, 245 pounds, Jeff Hess, 6-0, 230, and Kelly Kirchbaum, 6-2, 240. All three are on the football team, and Kirchbaum was the Kentucky state heavyweight champ last year.

Despite loss of key players, baseball prospects are bright

Horne is counting on his team's experience and improved depth to help fatten the victory column.

The outfield is UK's strongest suit. All three outfielders—Jim Sherrill, Billy Fouch and Darrell Saunders—will be starting for the fourth year in a row.

Sherrill, a definite All-SEC candidate this season, hit .312 from his leadoff spot last year. The speedy leftfielder also led the Wildcats in hits (49) the past season.

Centerfielder Fouch is an All-SEC candidate, also. The husky senior batted .299 last year and led the Cats in RBIs with 29.

Saunders, UK's rightfielder, has "the best arm in the outfield," Horne said. "He's an outstanding outfielder, a real competitor. On several occasions last spring, he came up with the big hit."

Steve Heuerman, a junior switch-hitter, is the third baseman. Alternating at third with Hammond last year, he batted .248 and drove in 19 runs.

Defensive wizard Steve Bush will return to play shortstop. The lanky senior was chosen by the Chicago Cubs in the spring baseball draft, but he elected to return to UK.

"Steve ended the season with only a .114 batting average, but he was still selected in the draft. That's a real tribute to his defensive skills," Horne said.

Sophomore Mike Moore will play second base. "Mike did a real good job for us at second base last year," Horne said. "He tailed off with the bat at the end of the year, but he still finished with a respectable average."

First base duties probably will be shared by sophomore LeRoy Robbins and freshman Randy Gipson.

Robbins batted .304 for the Wildcats last year while alternating his time between second base, first base and designated hitter. "His hitting is so strong he's got to be in the lineup somewhere," Horne said.

Another freshman, Chuck Long, also will be pressing the regulars for a starting job. A switch-hitter from Dayton, Ohio, Long can play second base, third base or shortstop.

Senior John Koenen heads an impressive catching crew. Koenen, who belted three home runs last season, was so effective behind the plate last year that Foley was forced to move from catcher to first base.

Pitching will be the Wildcats' biggest problem. Tim Graven, a senior lefthander, is the only returning starter. Graven, a draft selection of the Atlanta Braves a year ago, is expected to be UK's top hurler.

Other UK hurlers are junior righthander Billy Roebel, junior southpaw Steve Pewitt, sophomore lefthander John Crabtree and freshman righthanders Mark Clifford and Tim Terry.

The Wildcats last year compiled a 7-8 conference record and a 20-23 mark overall.
